Slick Business Deal Is Charged to Dawes

WHEELER EXPOSES HIDDEN SKELETON OF DAWES' BANK

Drags Alleged "Shady" Deal With Defunct Lorimer Bank Out to Gaze of Chicagoans.

DEPOSITORS MULCTED BY DODGE, IS CLAIM

Wheeler Calls Attention to Dawes' Support of Two Judges Who Saved Him Million in Case.

BY H. H. ROBERTSON.

Chicago, September 20.—Senator Burton K. Wheeler, independent vice presidential candidate, who has been swooping down on one city after another and verbally lambasting every prominent republican of local antecedents, brought his barnstorming tour to a torrid climax Saturday night when he launched a sensational attack on one of Chicago's most prominent citizens, Charles G. Dawes.

Charging that Dawes had "lent himself" to a fraudulent banking transaction which robbed 4,000 Chicago citizens of their savings," Wheeler cited court records from the famous Lorimer bank case to show that Dawes had conspired to furnish $1,250,000 for a few hours to a ruined bank so that bank examiners might be deceived into believing that the institution had assets which did not exist.

Depositors Wiped Out.

The savings of depositors were wiped out some months later, according to Wheeler, when the bank failed.

The case against Dawes was so strong, Wheeler declared, that when the receiver learned of the "trick that Dawes and Lorimer played," he sued to hold Dawes' bank responsible for the full $1,250,000 used in perpetrating the fraud and received a verdict for $1,487,854.16, inclusive of interest, to be paid over to him for the benefit of the creditors.

"Dawes naturally appealed," Wheeler continued, "and the case remained in the courts until July 12 of this year. The very day that Mr. Dawes was nominated by long distance telephone from the white house, for the office of vice president, the supreme court of Illinois handed down a final decision.

Reduces Huge Liability.

"Seven years of fighting back and forth through the courts had whittled down the amount Dawes' bank must pay to $100,000. He had succeeded in reducing his liability this much, but never for a moment did he escape responsibility for his astounding cheat upon the public."

The bank involved was the La Salle street National bank, which Wheeler said was "headed by William Lorimer, who had retired from the United States senate in somewhat the same manner that Newberry, of Michigan, retired two years ago." The bank led by Dawes was the Central Trust company, which he still operates.

"Examiners of the Chicago clearing house examined the affairs of the Lorimer bank when it began business in May, 1910, and as a result refused to grant it membership in the

13-Year-Old Boy Enters College At Cincinnati

Louisiana Youth, Weighing Only 66 Pounds, Dislikes To Study.

Cincinnati, Ohio, September 20.—Benjamin Frederick Dryden, 13, of Youngsville, La., was admitted to the University of Cincinnati today. He matriculated in the liberal arts college and is the youngest student ever to enroll in the history of the institution. He weighs 66 pounds.

Dryden dislikes study, but he said it is not difficult for him to learn. He is not athletically inclined, but will make his first appearance in the college gymnasium, where he will take a special course under the direction of the physical director.

Dryden will carry 12 hours of school work a week, as compared with the usual student requirement of 16 hours.

ROSABELLE YOUNG GIVEN BY COURT TO MOTHER'S CARE

New York, September 20.—Declaring that he was choosing the lesser of two evils, Supreme Court Justice Levy awarded the custody of 3-year-old Rosebelle Young, daughter of Courtland Young, the publisher, to Mrs. Young late Saturday.

This concluded Young's habeas corpus suit to obtain the custody of Rosabelle. Young accused his wife of drunkenness and immorality, and she accused him of the same thing. Both introduced witnesses to prove it.

Earlier in the week, the court intimated that it would place Rosabelle in a private school on the ground that neither parent was fit to have the child. The court said this after Rosabelle, who attended the court sessions, had taken a lipstick from a woman's bag and used it on her rosy lips.

ITALY PUTS SNAG IN SMOOTH ROAD OF LEAGUE PLANS

Detailed Program for Control Commissions Opposed Although Principle Is Agreed To.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Geneva, September 20.—Eleventh-hour Italian opposition to the detailed program set up for the league's control commissions, which under the Benes pact are for the purpose of investigating the conditions of both disputing states during arbitral proceeding in order to assure that they are not preparing for war, considerably slowed up the work of the two sub-committees today engaged in perfecting the draft pact of arbitration and security.

The French desired to thresh out the moot point before nightfall and were even willing to let the details of the formation of these control commissions go over until a later date, in view of the fact that the Italians were not opposed to the commissions in principle. However, Dr. Benes, taking into account that the juridical commission's sub-committee still had several minor points to iron out—such as the definition of an aggressor, what constitutes a menace of aggression and what would constitute passive resistance to an arbitral award—decided to await the completion of its work before ending that of his own committee.

Complete Aggression Text.

Consequently, M. Loucheur, of France, is working later tonight on the aggression text which he hopes to have ready for the sub-committee's decision tomorrow. In any case it is not considered that the Italian opposition will materially retard a definite accord on the Benes pact.

The general substance of the pact is already agreed on. There is a general accord for military, naval, economic and financial sanctions to be employed against an aggressor state, even though the discussion may continue as to ways and means of applying them.

Agree on Parley Date.

The thorny question of the militarized zones admitted universally in principle and on article 36 of the world court statutes, there now is an agreement all around to accept the court's obligatory arbitration for all juridical questions, save for Great Britain's exception regarding prize court rulings.

It is felt that if the arbitration and security projects now being elaborated are adopted by the assembly, there can be no more legal aggression arising from political conflicts. Everybody, furthermore, is agreed on the date, June 15, 1925, for the convocation of the disarmament conference, if enough ratifications are received by May 1. The number of ratifications needed is still undecided, but it is thought that probably 15 will suffice, with the inclusion of three or four of the great powers.

CLAIMS HUSBAND HAD HER DRAGGED AROUND BY MULE

New Brunswick, N. J., September 20.—Peter Heblen, 36, a farmer, was in jail today charged with assaulting his wife, Lillian. The latter declares that yesterday Heblen, after tying her hands behind her back, tied her to a mule and allowed it to drag her about their 20-acre farm.

When Heblen was arrested he charged that his wife tried to shoot him and their five children with a shotgun and that he tied her hands behind her back and himself dragged her about the farm.

DAWES THUNDERS WAY ACROSS IOWA, ILLINOIS ON TOUR

La Follette and Constitution of United States His Sole Text in Rear Platform Speeches.

"POLITICAL PEE-WITS" SUBJECT OF TIRADE

Discards Talk About Budget and Declares Constitution Is Greatest Issue of Campaign.

Chicago, September 20.—Charles G. Dawes, republican vice presidential nominee, thundered his way across Iowa and Illinois today with the La Follette independent candidacy ever the object of his invective.

Arriving here this evening to spend a four-day interim before again taking up the campaign with speeches in Minnesota, associates of the nominee remarked that "the general now has hit his stride," and Mr. Dawes himself recalled that he had predicted a month ago that it would be nearly October before he would "get warmed up."

Using a special train for the first time since he began his speaking campaign, Mr. Dawes appeared on the rear platform at every stop and as the train resumed its journey, there was left behind with those who heard the nominee a collection of Dawes-coined phrases such as "political pee wits" and "issue-straddling demagogues."

Calls Trip Satisfactory.

The reception given his rear platform speeches both today and while en route to Sioux Falls, S. D., where he made his principal speech of the trip last night, was declared by Mr. Dawes to have been satisfactory—so satisfactory, he said, that he plans to make as many rear-platform talks as possible on his trip to the far west, starting about October 5.

Principal speeches were made today at Dubuque, Iowa, and Galena, Ill., at both points Mr. Dawes devoting his attention, as he did in part last night at Sioux Falls and also as he did en route to South Dakota, to "the greatest issue of this campaign—the issue of the constitution of the United States."

"When I started out in this campaign," he told those who greeted him at Dubuque, "I thought I was going to talk a good deal about the budget. I had something to do with it and I

FOUR ARE INJURED IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Machine Goes Over Six-Foot Embankment in Order to Avoid Collision With Truck.

Four persons were badly bruised and cut when an automobile driven by E. L. Smith, of 683 Marietta, turned turtle over a six-foot embankment on West Fourteenth street Saturday afternoon.

Those injured in the accident, none of whom were taken to the hospital, were the driver, H. W. Thurman, 719 Marietta street; G. F. Murphy, 347 West Third street, and C. F. Howell, of 247 D'Alvigny street.

According to reports of occupants of the machine, made to Call Officers W. A. Good and W. F. Bullard, Smith was driving his car out Fourteenth street when a truck approached, and turned over to the left side of the street, forcing Smith to swerve over the embankment to avoid a collision. The driver of the truck, according to the police report, did not stop and the number of his car was not obtained.

Johnny Davis, 17-year-old messenger boy, of 725 Chestnut street, was injured Saturday afternoon when a bicycle he was riding was struck by an automobile driven by Earl Hicks, of Marietta, at Ivy and Houston streets.

According to the story of the accident told by Hicks to Motorcycle Officers W. Tom Milan and W. M. Weaver, he was driving in Ivy street when the boy on the bicycle suddenly appeared in the road, too close to the automobile to allow the driver to

The Truce!

SECRETARY WILBUR PLACES AIRCRAFT SECOND TO FLEET

Navy Chief Adheres to Principle Agreed by War College That Fleet Is Backbone of Defense.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Washington, September 20.—At the suggestion of President Coolidge, Secretary Wilbur today began a comprehensive study of the relative value of each arm of the national defense under the navy department with a view to recommending a coordinated program for development during the next several years. The work is to be taken up later by a board of experts, which probably will include representatives of the other services as well as key civilian industries.

The new study of the navy was determined upon at a white house conference which lasted about an hour. Mr. Wilbur at its conclusion said he had rendered a report on his five weeks' inspection of the fleet and naval shore stations on the west coast and of the political situation there as he had observed it.

Wilbur Sticks By Fleet.

The secretary declared his speeches during the period had not been discussed at the conference, and the only explanation in for the president's request that he return to the capital was that a new valuation of air, submarine and surface craft of the navy was necessary with a view to adjusting the sums to be sought for each from the budget.

Being certain that this was the matter in view, Mr. Wilbur said, he had instructed Walter R. Gherardi, his aide, who is recognized as an expert upon aviation, to prepare a memorandum during the return trip setting forth the accepted view of the service. This was presented to President Coolidge today as a basis for the study. It drew the conclusions that the fleet should be maintained at top efficiency, with the strength allotted in accordance with the limitation of arms treaty while every effort was made to develop and organize the air forces as a concrete auxiliary.

Ships Backbone of Defense.

In explanation of his own opinion, the secretary referred to a recent speech in which he declared "the battleship still is the backbone of national defense." This was the view expressed two years ago by the joint army and navy board headed by Gen-

Wales Packs Up His Show

:: H. R. H. BETTER SHOWMAN THAN BARNUM ::

To Hike Away to Canada

BY LYLE C. WILSON.

New York, September 20.—The only person who ever has been able to crowd all the glamorous entertainment of a three-ring circus into the inevitably limited ambition of a one-man show is about to roll up his scenery, and with his stage hands and curtain pullers hike away to Canada, there to waste his Broadway ability on rugged cow persons and the like.

The one-man trouper who combines all the thrills and possibilities that Barnum used to advertise, whether he had them or not, is no less a one than the Prince of Wales, and since he descended on Long Island about three weeks ago, he has demonstrated his capacity as a showman in fields as divergent and varied as roughriding and prestidigitation.

As a heart-breaker, Wales has set a pace that all the matinee idols in town couldn't equal if they pooled their manly beauty. On the subway, in a New York high school, in the elevator that shot him to the top of the Woolworth building, among the social leaders and near leaders of Long Island—everywhere H. R. H. has gone among American girls he has been received with gasps of admiration and smiles that begged for just a wink of recognition.

H. R. H. has gifts other than those of the heart. This thumping of a

FLIERS COMPLETE HOP OF 625 MILES

Reach El Paso, Texas, From Dallas After Stop of Over Hour To Replenish Oil.

El Paso, Texas, September 20.—Completing the longest hop in their world flight while over American soil, the three round-the-world fliers landed here at 7:40 o'clock central standard time, Saturday night.

The airmen flew 625 miles from Dallas and were greeted here by a crowd of 10,000 persons.

The flight began at Love field, Dallas, at 9:38 a. m., and carried them across poorly-populated sections of western Texas. Shortly after noon faulty oiling developed in Lieutenant Leigh Wade's engine and the trio were forced to land at Sweetwater, 230 miles west of Dallas.

Oil was changed in Wade's engine and all the fuel tanks were replenished, causing a delay of 70 minutes, before the trio sped on again in their giant Douglas cruisers, following the tracks of the Texas and Pacific railroad.

If the weather permits, the fliers will take off for Tucson, Ariz., at about 10 o'clock Sunday morning.

MOTHER IS SLAIN, 3 BABES INJURED BY NEGRO AXMAN

Columbia, S. C., September 20.—Mrs Lina Wessinger, 25-year-old woman of the New Brookland section near Columbia, is dead and her three children, aged 4, 2 and 1 respectively, are seriously perhaps fatally injured, as the result of an attack upon them early tonight by an unidentified negro armed with an axe.

Error in Copying Bill May Block Fund for Babies

$5,000 Was Voted by Legislature To Match Sum From Government.

Owing to an error in copying a bill passed by the last legislature, there is a possibility that an appropriation of $5,000, to the state health department, may not be paid. The appropriation was made to match a similar federal fund, under provision of the Sheppard-Towner act of congress, better known as the "Better Babies" bill. The object of the bill is to educate expectant mothers in childbirth and child care, and reduce the rate of infant mortality.

The bill as passed provided that the $5,000 appropriation is to be made out of 1924 funds, according to the caption, but in the body of the bill the provision says that the money is to be paid out of 1925 funds. Should it be held that the money cannot be paid until 1925, it is probable that the bill would be void, inasmuch as another legislature will convene before 1925 money is available, and it is not likely that it would accept a hangover appropriation of this character without reconsidering it.

The original bill called for a sum in excess of $23,000, but it was slashed by the house appropriations committee to $5,000. It was undoubtedly the intention of the legislature to appropriate the money this year, inasmuch as the bill was one of a group considered together in order to decide what were the most pressing calls for the limited amount of 1924 funds unappropriated.

However, it now appears probable that state officials will have to abide by the provisions in the body of the bill, as transcribed and signed by the governor, which will delay payment of the appropriation until 1925.

DAVIS ENDS DRIVE UPON MIDDLE WEST IN FOUR SPEECHES

Democratic Nominee Renews Personal Assaults Upon Republican Corruption and Privilege.

TRIBUTE TO WILSON GETS BIG APPLAUSE

While Not Mentioning Klan Directly, Declares Principles of Republic Must Not Be Abridged.

Fort Wayne, Ind., September 20.—John W. Davis, the democratic presidential nominee, wound up a three weeks' drive through the west tonight with an address here after a swing across northern Indiana.

During the day Mr. Davis faced four audiences, and before them he renewed his assaults on the republican administration on charges of corruption and privilege and pledged himself and his party, if successful in November, to give the country a government of honesty, justice and courage and one that would grant equal rights to all men.

Before Mr. Davis began his last address before a large crowd in the public square here tonight, he heard Dr. Carlton B. McCulloch, democratic nominee for governor, denounce the Ku Klux Klan by name as he had done in his Seagirt speech last month.

Hits Klan Indirectly.

Through Mr. Davis did not mention the klan tonight, he told his audience that there could be no abridgement of the principles upon which the American government is founded—freedom of religious worship, freedom of speech, freedom of the press and freedom of assembly.

Reviewing the record of the last democratic administration, Mr. Davis was applauded when he paid high tribute to the memory of Woodrow Wilson and praised his foreign policy.

"President Wilson never looked upon the Treaty of Versailles as a finished document," he said. "He realized the animosities and revenge that lay behind the writing of that document. But he knew that the hatred and malice could be modified through conference and conciliation in the years to come. It was only a starting point for him.

Would Have Brought Peace.

"And I declare to you tonight that if his principles of peace had been followed and had the United States participated in the councils of Europe, these last five years of ruin, starvation, misery and disaster, the stifling of Germany and the crushing of Europe's commerce would have been avoided. There would have been peace, healing and fair dealing among men."

After reviewing the achievements of the democratic party under Wilson, Mr. Davis said: "We are pointing in this campaign, without malice, without bitterness, and I hope without partisanship, to the record that has been made by those in charge of the

GEORGIA WOMAN KILLED IN CRASH

Husband and Sister-in-Law Are Hurt as Auto Overturns in North Carolina.

Concord, N. C., September 20.—Mrs. Walter D. Jones, of Savannah, Ga., was killed near here this afternoon when an automobile in which she was proceeding to Richmond with her husband, sister-in-law and daughter, skidded and overturned.

Mr. Jones, who is a druggist of Savannah, escaped with cuts and bruises. Miss Jones, his sister, suffered a broken arm, while his daughter, Miss Clyde Jones, escaped injury.

The accident occurred when Jones attempted to pass another car, it was stated. The machine skidded against a bank and overturned, being completely wrecked. Mrs. Jones died before medical assistance could be rendered. The body, accompanied by relatives, left here tonight for Savannah.

HARRY REEVES JAILED ON NARCOTIC CHARGE

Two Additional Arrests Are Made in Case—F. M. Brown, Shooting Victim, Taken to Grady.

F. M. Brown, formerly of Bowman, Ga., is believed to be in a dying condition at Grady hospital, as a result of being shot down Saturday afternoon by a stray bullet fired from a car in which C. A. Whittington, federal narcotic inspector, was attempting to arrest Harry Reeves, of 137 Spring street, alleged dope peddler. Brown is now employed by the Standard Oil company.

Reeves is being held on a charge of violating the Harrison narcotic act, while Jessie Blanton, 25, of 137 Spring street, and B. C. Lundergreen, 23, of 414 Spring street, are being held on a charge of suspicion in connection with the affair.

W. A. Dodge, of 91 Coolidge avenue, who was standing by the police box at Marietta and Forsyth street, just south of the city hall, reported that his trousers were pierced by the flying bullet, but he was not even scratched.

Brown Taken to Grady.

Brown was struck in the right kidney. He was taken to Grady hospital, where doctors said that he had only a fighting chance for life.

Conflicting stories were told as to who fired the revolver shot which struck Brown, an innocent bystander. Mr. Whittington claims that the pistol was in the hands of J. W. Bean, a sailor, who, he says, was aiding in the arrest of Reeves, and was in the car at the time. Reeves, on the other hand, claims that the gun was in the hands of Officer Whittington when it was discharged.

Shooting at City Hall.

The shooting occurred Saturday afternoon on the corner of Marietta and Forsyth streets. Brown, according to witnesses, was standing in front of the city hall. According to Federal Officer Whittington's story, when the car in which he, Reeves and Bean were riding, passed the city hall, he (Whittington) pulled a pistol on Reeves and attempted to arrest him on a charge of selling narcotics. Reeves grabbed his arm, Whittington says, and the pistol was hurled to the seat of the car. The narcotic officer and Reeves engaged in a struggle, and Bean, Whittington claims, picked up the gun which was accidentally discharged when it was struck by the federal officer's arm. This version of the story was corroborated by Bean.

Reeves, on the other hand, says that the gun was discharged by Whittington while the two were struggling.

Reeves was arrested by Officer Whittington, carried to the narcotic headquarters in the federal building, and held on a charge of violating the Harrison narcotic act.

According to Whittington's statement, the firing of the shot which went amiss and struck Brown, a disinterested bystander, was a result of a plan to arrest Reeves on a charge of peddling dope. Friday the officer arranged, with Bean, who says his home is in Illinois, and that he is on a leave of absence from the navy, to have Reeves deliver him $50 worth of narcotics, amounting to about 240 grains.

Wittington Joins Party.

Officer Wittington, donned in a sailor's uniform, was picked up by Reeves and Bean on Spring street, and it was agreed that Reeves should drive him to the terminal station, transferring the dope to the officer while they were en route to the station. Reeves, according to Wittington, slowed down the car in front of the city hall, and gave him the dope. The federal officer drew his gun at this point and attempted to arrest Reeves. Here the subsequent struggle and shooting occurred.

Brown came to Atlanta a week ago from Bowman, Ga., where his wife and 2-year-old daughter are living with his father. He is employed by the Standard Oil company as a pump mechanic, and came here to fill a position. He worked for the company for several years in Athens and Elberton.

He told police at Grady hospital that he was planning to bring his wife and daughter to Atlanta within a few days. At present he has no permanent address here, police reported.

Father in Bowman.

Bowman, Ga., September 20.—(Special.)—F. M. Brown, 24, of Bowman, reported tonight to be dying at Grady hospital, Atlanta, from a bullet wound, is the son of W. W. Brown, garage owner and planter of Bowman. The victim's father is preparing to go to his son at Atlanta.

The wounded man has been in the employ of the Standard Oil company for several years. He was manager for the company here and was transferred to Athens. He was later moved to the Atlanta office.

He has a sister, Miss Mary Brown, a student at Georgia State College for Women, at Milledgeville, and four brothers, W. W., Jr., Clyde, Easton and Jack Brown.

TWO SHOTS FIRED BY G. O. P. LEADERS

Chicago, September 20.—A double attack on the opposition was made today by republican national campaign managers. National Chairman William M. Butler asserted that a recent speech by Robert M. La Follette, Jr., on the success of the Canadian national railways contained many misleading statements. Congressman Will R. Wood, of Indiana, chairman of the republican congressional committee, flayed the tariff stand of John W. Davis as set forth in the latter's speech at Gary, Ind., yesterday.

In his statement Chairman Butler quoted the younger La Follette as saying:

"Canada has found a cure. Between 1921 and 1924 she reduced agricultural freight rates to pre-war levels. And yet, paying substantially the same wage scales to members of the same railway unions, the Canadian national railways, owned by the Canadian government, has changed a deficit of $37,000,000 in 1921, when the system was taken over under Sir Henry Thornton's management, to a surplus of more than $20,000,000 in 1923."

Cites Misstatements.

The statement declares that "there are half a dozen misstatements in this single paragraph. In 1921 the deficit of the Canadian national railways . . . was $56,989,000 instead of $37,000,000. Sir Henry Thornton did not assume management until October of 1922. In 1923 the total deficit, as shown by Sir Henry's annual report to the Canadian government, was $51,697,000."

"In no year," the statement declared, "since the Canadian government commenced operation of the railroads have they had a surplus. The deficit has been carried by taxes upon the people. It is true they did reduce rates further on agricultural produce but if the deficits of the Canadian national system were spread over their traffic their rates are higher than the American rates today. In other words, the taxpayers of Canada are paying for the reduction of Canadian rates."

Hits Davis' Tariff Plank.

Representative Wood asserted that the tariff that Mr. Davis said that he favored was much the same as that under the Underwood bill. Speaking of the results apparent in 1914 of that bill, he said:

"These great steel mills were practically idle. There were thousands of steel workers out of employment; soup houses were opened in Gary to feed them. The Underwood tariff bill, which is the same character bill that Mr. Davis is now advocating, had been in operation for 18 months and through its operation the steel mills of the country saw the demands for their output go glimmering and the steel workers saw their employment go the same route. What happened then will happen again. The fact is, if the character of the tariff advocated by Mr. Davis had been in force in the United States for the last 60 years, there would not be a steel mill in operation in the United States today."

Mrs. Weilhart has been proclaimed the champion speller of Cincinnati. Mrs. Weilhart, who is the mother of five children, has spelled 15,000 words in various contests without making an error.

MAKES FAT PEOPLE SLIM

New York Physician Perfects Harmless Method of Reducing Weight

The loss of as much as a pound of excess fat a day with no harmful results is the record made by many patients of Dr. R. Newman, a licensed practicing physician of 286 Fifth avenue, New York, who announces that he has perfected a treatment which has quickly rid fat people of excess weight. What is more remarkable is the Doctor's statement that he has successfully treated thousands of patients for fat reduction without change of diet or unnecessary exercise. It is also said that fat people who suffer from chronic rheumatism, gout, asthma and high blood pressure obtain great relief from the reduction of their superfluous flesh. Realizing that this sounds almost too good to be true, the Doctor has offered to send without charge to anyone who will write him, a free trial treatment to prove his claims, as well as his "Pay-when-reduced" plan. If you want to rid yourself of superfluous fat, write him today, addressing Dr. R. Newman, 286 Fifth avenue, New York City, Dept. R.—(adv.)

GOES FISHING DAILY, DESPITE 118 YEARS

Francis Eton, who resides down in Lumpkin county, may be 118 years old, but his age has not attained a sufficiently high figure yet to prevent his walking three miles almost daily to do battle with members of the finny tribe that splash about in Lumpkin county creeks.

He can remember distinctly the last five wars in which the United States engaged, but better still, he can remember his many struggles with perch and sunfish.

Mr. Eton was born in Hart county, Ga., in 1806, and has resided in this state all his life. He has lived in Lumpkin county for the past 25 years, and despite his 118 years, can recount many interesting and historical instances, records of which have accumulated much dust in the archives and which have long since passed from the minds of even "the oldest inhabitants."

All his life, Mr. Eton has been a farmer, and his age does not deter him even now from occasionally "doing his stuff" with the rake and hoe.

He retains all of his faculties, including a keen memory, and exceptionally good vision. He has been married twice, and has five living children. While he has not smoked for many years, an occasional chew of tobacco apparently does him no harm.

Mr. Eton was born six years before the war of 1812. He was too old for the Spanish-American and World wars, but he fought throughout the civil war, and during one campaign was wounded on the hand.

While he threatens to forsake his favorite sport, fishing, through the winter months, Mr. Eton promises to be back on the firing line next summer, and plans to spend many hours along the shady brook a few miles from his home.

DAVIS CONFIDENT OF WOMEN'S VOTE

Suffern, N. Y., September 20.—Because taxation and protective tariffs are questions "of morality, of common honesty," John W. Davis is confident that the democratic party can count on the support of women voters, he set forth in a letter Senator Copeland read today at an assemblage of Rockland county women on the lawn of the Copeland country place.

Asserting that in his western tour he had discovered that democrats did not have to argue with women on the issues of honesty in government or foreign policy, Mr. Davis addressed himself to "another issue, economy, taxes and tariff," particularly from the standpoint of the housewife. He wrote, in part:

"The difference between the democratic and republican theory of direct taxation was well illustrated in the contrast between the Mellon proposal and the present Garner bill, which was finally passed by the democrats of congress, aided by some progressive republicans.

"The democratic party believes in tariff for revenue purposes. It is one way to raise money for the expenses of the government. The Fordney-McCumber tariff, enacted by the republican party, raises some revenue, but principally raises the cost of living.

"The duties on men's clothes were put up 76 per cent above the 1914 level, on women's goods, trebled; on cotton hosiery increased 75 per cent; on household furniture, quadrupled.

"Republicans do not claim that these schedules were written to raise revenue for the government, but to protect industries. The schedule on aluminum ware, it was said, has been asked 'by and for a monopoly which earned more than $10,000,000 net in 1920 on a capitalization of less than $19,000,000.' The worst thing about the Fordney-McCumber tariff is its immorality. Once the government accepts the theory of favoring some at the expense of all it renders corruption inevitable. Special favors are always paid for."

WEST VIRGINIA GAINS REPORTED TO COOLIDGE

Washington, September 20.—Reports of republican gains in West Virginia were presented to President Coolidge today by party leaders of that state. An intensive campaign to win the home state of John W. Davis, democratic candidate, for Mr. Coolidge was described to him by V. L. Highland and John T. Graham, republican national committeeman and state chairman of West Virginia.

Only a few callers were on the president's engagement list today, and he spent some time conferring with government officials and in finishing the address he will deliver here tomorrow before delegates to the Holy Name convention.

Mr. Coolidge will speak again next Wednesday before a convention of retail druggists here, and the next day in Philadelphia. It also was announced today he would speak as usual at the opening here of the national convention of the American Red Cross on October 6.

MRS. MAMIE SWIFT DIES AT HOSPITAL

Mrs. Mamie L. Swift, 58, who resided at the Piedmont hotel, died Saturday night at a private hospital. Funeral services will be held at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon from the chapel of H. M. Patterson, funeral directors in charge. She had no survivors.

COOLIDGE CHOSEN AS PARTY EMBLEM

Worcester, Mass., September 20.—The Massachusetts state republican convention today took Calvin Coolidge, "his principles, his policies and his conduct in office" for their platform, adding among a few brief planks one that touched the klan issue but did not mention it by name. The platform contained 499 words. The brief plank touching on the klan said:

"We deplore any organized effort to create racial or religious prejudice."

A plank saying "there should be no distinction of racial connections or religious convictions in the selection of persons for public offices" prefaced this.

The platform pledged the state ticket, headed by Lieutenant Governor Alvan T. Fuller, to "continue the policy of economy, sound financial and humanitarian progress," avoided specific mention of prohibition with the statement that the party stands for "enforcement of all laws;" supported the policy of national preparedness and approved the immigration law except for discriminatory provisions.

President Coolidge sent to the convention a telegram setting forth "economy, stability and common sense in government" as issues of the national campaign, adding that he knew Massachusetts could be depended on, and the expression, "I believe we can depend upon the nation."

Chairman Frank M. Foss, of the republican state committee, predicted a 400,000 plurality for Coolidge in his home state.

Speaker Frederick H. Gillett, of the national house of representatives, speaking as the party nominee to succeed Senator David I. Walsh, democrat, added to his prepared remarks an attack on those who he said were trying to make the public believe that the republican party was corrupt and that the president himself was involved. "We must admit with shame," he said, "that a few republicans, high in office, have apparently violated their trust. This was not symptomatic, however, only an accident.

"One character stands out as untainted, and no one can believe the president was touched by corruption. His character is as strong as his wisdom."

NEGRO IS LYNCHED IN MISSISSIPPI

Clarksdale, Miss., September 20.—Herbert Taylor, negro, a trusty convict at Camp B, of the Parchman state convict farm, was lynched by a mob near Lambert, Miss., last night for an alleged attack upon the small daughter of a convict guard, it was learned here tonight.

According to the announcement made by local authorities the negro was taken from Sheriff McArthur, of Quitman county, marched into the woods and shot to death.

The alleged victim of the negro's attack is only four years old. Her father is a guard at Camp B, where Taylor was serving a sentence. Taylor was a "trusty," and was accorded many liberties and privileges about the camp.

Local authorities said the attack occurred yesterday. Sheriff McArthur, aided by deputies, arrested Taylor and decided to bring him to Clarksdale for safekeeping.

As the party neared Marks, Miss., the sheriff reported, they encountered a mob which had blocked the road. Turning quickly, the sheriff and his party returned to Lambert and took another road for Clarksdale, only to discover that their highway also was guarded by armed men. The party then started for Jonestown, hoping to elude the mob, but before they reached that place they were overtaken by a number of men who fired upon the sheriff's car.

The sheriff stopped his automobile and the mob closed in on the little party. Forcing the negro from the sheriff's machine, the mob marched him into the woods a short distance from the road, where his body was riddled with bullets.

Alleged Narcotic Law Violator To Be Tried In Federal Court Here

Walter Blackburn, 49, of 357 Formwalt street, who was arrested Saturday by Detectives E. M. Cason and W. D. McGee, attached to the narcotic squad, and Federal Agent Fouche, while selling narcotics, according to officers, will be given a preliminary hearing before the United States commissioner Monday morning on a charge of violation of the Harrison narcotic act.

LOST VIGOR RESTORED IN 24 HOURS

"Glands Awakened in One Day" Is the Amazing Statement of a 76-Year-Old Veteran.

Lost vigor, deadened glands and nerves, and that weak, worn-out, depressed and half-alive feeling need not be dreaded any longer since the discovery of a well-known chemist. Now it is possible for those who feel "prematurely old" to become "rejuvenated" and regain the "vital force of youth," often in a day's time, with Mando Formula, is the amazing statement of one who has taken the treatment. This famous discovery is bringing "renewed youth" and "strength" to thousands where everything else had failed.

"I want to say that my 'lost vigor' was restored and 'glands renewed' in twenty-four hours," says D. B. Peake of Kansas City, Mo. "Today I am 76, but I don't feel a day over 40. Before I started taking the treatment I felt I was an old, 'worn-out' man; but now I am enjoying a remarkable 'gland restoration' and am convinced my 'rejuvenation' is complete and permanent. May God's blessing rest on the discoverer of such a boon to humanity."

This wonderful formula, prepared by one of the largest laboratories in the world and generally known as Mando, is easily used at home and seems to work like magic in its rapidity on people of all ages and sexes.

No matter how bad your condition, no matter what your age or occupation, no matter what you have tried, if you are lacking in "vigor" and the "vital force of youth" we are so confident Mando Formula will restore you that we offer to send a large $3.50 bottle for only $1.95 on 10 days free trial. If the results are not satisfactory and you are not more than pleased in every way, it costs you nothing.

Send no money—just your name and address to F. L. Carlin, 646 Baltimore Bldg., Kansas City, Mo., and the treatment will be mailed at once. Use it according to the simple directions. If at the end of 10 days you are not showing "wonderful improvement" and "rejuvenation," just send it back and your money will be refunded without question. This offer is fully guaranteed, so write today and give this "remarkable formula" a trial.—(adv.)

Pleasant A. Stovall To Attend Christening Of English Grandson

Savannah, Ga., September 20.—(Special.)—To travel over 3,000 miles to be present at the christening of his now few-days-old grandson, Pleasant A. Stovall, minister to Switzerland for the war period, and since his college days a personal friend of the late President Woodrow Wilson, left yesterday for New York to go to England. Mrs. Stovall has been spending the summer with her daughter, Mrs. Pleasant Cragie. Miss Stovall married a young British officer. Mr. and Mrs. Stovall will return to Savannah in November.

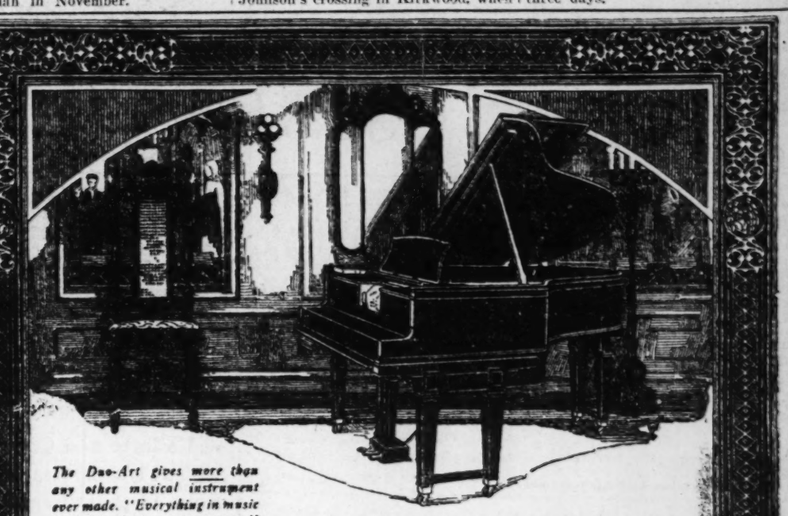

$18,000 VERDICT GIVEN FOR DEATH OF GIRL BY TRAIN

A verdict against the Atlantic Coast Line and L. & N. railroads, lessees of the property of the Georgia Railroad and Banking company, awarding $18,000 to Mrs. G. H. Puckett, of Grantville, Ga., mother of 20-year-old Lucretia Puckett, who was killed last Christmas night, when a train hit the automobile in which she was riding, was returned Saturday night in Decatur city court.

The accident, in which Miss Puckett and Mrs. Leavell were killed, and two others were injured, occurred at Johnson's crossing in Kirkwood, when an inbound train from Augusta crashed into the machine in which they were riding. The case has lasted for three days.

MAJOR M'GREGOR REPORTED SINKING

Warrenton, Ga., September 20.—Major C. E. McGregor, pension commissioner of Georgia, is believed to be slowly sinking tonight. Doctors said, however, that he rallied a little late today and might live for several days.

Your 12,000 meals in the last 10 years

—what have they done to your teeth and your gums?

THE TROUBLE you have with your teeth and your gums can be traced directly to the food you eat.

Three times a day, thirty days a month, all year round, you eat the soft food of civilization—rich, creamy and over-refined.

People who eat rough, coarse food never in their lives suffer from pyorrhea. Coarse food is good for gums and teeth. It keeps them in condition, for it stimulates blood circulation in the gums.

How soft food weakens gums and ruins teeth

But the trouble with present-day food and with ordinary brushing is one and the same. Neither stirs up the gums to healthy circulation. That's why you need Ipana, a tooth paste which stimulates the gums as well as cleans the teeth.

Use Ipana Tooth Paste—good for tender gums

UNDER YEARS of soft food and inadequate cleaning, gums are growing soft and tender. Troubles whose source is in the gingiva (gum structure) are on the rise. "Pink toothbrush" is the first symptom, the warning, of graver troubles to come.

It is because of the increasing prevalence of troubles from the gums that thousands of dentists have adopted Ipana Tooth Paste in their practice and prescribe it to their patients.

Many dentists, in stubborn cases of bleeding gums, direct a gum massage with Ipana after the regular cleaning with Ipana and the brush.

Does your toothbrush "show pink"?

Because of the presence of ziratol, a valuable antiseptic and hemostatic, Ipana has the power to aid in the healing of soft and bleeding gums. Indeed, Ipana has become known as the great enemy of the "pink toothbrush," and the friend of healthy gums and teeth.

Try a tube of Ipana today

If your gums have a tendency to be soft or to bleed, go to the drug store today and buy your first tube of Ipana. Before you have finished using it, you cannot fail to note the improvement. And you will be delighted with its fine, grit-free consistency, its delicious flavor and its clean taste.

South's Annual Fair Classic Expected to Set New Record

A general overhauling program is the order of the day at Lakewood Park in preparation for the annual Southeastern fair.

Renovation of buildings, booths and stands, improvements on grounds and other activities are employing a big force of workers.

Saturday a number of advance representatives of various big attractions billed for fair week arrived and will begin arranging space assignments Monday morning. Erection of tents to care for 300 boys who will attend the fair school will get under way early this week and an elaborate decorative scheme is being followed out by fair officials.

Indications are that the 1924 fair will be the greatest in the history of the association, according to R. M. Striplin, secretary. More exhibits, a greater variety of attractions, the greatest livestock show in the United States, and a round of special show features never before witnessed in the south—these are some of the things which will be open to view with the swinging open of the gates to the fair grounds on Saturday morning, October 4.

An amusement program which includes harness and auto racing, a passing revue, which will feature scores of Georgia's prettiest girls, auto polo and a pyrotechnic display which will eclipse anything of its kind ever attempted in the south, are other features which are expected to make the fair a record-breaking event. The famous Red Hussar band and Rubin and Cherry carnival shows will occupy an important role in fair entertainment.

Special rates will be in effect on all railroads entering the city, and reports from south Georgia, north Florida, South Carolina and Alabama indicate that there is considerable interest this year in the south's annual fair classic, according to Mr. Striplin.

A dog show, a stupendous flower show and many other entirely new and untried fair features will be inaugurated this year, together with the greatest agricultural display ever attempted by local officials.

"PLAYING SOLDIER" IS FATAL TO GIRL SHOT BY SISTER

"Playing soldier" with their father's gun, while he was away from his home at 67 Chestnut street, proved fatal to Lorene Pounds, 5-year-old negro girl, who died Saturday night from a bullet wound inflicted in her head by her 6-year-old sister, Annie May.

Officer H. H. King, who investigated the case, was told that the little negro girls had removed the revolver from the bureau drawer, and stuffed the barrel with paper. Believing that it was loaded with nothing except the paper, Annie May fired at her younger sister, the bullet taking deadly effect. When Officer King arrived at the scene, he found Lorene lying dead on the steps, while her sister, unconscious of the fatal deed she had done, was sitting in the house, rocking the baby of the family to sleep.

Inez Blackchief, a Seneca Indian girl, has been awarded a scholarship by the Lewis H. Morgan chapter, State Archeological society of the University of Rochester. This is the first time this honor has ever been awarded to an Indian.

CANDIDATE FOR

CHIEF OF CONSTRUCTION

To the Citizens of Atlanta:

For thirty-three years I have resided in Atlanta and during that period of time I have been actively engaged in the engineering profession. I have served Fulton County as County Surveyor for eighteen years, and for a period of six years I was associated with the engineering and construction department of the City of Atlanta. My experience has been broad and varied in all kinds of construction work, including subdivision development, the laying out of streets, sewer construction, bridges, sidewalks, street repairing, and all kinds of engineering necessary for civic improvements.

In offering myself for the office of Chief of Construction I feel confident that my experience and qualifications entitle me to your confidence and vote.

If elected, I am not and will not be under any obligations to any outside interest whatsoever.

If elected, I promise every citizen of Atlanta, rich or poor, a prompt and courteous hearing, and all matters brought to my attention pertaining to the office of the Chief of Construction will receive prompt, thorough and courteous consideration.

I promise taxpayers of Atlanta that I will so conduct the affairs of the office of the Chief of Construction that the finger of suspicion will never be pointed toward me for graft, inefficiency or disqualification.

Your vote and influence will be sincerely appreciated. C. S. ROBERT.

Intelligence Tests Eliminate "Dumbbells" From Students Admitted to Agnes Scott

ONE APPLICANT DECLARED CHARLES DARWIN WAS "COMIC"

These three young women are standing the Thurstone intelligence test, which is now required of every student admitted to Agnes Scott college. Professor S. G. Stukes, who was largely responsible for introduction of the system at the school, is seen at right. Photograph by Reeves studio.

BY LOY WARWICK, JR.

The sweet young thing who thinks Rex Beach is a summer resort has no business in college.

But many students are being graduated from southern high schools each year who have ideas just that dumb—and dumber.

That's what S. G. Stukes, professor of psychology at Agnes Scott college, says. Professor Stukes and Dr. J. R. McCain, president of the institution, long ago realized that it was a waste of time, patience and groceries to admit girls who are mentally incapable of carrying on the required work.

In order to weed out this sort of girl, the "Thurstone intelligence test" has been instituted at Agnes Scott. It is something on the order of the well-known "nut" board of A. E. F. fame, and by a series of questions and problems the victim's general intelligence—or, just as often, lack of intelligence—is measured.

All Are Tested.

If she, as the case is at Agnes Scott, strikes a low average, she is forthwith denied admission to the school. If she displays sure signs of a functioning brain under her shingle bob, she is admitted. Every freshman at Agnes Scott this year has checked her intelligence quotient at the registrar's office.

The plan is an innovation in the south, albeit it has been used extensively and for some time in schools and universities of other sections. It was adopted at Agnes Scott this year primarily as a protection to the school.

Each term about four times as many applications for admission are made as the school can accommodate. In the past, applicants have been accepted on a kind of "first come, first served" plan. As a result, a large number of freshmen "flunked out" before many months were spent—thus an equal number of capable girls were cheated of entrance, so to speak.

Now Dr. McCain and other members of the faculty want students at Agnes Scott who do something besides make fudge and wear out the campus seats. So Agnes Scott is the only school in the south where a freshman is strictly required to take the "nut" test. She must either pass it or pass on.

This year the school has a freshman class of 165. Everyone is fully capable of passing her studies. The rest of the student body has proven itself by last year's performance, and Professor Stukes is enthusiastic over the situation. He expects no failures at the institution this year.

The test is not exacting, but, in college parlance, it is no "crip." It is built on subjects with which every high school graduate should be acquainted. Instances cited as actualities are as follows:

An applicant was simply asked from what source is rubber obtained. She answered, even more simply, that it came from the hide of an animal. She didn't get in Agnes Scott.

Another was asked who Charles Darwin was. She readily described him as a "comic artist." She, too, lost out.

The only argument ever flung at the intelligence test system was that students became nervous because they knew they only have 30 minutes in which to stand it. Professor Stukes says that a girl who gets nervous over one test will get nervous over another—so that's that.

Atlanta Masons Aid Degree Administration In Marietta Wednesday

Marietta, Ga., September 20.—(Special.)—Marietta council, No. 71, Royal and Select Masters, will hold an assembly Wednesday afternoon, beginning at 6 o'clock.

This meeting has been arranged for the benefit of all of the councils in this section. Candidates for the degress will be accepted from other councils and will present themselves promptly at 5 o'clock in the afternoon at the Masonic temple in Marietta, officials said today.

All Royal Arch Masons are eligible for the degrees and may petition the council for the degrees at the same time.

A team has been selected from Atlanta councils to assist in the work. Several grand officers of the state will be present.

The Marietta council is preparing for a large class.

Irving Cobb has written a motion picture for Pathe entitled "One Third Off." That's a great idea from Cobb's point of view.

SENATE DOCUMENT WILL PERPETUATE BIG TRADE MEET

All events and records of the Pan-American Commercial congress, to open here Wednesday, October 1, will be perpetuated in documentary form by the United States senate. Reports of the trade sessions will be duly transmitted, published in pamphlet form by the government printing establishment, and 40,000 copies sent to all parts of the country under frank.

The pamphlets will be similar to reports of last year's annual convention of the Southern Commercial congress, held at Richmond, which are incorporated in senate document 125 of the first session of the 68th congress. The consolidated reports were issued recently by the government.

Complete reports of the Virginia meeting were presented to the senate by Senator Duncan U. Fletcher, of Florida, who served as president of the Southern Commercial congress for seven years following his election at the convention held in Atlanta in 1911.

All proceedings of that meeting, with complete addresses, manuscripts, reports, proclamations of the governor of Virginia and other executives, complete lists of committees, and the entire scheme of organization, are contained in the document, and the Atlanta convention will be handled in the same manner.

PARTIES IN TENNESSEE PLAN MONSTER RALLIES

Knoxville, Tenn., September 20.—Plans were completed here today, with the holding of a mass meeting of East Tennessee democrats, for two of the greatest political rallies in the history of the section, which are to be staged respectively on September 24 for the democratic party and September 25 for the republican party, during the annual fall agricultural and livestock exposition.

Leaders of the two parties have been advised that former Governor Edwin P. Morrow of Kentucky, now member of the United States railway labor board, and Senator J. Thomas Heflin of Alabama, will come to Knoxville to deliver addresses for the occasion representing their respective parties and in behalf of the Coolidge-Dawes and Davis-Bryan tickets, as well as state tickets for the 1924 campaign.

Arrangements contemplate parades through the city on each day, the democratic hosts to be reviewed on Wednesday by Governor Austin Peay, Senator Heflin and other party leaders, while Governor Morrow and state leaders will review the republican cavalcade on Thursday.

drum and ruffling of the allied traps, in place of the regular musicians that were on hand for that duty, marked the heir to the British throne as a syncopator with a southern negro's understanding of jazzy rhythm. The prince also can dance and did so much of it that he felt constrained before his stay on Long Island came to a close to make a run into New York and make a round that included the Musuem of Natural History and a sailor's mission or two just in order to give the newspapers something to print other than news of his all-night parties.

Over in London they don't keep such accurate track of the goings and comings of the royal play boy, and if the court circular says H. R. H. attended the banquet of the Pilgrim society and thereafter returned to St. James' palace and went to bed that settles it and Wales went to bed whether he did or not. No English pressman would think of hanging around the gloomy front of the old brick palace to check up on Edward. It simply isn't done.

Sunday, H. R. H., with two or three secretaries and enough Scotland Yard inspectors to keep the bomba off, will ferry across Long Island sound and pile into a special train for Canada. Already Wales is talking about a return trip to the United States, which he found not so bad, despite prohibition.

PRINCE WILL RECEIVE FAREWELL CALLS TODAY.

Syosset, N. Y., September 20.—The Prince of Wales will spend tomorrow, the last day of his holiday visit on Long Island, quietly in the James A. Burden house, which has been his home during his vacation here, receiving farewell calls from friends. At about 10 o'clock tomorrow night he will board a special train placed at his disposal by Sir Henry Thornton, president and managing director of the Canadian National railway, which will take him all the way to High River, Alberta.

The plan to cross Long Island sound by yacht and meet the train in New London, Conn., was discarded because of the greater simplicity of the present route.

The party will not leave the train at any point between Syosset and Montreal, which will be reached at about 11 o'clock Monday morning. The prince is scheduled to arrive at High River Thursday night.

After spending about three hours in New York, playing squash at the Recquet and Tennis club, and taking luncheon there, the prince today made a pilgrimage to the Roosevelt home on Sagamore Hill, Oyster Bay, to pay his respects to the widow of the ex-president.

James Beattie, 18-year-old caddy at the golf club in Searingtown, who carried the bag for the prince when he played 18 holes there yesterday, told newspaper correspondents today that his royal highness appeared capable of making the 18 holes in 94 or 95. Seventy-two is par. No card score was kept, but Beattie, qualifying as an expert observer, gave it as his opinion that the prince was a fair golfer.

Beattie found the prince "a nice man to caddy for, not fussy or nervous. He doesn't holler at the caddies."

"He was pretty wild," he continued, "and lots of the time he was in the rough. His drives were not long, 175 yards at the most, and that was down hill. He putted fairly well, but the best of all were his chip shots to the green."

Local No. 1 of the International Printing Pressmen's and Assistants' union, New York, has the honor of being the second trade union to elect the Prince of Wales a member. The New York union issued a card to him after he had started one of the presses of the Herald-Tribune on Wednesday. The prince's other labor organization is that of the Hammermen, iron workers of Glasgow.

More Pretty Girls Wanted For Atlanta Passing Revue

Southeastern Fair association officials Saturday announced that still more pretty Atlanta girls are wanted for parts in the Atlanta Passing Revue, the big musical spectacle that is to be presented nightly at the fair next month.

Fred Pfeffer, casting director, said Saturday that there are parts for at least 100 more girls. Miss Nell Sullivan, the ballet director for the hippodrome affair, will instruct that many more in the necessary steps. Instruction and rehearsals are proceeding daily on the roof of the Cecil hotel.

Girls who want to enroll for parts should apply at down-town headquarters of the association at 130 Peachtree street early this week.

Atlanta girls who enroll for parts in the glittering Atlanta Passing Revue become eligible for selection as Miss Atlanta Faire, who will be awarded a coupe by the fair association, and clothing and jewelry, gifts of Atlanta merchants.

Miss Atlanta Faire will also take her place in the Georgia Beauty ballet, representatives of Georgia communities and cities in the competition for the crown and title of Miss Georgia. From letter to fair association officials Saturday it appeared likely that the original estimate of 50 members of the ballet, from whom Miss Georgia will be selected as the supreme queen of beauty, will be exceeded.

The Atlanta Passing Revue will be presented every night during the fair on the hippodrome stage being erected in front of the grandstand at Lakewood Park. It will be an affair of spaciousness and color, with more than 500 girls already enrolled for parts. The big ensembles will support professional stars of the vaudeville and musical comedy stage, and a symphony band, engaged for that particular role, will play a score especially arranged for the performance.

The Georgia Beauty ballet will appear twice at each performance, and will be viewed at each appearance by the governor's citizens' committee, who will select by a process of gradual eliminations the fairest, who will be crowned Miss Georgia, consort of King Georgeus, on the closing night of the fair.

TORNADO DESTROYS HOT SPRINGS CHURCH

Hot Springs, Ark., September 20.—Estimates today placed the property damage as a result of the tornado which dipped into this city late yesterday at between $100,000 and $150,000.

Destruction of St. Luke's Episcopal church and the unroofing of portions of the Eastman hotel caused the greatest individual property damage, although several other buildings suffered lesser damage. A number of plate-glass windows were broken and signs torn from their fastenings. No one was killed and none was seriously injured.

The tornado swept in from across West Mountain and after whirling away through a section of the business district followed the base of Hot Springs mountain and apparently spent its force against the mountainside.

The tornado was not without the usual freaks left in the path of such storms. Most notable among these was the altar of St. Luke's church with its background, a large painting of Christ, which was left unscratched.

DAVIS ENDS DRIVE UPON MIDDLE WEST

national affairs in the last three and a half years."

"And we are charging what every man knows," he said, "that corruption has crept into high office and defiled it. We are charging, for all candid men must admit it, that privilege has had its way in the writing of the laws. And we are charging what is manifestly true, that between the president on one side and the members of his party in congress on the other, there has been a discord, a division, an incoherence, a lack of discipline, which proves that no government, so led on one hand and so indisposed to be led on the other, can work out a consistent policy for the people of the United States."

Immediately upon the conclusion of his address here, Mr. Davis left for New York. He will rest several days before embarking upon a strenuous drive through the east.

TARIFF PROTECTION AGAIN HIT BY DAVIS.

South Bend, Ind., September 20.—Addressing a crowd of several thousand at an open-air meeting here today, John W. Davis, the democratic standard bearer, asserted that the country had been traveling on the road of privilege for the past three and a half years, a road leading to a high tariff behind which the favored few might prosper at the expense of the many.

Declaring that the democratic party had traveled the other road of equal rights for 130 years Mr. Davis said it would continue to travel that road, a road where all men, high or low, will be treated alike.

Next, he said, there was the rate at which the country wished to travel.

Takes Rap at Coolidge.

"There are those in this country," he said, "who believe that the greatest public service is to keep cool."

He added that they wanted to keep cool even in the face of such scandals as those of the squandering of the naval reserve and the corruption in the veterans' bureau.

"When faithful public servants uncovered these affairs," Mr. Davis added, "there was no burning resentment among those who are forever keeping cool."

Referring to the sugar tariff, Mr. Davis said there was an effort to "keep cool" on the recommendation of the tariff commission for a revision which would save the American people $145,000 a day.

The democratic nominee also said there was a desire to "keep cool" even in the face of the plight of the farmer and again to have the situation investigated.

Character of Vehicle.

The next question for the people to decide, Mr. Davis said, was the character of the vehicle, whether they are to select a vehicle with the "wheels spinning in opposite directions."

The nominee pointed to the Mellon plan, the postal pay bill, the bonus and other matters as illustrative of his contention that the wheels of the republican party are spinning in opposite directions. He told his audience that was not so with the democratic party, that the record of the party showed that its wheels are all spinning in the same direction and that it is "hitting on all twelve cylinders."

WILBUR PLACES AIRCRAFT SECOND

eral Pershing and is said to be adhered to by veteran strategists in both departments, despite the progress in aviation.

Secretary Wilbur declared much of the adverse comment regarding his recent speeches was the result of misquotations. No criticism of the Japanese had been voiced in his address at Seattle, he asserted, but on the contrary, the entire speech was designed to be "conciliatory."

Similarly, he said, the Catalina speech had been misinterpreted as an attack upon prohibition, when it was intended merely to point the extreme to which non-observance of political rights could be carried. That address was made, he said, to an assemblage of lawyers who clearly perceived its import.

Predicts Coolidge Victory.

The secretary, who came here last night, cutting short his western speaking tour after being asked by President Coolidge to return, visited the white house early in the day and was received by Mr. Coolidge in his study. He talked freely of his trip and of his western addresses afterwards, but said he would refuse to discuss personalities in connection with the California political situation. He predicted California would go for Coolidge and Dawes if the present method of campaigning was continued, asserting complete harmony prevailed.

After his conference with the president, Secretary Wilbur went to his office at the navy department, where he busied himself for the remainder of the day in conferences with his associates there on naval questions, including that of the budget, which had brought disagreement with the budget bureau.

Captain Gherardi's memorandum to the secretary said:

"Aviation advance does not justify us in allowing our 18 battleships or any of them to deteriorate, using money thus saved to build up aviation."

"Three types of aircraft," he said, "should be developed. First, flying boats for long-range scouting and bombing; second, amphibians and single pontoon planes for spotting, and for close protection of the fleet against submarine or destroyer attacks; third, twin pontoon planes for torpedo planes, but these should be considered as secondary to the first two."

HAM TURNS DOWN CALL TO RETURN TO TABERNACLE

Giving as his reason the success which has greeted his work in the evangelistic field, Rev. John H. Ham, who resigned September 1 as pastor of the Baptist tabernacle Saturday night, declined to accept a call to return to the Atlanta church. His answer was received Saturday night by W. C. Spradley, chairman of a committee appointed to urge the pastor's return.

Since leaving the tabernacle to enter the new field of service, Mr. Ham has conducted evangelistic services in New York, Mississippi and is now holding a revival in Macon, Ga., and reports that his efforts have been highly successful.

Mr. Ham had been connected with the Baptist tabernacle here for ten years, being assistant pastor for three years and filling the pulpit as pastor for the past seven years.

knew something about the subject. But this is about the first time I have mentioned the budget in the whole campaign.

Constitution Big Issue.

"Why? Because, like a thief in the night, a great issue has stolen upon the consciences and minds of the American people—an issue nobody expected—the issue of the constitution of the United States, which constitution is being assailed by Robert M. La Follette, behind whom is massed a heterogenous combination of the forces opposed to the existing order of things in this country, the largest portion of which are the socialists flying the red flag.

"This issue is fundamental. It is vital. The proposition is that we abandon our present form of government, with its balanced powers—the judicial, the executive and the legislative—and make congress the final power in the government of the United States, and in one blow abolish that balancing of powers which protects you in your individual rights, your inalienable rights under the constitution.

"What are those inalienable rights that are protected by the constitution which is assailed in this way?" he inquired. "It is your right to go to church where you please; it is your right to own property; it is your right to trial by jury, and other individual rights.

Big Difference in Views.

"I recognize that there are many men justly discontented with things in the existing order. We would not progress in this country if everybody were satisfied with the way things go. But there is a vast difference between the man who is discontented with some things in the existing order and wants to improve them, and those men like Mr. La Follette and his following."

Mr. Dawes also entered upon the agricultural problem, saying he had "listened to some political pee-wits make speeches on that—violent assertion, unsupported by reason, and then they appeal to prejudice—Wall street, the interests, the down-trodden condition of the farmer, of labor, of all of us, crushed under the heels of monopoly."

SLICK BUSINESS DEAL IS CHARGED TO DAWES

clearing house association," Wheeler said. "After May, 1911, the bank was even denied the privilege of clearing through other Chicago banks.

Changed Type of Bank.

"Lorimer and his associates then decided to change their national bank into a state bank, to be known as the La Salle Street Trust & Savings bank. They proposed to turn over the assets of their national bank to the new bank, along with its liabilities, of course; but, they did not propose to put in any additional money.

"Much of the bank's money had been loaned to officers and directors and friends of Lorimer and his associates.

"The bank announced a capital and surplus of $1,250,000. Under the state banking laws it was necessary to show that amount in cash to the state auditor. But Lorimer's bank did not have that sum. Efforts were made to get it in Chicago, then in New York and failed. Then Banker Lorimer appealed to Banker Dawes.

Loan Was "Short Time."

"On the afternoon of October 21, 1912, Dawes turned over to Lorimer's new bank the required $1,250,000. The agent of the state auditor of public accounts counted it and issued a certificate authorizing Lorimer's bank to do business. Then the $1,250,000 was handed back to Dawes' Central Trust company. All in one afternoon.

"The La Salle Street bank then began to do business with an advertised and certified capital and surplus of $1,250,000, when as a matter of fact there was nothing in the bank to represent this sum.

"Dawes never lost control of the money for a moment, not even during the few minutes it required the state auditor to count it.

"Within twenty months Lorimer's bank had been closed and a receiver appointed. Its assets were found to be $2,000,000 less than needed to satisfy depositors and other creditors. Banker Lorimer, with Banker Dawes aiding, had not set out to rob the rich. They were out to rob the poor."

Shoots From Labor Angle.

"The master in chancery and Judge Holdom saved General Dawes over a million dollars," he continued. "Later we find Dawes organizing the Minute Men of the Constitution, and the first act of his organization was the issuance of a statement, in which he urged that Judges Sullivan and Holdom be reelected."

Wheeler called attention to Dawes' defense of two judges for issuing injunctions against labor organizations. Dawes said the two judges were required to do so by law.

"If General Dawes didn't know that judges are not required to issue injunctions unless the situation demands, then he is too ignorant to be vice president of the United States," Wheeler said. "If he does know better and made those statements knowing they are not true—well, he isn't honest enough to be vice president."

$100,000 DAMAGE DONE BY TORNADO

St. Louis, September 20.—Damage estimated at between $75,000 and $100,000 and the slight injury of probably a score of persons was caused by a tornado which swept through southeastern Missouri last night. The largest damage reported occurred at Annapolis, Mo., where thirty or more buildings were damaged and several persons slightly injured by flying debris.

A representative of the southeastern division of the American Red Cross, with offices here, has been sent into the region to assist the sufferers. Late tonight no report had been made to the offices here. The storm struck several towns in Iron and Reynolds counties, but so far as known did little damage outside of this area.

The most serious injuries reported tonight were those of Percy Collier, of Annapolis, and his wife, who were struck by flying wood and severely cut, when their home was partially wrecked by the wind. Their baby also received flesh wounds.

Physicians and Red Cross workers from near-by towns left for the scene to offer their assistance.

Crippled wires made it difficult to procure full accounts of the situation here tonight.

BIG MOTORCADE PLANS GAIN MOMENTUM HERE

Spurred on by announcement that Atlanta has been officially designated as one of the five principal stop-over and gathering points for southern Maccabees who will join the big motorcade drive on to Washington, D. C., in July of next year, local Maccabee officials are busily setting into motion plans for entertaining several hundred visitors.

Atlanta members of the order, many of whom have been members for more than a quarter of a century, are joining hands in entertainment plans and in a move to send 500 Georgia Maccabees and 125 automobiles—each bearing a Georgia license number—to the nation's capital for the national convention next July.

Caravan clubs are being organized in Atlanta temples, workers are uniting in clubs in a general drive for members and local leaders are bending every effort to keep Atlanta in the forefront in this big secret order and motorcade demonstration.

Leatherman at Helm.

Chief among the business developments during the past two weeks is the state-wide move to organize Georgia for the Maccabees. Districts have been mapped out and chairmen placed in charge to direct the intensive membership campaign, and state Commander R. E. Leatherman is expected to leave the city late this week on a trip of inspection, which will swing him around the four corners of Georgia.

Maccabees from all sections of the United States will go to the national convention next year in automobiles. At five general centers these automobiles will assemble and continue in an unbroken line. Atlanta is not only the assembling point for the south, but the chief stop-over city on the route and schedule of southwestern Maccabees.

Traffic Manager Named.

M. D. Gleason, veteran member of the order, last week was appointed southern traffic manager, and is now arranging schedules, listing hotels in cities along the route of the motorcade, gathering road information and acting in the general capacity of advance agent for the auto procession.

In Atlanta, according to present plans, several hundred visitors will be taken on a brief tour of the city, a short visit to Stone Mountain, will be guests at a barbecue at Lakewood and other features.

Big Rattler Killed.

Lyons, Ga., September 20.—(Special.)—Melt Copeland, of Ohoopee community, was on the streets here yesterday with a rattlesnake that had 21 rattles and a button. He said the snake was pointed by his bird dog and though only five and a half feet long was the size of a man's leg.

State-Wide Drive on To Secure Exposition Exhibit Support

William G. Sirrine, president of the Southern exposition to be held in New York in January and head of the noted textile engineering firm which bears his name in Greenville, S. C., will be principal speaker at a mass meeting of manufacturers and Georgia business men which has been called for Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock, in the assembly room of the chamber of commerce.

The meeting has been planned to acquaint business interests of Atlanta with the entire program of the Southern exposition and to enlist participation of local interests in the mammoth display of southern resources which is to be used in impressing northern people with the vast development and potential resources of this section.

Urgent telegrams addressed to heads of leading state associations were sent out Saturday by the Atlanta committee in charge of arrangements, of which Virgil Shepard is chairman, asking them to attend. An open invitation has been extended to all citizens of Atlanta to be present and learn direct from the inspiring genius of the project just what the exposition is to be and what steps have been already taken to insure its success.

Well Known Here.

Mr. Sirrine is already well known in Atlanta. His record of service to the south, especially to the textile district, is a notable one. He organized and pushed to a successful conclusion the textile exposition which has been an annual event at Greenville for a number of years, and which has done much to better the entire southern textile industry.

Earlier in the month, he appeared before a group of Texas business men and railway officials in Fort Worth, and as a result of his address, Texas underwrote $75,000 for financing a state exhibit. Plans are now under way for making the Lone Star state the dominant exhibitor in New York.

B. S. Barker, secretary of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, and executive secretary of the state committee, has issued an appeal to the manufacturers and business men of Atlanta to be present at the meeting Tuesday afternoon to hear Mr. Sirrine's address and give due consideration to the part which the city of Atlanta and the state of Georgia will take in the exposition.

Necessary to Act.

"The coming of Mr. Sirrine to Atlanta in the interests of the Southern exposition," he states, "is an event which merits consideration of every man in Atlanta who is really interested in the progress of the city and of Georgia. His address on Tuesday will amply repay any business man for the time and effort involved in attending the meeting.

"The time has come when it is absolutely necessary that Georgia and Atlanta determine what part, if any, they are to take in this advertising enterprise. It will take all the time remaining before the opening of the exposition to prepare suitable exhibits and arrange for their proper transportation and display.

"I take it that both the city and state will be represented. It is impossible to consider an alternative. With the great and progressive states of the south, from Virginia to Texas, taking thousands of square feet of floor space in which to display their resources and present development, Georgia will be forced to take its place, whether we are anxious to or not. As a matter of fact, those of us in close touch with the situation realize that this is the greatest opportunity that the state has had in recent years to bring its limitless possibilities for development emphatically before the men and corporations who have the money and the organization to give us the industrial and commercial development which our resources justify.

Appeal for Cooperation.

"The country at large knows Atlanta particularly as a commercial and distributing center. We want to emphasize this fact in whatever we do, and trust that our trade associations in the city will be entrants. But we also want to impress upon the people of the north that Atlanta is also a manufacturing city of considerable proportions and offers unusual opportunities for further industrial development. So our committee is particularly anxious that the candy manufacturers, the furniture and spring bed plants, the steel industry, packing plants, the textile factories and all the other numerous manufacturing enterprises of the city will make proper displays.

"Atlanta has the opportunity of dominating this exposition just as it actually dominates the south from a commercial and financial standpoint. It will be nothing short of appalling if we do not take advantage of this opportunity. I know that Richmond, Charlotte, Jacksonville, Dallas, Houston and many other great centers are going to go the limit and if we do not take immediate action, we are very likely to be placed in an unfavorable light in New York in January."

Jones Will Preach.

Lyons, Ga., September 20.—(Special.—Rev. Herman C. Jones, presiding elder of the McRae district, will preach at the Lyons Methodist church Sunday morning and evening. The fourth quarterly conference will be held Monday, at which time every department makes its annual report.

AD CLUB SPONSORS "PAYS TO ADVERTISE"

"It Pays to Advertise," the most popular comedy of American business produced during the last ten years, is to be presented in Atlanta this week by the Lyric players with the support of the Atlanta Advertising club, which has announced its formal indorsement of the production.

Final rehearsals of the play, as touched up with the help of ad club officials to conform to the club's policy of "Truth in Advertising," were held Saturday and were declared by Director Edwin Vail to assure the snappiest first night performance Monday that the players have offered this year.

The play was picked for presentation this week, just at the opening of the fall business season, because it carries a spirit of punch and enthusiasm, with advertising ideas, that the management believes will prove an added stimulus to a revival of big business and big prosperity in Atlanta.

A college boy, played by Wilfred Lytell, makes a million dollars and wins the girl he loves by getting one big idea and promoting it with all the advertising he can beg or buy. Edith King is the girl and Gus Forbes the high pressure advertising man who managed the campaign.

ATLANTA TO HAVE PURE FOOD SHOW

Plans for the annual food show of the Atlanta Retail Food Dealers' association, to be held in the auditorium-armory in November, assures for Atlanta the most interesting and valuable food exposition ever staged in Dixie, according to a special committee of Atlanta grocers in charge.

Enthused over the almost certain prospects of prosperity for Atlanta and Georgia this fall and winter 55 manufacturers of food from various parts of the country have signed contracts within the past month to participate, and the committee announces that less than a dozen exhibition spaces are now available, which they construe to be proof of the manufacturers' belief in Atlanta's progress and prosperity.

Practically every Atlanta food manufacturer and a large number of Atlanta wholesalers and brokers will participate in the show with handsome and interesting exhibits and demonstrations, it is declared.

Variety of Features.

Among the many special attractions scheduled for the show are: a model, up-to-date food store of 1924, contrasted with the average carelessly-kept food store of 25 years ago; a model kitchen, dining room, pantry and breakfast room, under the direction of Mrs. Newton Wing, chairman of the Atlanta Better Homes committee; an exhibit showing the source of all food consumed by Atlantans, and an allegorical display showing the detailed cost of getting food from the producer to the consumer, which will be made with the aid of the domestic distribution division of the U. S. department of foreign and domestic commerce.

Cooking and baking demonstrations will be conducted every hour during the week of the show, November 17-22, and a multitude of contests for valuable prizes will be held. A 15-piece orchestra will provide music.

Plan for Meetings.

Weekly luncheon meetings are held by the committee, consisting of J. H. Merritt, chairman; A. C. Hilderbrand, A. C. Honea, W. R. Branham, Louis Aronoff, M. M. Bullard, Morris Weinberg, J. M. Parker, L. B. Ham, Ernest L. Bell, W. E. Sheats, O. T. Camp, L. C. Born and J. R. Morris. R. V. Bergen, secretary of the Atlanta Retail Food Dealers' association, is manager of the show, and Virgil Shepard is the official decorator.

"New foods and new methods of preparing old foods are constantly being introduced, and the art of preparing wholesome foods in a variety of deliciously tasty dishes is growing more widespread," states Chairman Merritt, of the food show committee. "It is our aim to bring the manufacturers and the consuming public together for their mutual benefit and to help bring to the Atlanta public that real contentment possible only by the proper eating of wholesome, healthful, pleasing food properly prepared."

the arcade of the Atlanta Biltmore hotel, according to an announcement Saturday.

Mr. Deans will serve from the new shop the clientele which patronized the store on Peachtree street, next door to the Howard theater, and will cater particularly to north side customers.

The Dahl's Biltmore Florist shop will be just inside the west Peachtree street entrance of the Biltmore. A complete stock of high-grade floral goods, and an interesting line of novelties, will be offered patrons.

Mr. Deans is chairman of the Georgia Florist Telegraph Delivery association and also chairman of the Georgia Society of American Florists. He is an active member of the Atlanta Florist club, of which he was one of the founders, and is a director in the Civitan club.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LEADERS INVITED TO STATE MEETING

A call to Sunday school workers of all denominations in the state to attend the state Sunday school convention at Wesley Memorial Methodist church October 23-26, has been issued by Willis A. Sutton, John J. McKay, Macon, chairman executive committee, and R. D. Webb, Atlanta, general superintendent.

"This convention, the call reads, "is a convention of workers of all denominations voluntarily met for the purpose of considering the best methods of meeting our common opportunity and of discharging our common task in the promotion of a worthy program of religious education in Georgia.

"Our part is to bring to Georgia and to this convention the very best in leadership, inspiration and method. It will avail nothing without your cooperation.

"We therefore call upon you to pray for this convention and the work; to come to the convention and bring others from your school and count; then to go back to your field and help make possible a better Georgia because of bigger and better Sunday schools, vocation church schools and week-day religious schools."

The theme, "Religious Education the Solution of World Problems," has been selected for the convention program and the motto is "Not to Be Ministered Unto but to Minister."

FUNERAL SERVICES FOR OSCAR ELSAS TO BE HELD TODAY

Funeral services for Oscar Elsas, president of the Fulton Bag and Cotton mills, and a leader in the industrial and commercial circles of the south, who died Friday morning in Boston, Mass., following a brief illness, will be held at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon in Boston. Interment will be in Boston.

Mr. Elsas was in Boston on a visit, accompanied by his wife and daughter, when he became ill, and an operation became necessary.

He was born in Atlanta September 22, 1870, and was the son of Jacob Elsas, founder of the Fulton Bag and Cotton mills. He received his earlier education here, having attended Georgia School of Technology, and was a member of the first graduating class of that institution. Immediately after his graduation Mr. Elsas became identified with the organization of which he was president at the time of his death.

GRESS IS SPEAKER AT MONTHLY MEET OF HOO HOO CLUB

At a monthly meeting of the Atlanta Hoo Hoo club, No. 8, held Thursday evening at the Peacock cafe, a large attendance listened with interest to an address by the assistant attorney general of Georgia, T. G. Gress, of Savannah, Ga.

Reports of the annual barbecue at Emory university campus were read, while the golf tournament committee reported that John Ray Pattillo and Willingham Smith would play the finals for the club championship at Ingleside Country club within the next week.

Wm. F. Methvin was elected vice regent snark for north Georgia.

The Atlanta Hoo Hoo club has started a campaign for new members and the present season promises to be the most active in its history.

The officers are: Albert O. Marbut, president; Thos. E. Foster, secretary; Willingham Smith, vice president. While the membership is confined to lumbermen, a national movement sponsored by the Hoo Hoo and organized as "Friends of the Forest," to encourage reforestation, is meeting with enthusiastic and general response.

AUTO ASSOCIATION OPENS FALL MEETINGS

The Atlanta Automobile association, composed of 160 automobile dealers and allied trade lines of Atlanta and vicinity, will open its fall and winter membership activities with a membership meeting on Wednesday, September 24, at 6:15 o'clock on the Cecil hotel roof.

The feature address will be delivered by Robert Strickland, Jr., vice president of the Fourth National bank, on the subject, "The Business Outlook and Some Fundamentals of Automotive Merchandising."

Another feature of the meeting will be a short address by George H. Brusch, sales manager of F. E. Maffett, Inc., and formerly special representative for the National Automotive association. He will tell the members of the association how cooperative sales and advertising effort among automobile dealers and allied trade lines will bring splendid financial returns.

Wylie West and "Fat" Elrod, who head the entertainment committee of the association, will present several special entertainment features during the service of supper, while a six-piece orchestra will furnish music for the occasion.

Permits in Decatur For New Buildings Show Big Increases

Decatur, Ga., September 20.—(Special.)—Building permits in Decatur for the year 1924, through August 31, amounted to $746,347, against $974,932, for the whole year of 1923, it was announced today. Totals for the year are expected to reach $1,250,000.

The new Masonic Temple, the Decatur Bank and Trust company and the Fourth National Bank building are the largest single permits issued, the record shows. A large theater will be erected by next spring, it was said today.

Debtors Caused Collosal Failure, Bankrupt Says

Savannah, Ga., September 20.—(Special.)—Today in federal court a voluntary petition in bankruptcy was filed, through his attorneys, by Anson Jesse Ives. Liabilities were scheduled at $1,445,697.22 and the assets of the petitioner at $227,007.13.

Mr. Ives has been for many years one of the leading business men in this section of the state and was senior member of the fertilizer firm of Ives-Wilcox company for a long time. Larger amounts are involved in the petition than have figured in any failure in Savannah in many years.

One item in the petition is unusual and interesting. Among the liabilities, notes and bills which ought to be paid by other parties thereto is listed $1,395,170.69.

PRIVATE SALE FRIDAY FOR CONCERT SERIES

Members subscribing to concerts of the Atlanta Music club may receive tickets at a private sale Friday morning at the Cable Piano company, according to announcements made by officials Saturday.

Four of the world-famous artists to be heard in Atlanta this season under club auspices are: Marie Jeritza, soprano, of the Metropolitan Opera company; John McCormack, popular tenor; Jascha Heifetz, violinist, and Harold Bauer, pianist.

Cards bearing each subscriber's number in line have been mailed and any person who has not received a reservation number should notify Mrs. Cliff C. Hatcher before Friday.

Many persons already have engaged reserve seats and the demand continues unabated. The Music club has spared no effort nor expense to bring to Atlanta the very finest talent obtainable.

"THIEF OF BAGDAD" MATINEES BEGIN LATER THIS WEEK

On account of the large number of requests from members of the Parent-Teacher associations of the city, Manager Lewis Haas, of the Atlanta theater, announces that during the coming week matinee performances of "The Thief of Bagdad," the great Douglas Fairbanks picture now showing there, will begin at 2:45 instead of 2:30, the usual hour.

So many of the teachers and parents desire to take their children to see this picture, that the hour of starting has been moved up to meet the convenience of the school adjournment hour, he said. Night performances will commence at 8:30, the usual hour.

It was in 1886 that Atlanta, after sharp competition, won in the contest for the Technological School, the citizens donating the building site and $130,000. During this same year the Board of Commissioners of Streets and Sewers was abolished and the duties of this body were vested in the Commissioner of Public Works.

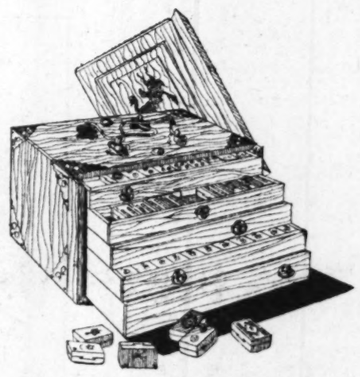

An investigation of industrial conditions for this period reveals a state of splendid prosperity. The city had a surplus of $183,832.32 in the treasury by the end of the year and credit was on a high plane. Capital invested in manufacturing enterprises reached $6,500,000 owned by 303 enterprises. J. T. Cooper was elected Mayor of Atlanta on December 1 of this year.

At this time, Jacobs' Pharmacy Company had reached the second year of its life and was operating a prescription department conducted by Graduate Pharmacists and was selling Patent Medicines at Cut Prices.

Estimate of Tobacco Crop Borne Out by Full Report

Compilation of official figures of Georgia's tobacco crop, just completed by Peter V. Rice, state agricultural statistician, bears out the estimate of the crop made by The Constitution several days prior to opening of the markets in a number of south Georgia cities.

The report shows that the amazing total of 30,024,502 pounds of the golden leaf were sold in twenty Georgia tobacco warehouses during the brief selling season just closed, bringing into the state the flat sum of $6,551,659.86. Of this total 52,000 pounds are credited to Alabama, Florida and South Carolina.

A representative of The Constitution predicted two weeks in advance of the selling season that the crop would total "more than 25,000,000 pounds" and the value of the crop was placed at "more than $5,000,000." The exceptionally high prices which prevailed during the season boosted the value figure considerably higher than predicted.

Constitution's Estimate.

The Constitution's estimate was based on personal investigation and a trip through the tobacco growing sections by a member of the reportorial staff. The conservative prediction is borne out by the official, accepted records.

The average price paid per pound was 21.82 cents, with the Blackshear market leading in total receipts and the Nashville market leading with the average highest price. Blackshear sales reached the stupendous figure of 7,500,000 pounds. Nashville buyers paid an average price of 24.20 cents per pound during the season, with Douglas ranking second with an average of 23.92 cents per pound for the season.

The Camilla market, the youngest in the state, set a goal of 1,000,000 and exceeded that figure by 74,620 pounds.

Very High Quality.

The unusually fine quality of the Georgia crop was an outstanding feature of this year's crop. Weather conditions were suitable throughout the season, except in small areas, and the average price paid in Georgia exceeds by several cents the average price paid in either Virginia or North Carolina markets.

The growing interest in tobacco production in Georgia is gathered from the fact that the 1923 crop was only 9,000,000 pounds, whereas the total this year is nearly three times that amount. Farmers throughout the coastal plain, the tobacco growing center, are well satisfied with results of the crop this year, particularly in view of the fact that tobacco constituted merely a part of the 1924 crop. Cotton corn, small grain and other crops were planted in abundance and yields are expected to be almost as good in comparison with tobacco.

No "One Crop" System.

Tobacco, while a big money crop, has not supplanted cotton or other crops in south Georgia. More acreage is planted, but farmers are not depending upon any one crop system any more.

Preparations already under way in many southern counties lend color to the general impression that the success of tobacco farmers this year will be reflected in a much larger acreage in 1925. Incidentally, interest of farmers in many counties where tobacco has not been grown previously as a commercial crop is significant.

The full official report of Georgia's crop, gathered from ten markets and from records on file in twenty tobacco warehouses, follows:

'DOKIE' CEREMONIAL PLANS PROGRESSING

With receipt of applications from a large number of future votaries, plans for the fall "Dokie" ceremonial of Kibla temple, Dramatic Order Knights of Khorassan, to be held in Atlanta on the night of September 30, are progressing rapidly.

The degree team of the "sunshine boys" has been busy for several weeks past, both in ritualistic work and on humorous and entertainment features for the benefit both of votaries and neophytes.

All duly qualified Pythian Knights are eligible to membership in the "Dokies'" organization, which is usually referred to as the "playground of Pythianism."

Applications must be in the hands of Secretary B. L. Owens not later than Saturday, September 27, in order to be acted upon in time for the ceremonial to be held on the night of September 30.

Cops Are Called As Sisters Break Vows of Silence

Sheffield, England, September 20.—Eight years ago two sisters, Mrs. Ellen Burnham and Mrs. Maggie Swift, heatedly swore, during a quarrel, that they would never speak to each other again.

They continued living in the same house, Mrs. Burnham occupying one side and Mrs. Swift the other. But they never spoke, and communicated with each other through their husbands.

Recently Mrs. Swift's son broke a window in Mrs. Burnham's side of the house. Mrs. Burnham called for her husband to do the necessary talking for her. He had gone out, and Mrs. Burnham broke her oath and her silence.

After Mrs. Burnham had talked fluently and frankly to her sister for half an hour, neighbors called the police. A magistrate put Mrs. Burnham on probation for a year for using profane language, and her thoughts about her sister are again being relayed—and revised—by her husband.

RETAIL MERCHANTS OPEN 1924-25 SEASON

The opening fall meeting of the Atlanta Retail Merchants' association, to be held Thursday night at 6 o'clock on the roof of the Cecil hotel, will feature a number of short talks on "The Part Played by Intelligent and Helpful Suggestions in Salesmanship."

Preparations are under way for a big crowd and the initial meeting of the 1924-25 season is expected to be an interesting affair, officials assert.

Four ten-minute talks on the subject will be delivered by able retail merchants in the association, as follows:

L. A. Witherspoon, (manager Haverty Furniture company)—"From the Standpoint of the Customer;" H. C. Thompson, (district manager, Liggett's Drug company)—"From the Standpoint of the Salesman"; L. P. Wilson, (advertising manager, Davison-Paxon-Stokes company)—"From the Standpoint of Advertising Manager;" Howard Muse (president George Muse Clothing company)—"From the Standpoint of the Proprietor."

The meeting will be thrown open to general discussion and a splendid orchestra, musical features rendered by the Georgia Railway & Power company quartet, a course supper, and good-fellowship, will make this a rousing good meeting, 'announcement of the meeting reads.

The Atlanta Retail Druggists' association, 60 representative retail drug stores of Atlanta, organized July 1, will be tendered a special reception on this occasion.

SAVANNAH DIVINE TO FILL KIRKWOOD PULPIT FOR WEEK

Dr. Norman W. Cox, pastor of the First Baptist church of Savannah, will be the preacher in a meeting which begins at Kirkwood Baptist church today and continues through the next two weeks. Dr. J. L. Jackson is pastor of the Kirkwood church.

Dr. Cox is one of the most widely known preachers among the Baptists of this state. He is a graduate of Mercer university and the Southern Baptist Theological seminary. He has been pastor at Lawrenceburg, Ky., Barnesville, Ga., Court Street church, Portsmouth, Va., and the First Baptist church, Savannah. He is a member of a number of important boards of the denomination.

One of the outstanding qualities of Dr. Cox is his evangelistic work. It is reported that in his ministry he has led more than 3,000 people to profess religion and to unite with the churches where he has preached. His ministry in Savannah has been marked by the large number of people who have united with the church. He has lately conducted an evangelistic meeting in Cartersville, in which many were converted.

Dr. Jackson announces that the Kirkwood church is in readiness for the revival, prayer meetings having been held for the past week and special efforts made to arouse the membership of the church for the meetings. There will be special music at all services. The public is cordially invited to attend the services and to hear Dr. Cox.

Tech Freshmen Complete First Lecture Series

As the result of changes made in the freshmen class this year, members of that body entering Georgia Tech will meet with less difficulty than those of previous years.

Saturday the freshmen completed a three-day lecture program designed to acquaint them more fully with the detailed workings of the institution. Each member of the class was told of the various activities about the campus, the importance of certain subject, how to study, the operation of the honor system, rules of attendance, and each was shown about the department in which the greater part of his work will center.

Lectures of the series were by Dr. David H. Smith, associate professor of mathematics, who discussed "mathematics and its relation to other work given in Tech; by Dean W. H. Emerson, who told the freshmen how to study and so organize their work as to obtain the greatest results; by Professor W. G. Perry, heading the English department, who gave a lecture which explained the work covered by the department in relation to engineering, and by Dr. A. B. Horton on the honor system from the standpoint of the faculty.

Divided Into Sections.

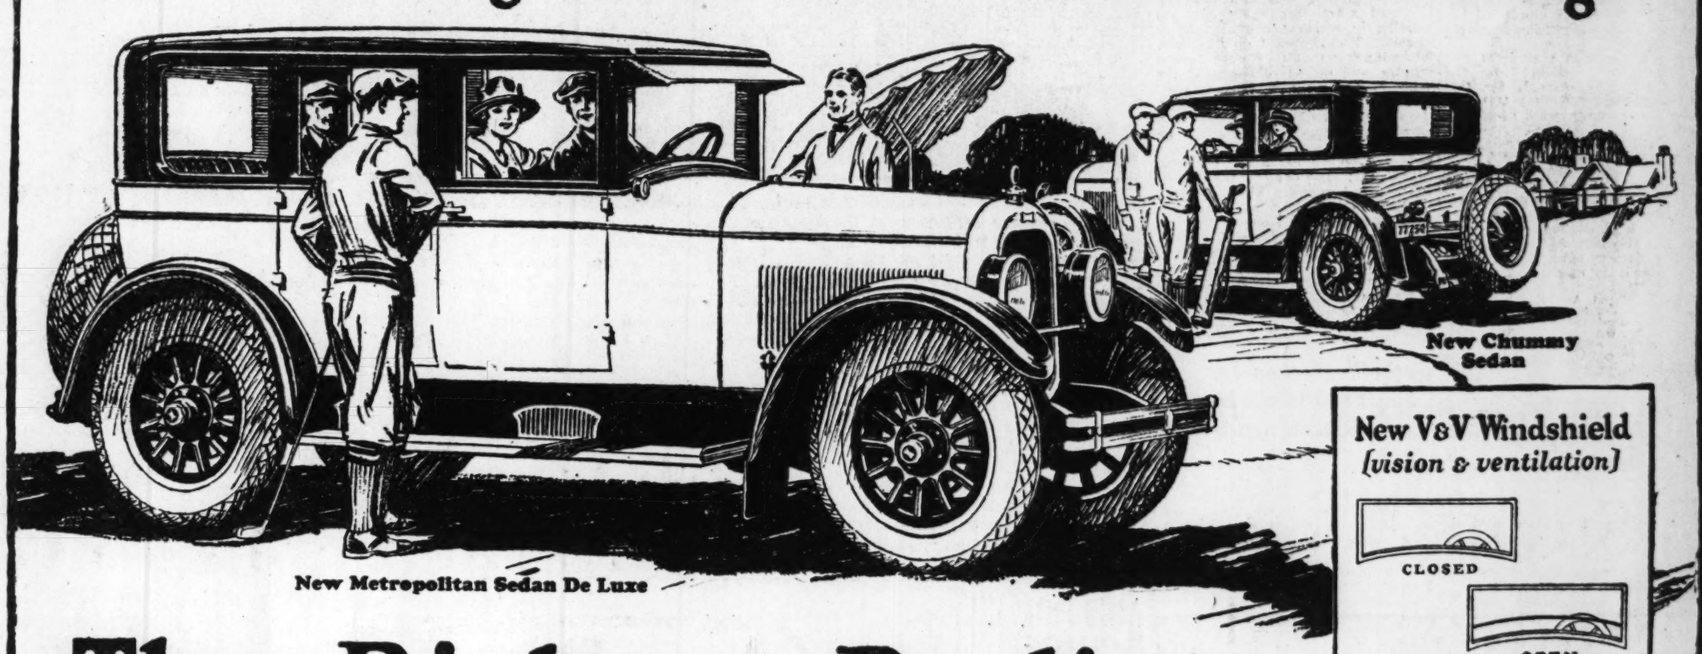

Thursday afternoon the class was divided into three sections, those taking architecture, some branch of engineering or commerce forming the separate groups. Each of these groups was conducted to its respective department and shown where it will work and the tools it will handle. The architectural students were taken to the new physics building, where their department occupies the two upper floors and they were shown the work of members of last year's graduating class which won honors ahead of any other school in the entire south, it was stated. The engineers' class was shown through the laboratories and the machine shops in the various departments. Students entering the school of commerce were conducted through the several laboratories of that department and shown the work and implements they would use in the course of their study.

Friday morning who filled with short tests in mathematics and English in an effort to determine the individual qualifications of each student.

Saturday morning H. H. Caldwell, registrar and secretary of the institution, acquainted the students with the various systems of records and how they may help by their cooperation. Later in the morning Dr. Perry, head of the English department, spoke of attendance and explained the extra credit allowed a man if he attends classes regularly and on time. Following this talk, L. K. Patton, one of the 1923 graduates, spoke to the freshmen regarding the honor system and how to study.

Saturday afternoon closed the course for the freshmen when, with upper classmen, they assembled on Grant field. At that time the freshmen were told of the various athletic activities in which they will be given equal opportunity to participate during their four-year term at Tech.

New feature great advance in closed car design

New V&V Windshield
[vision & ventilation]

Slides silently upward instead of tilting. Operated by a convenient regulator handle. Make a point of seeing and studying this remarkable improvement.

The Richest Bodies that ever graced a famous chassis

TODAY are presented two new Chandler enclosed bodies, eminently worthy of the famous chassis on which they are mounted.

It is fairly to be questioned whether any of America's exclusive custom body builders has ever achieved greater harmony of line, form, finish and detail.

As a part of their construction Chandler announces the new V&V Windshield—a radical improvement in design that vastly increases the pleasure of closed car driving.

Consisting of a single plate of glass, the V&V Windshield affords clear and complete vision to persons of all heights. There is no rubber strip to strain the eyes; no split to leak air or water; no unsightly quadrants or braces; no thumb screws to rattle or stick.

Perfect Ventilation

All degrees of ventilation are provided in a manner that is absolutely new:

Instead of tilting, the entire windshield slides upward in felt lined channels, responding to an easy turning handle above the shield. With half a turn, a ventilating current of air is conducted through the cowl to the car floor—although the shield itself is tightly sealed!

On any boulevard—in any company—these two new sedans will dominate.

Their color scheme is a brilliant combination of black and Luxor Blue divided by a double molding smartly striped with gold.

Their appearance of unusual length and rakish lowness has been achieved by reducing their overall height to less than six feet without impairing head room or road clearance.

Elegance of Detail

An unstinted elegance of detail—typical of Fisher coachwork—characterizes the interiors. The soft gray mohair upholstery is applied with corded edges instead of being taped. Garnish moldings are of Circassian walnut, harmonizing with a similarly finished instrument board.

The hardware is satin surfaced with brightly burnished high lights. The seats are low, pillowy, and pitched at an arm chair angle. Even the arm rests are upholstered over springs.

In the famous Chandler chassis, the Pikes Peak Motor provides absolute mastery over all hill and traffic problems; the Traffic Transmission insures silent, certain speed changes under all conditions.

Balloon tires eliminate the effects of road irregularities; Chandler 4-wheel brakes provide extra safety at slight extra cost.

2,300 Expected To Register For 1924-25 Term at Emory

Emory University, Ga., September 20.—(Special.)—Continuing the record increase in the size of its student body, Emory university is preparing to enroll 15 per cent more students than ever before in its history. This year's total is estimated at 2,300, as against about 2,000 registered last year, the largest student body up to that time.

Registration will begin on Monday of this week and will continue through Tuesday.

The convocation address will be delivered by Rev. J. B. Mitchell, pastor of St. Marks Methodist church Wednesday at 10 o'clock in the temporary chapel on the university campus.

It is estimated that 700 will register in the college and school of business administration, 300 freshmen having already been accepted. Two hundred and twenty-five sophomores, 100 juniors and 65 seniors are expected to return.

In the school of medicine, it is estimated that 225 will enroll—62 freshmen having been already accepted. Forty sophomores, 60 juniors and 58 seniors are expected to enroll Monday and Tuesday in this school.

Law School Increase.

The Lamar School of Law has kept pace with other schools of the university. It is one of the 23 A-1 law schools in the United States and one of the five in the south recognized by the American Bar association. With its equirement of two or more years of college work before entering, and its three-year curriculum, it is said to have but one equal in the south, the Virginia Law school. It is expected that 70 men will enroll in the school this year, a slight increase over that of last year.

Twenty-five graduate students and 160 theological students is the estimate made by officials for this year. It is estimated that 200 will register for extension work of Emory university.

The department of correspondence instruction, a newly-instituted branch of the university, will possibly enroll 150 students. A branch of the extension department has recently been established at Augusta, where it is estimated that 50 students will enroll.

New Faculty Additions.

Fifteen teachers have been added to the faculty it is announced, as follows:

College of Liberal Arts—C. M. Woodward, A. M., B. D., A. M., Chicago; B. D., S. M. U., dean of men and professor of sociology; R. O. Quale, Ph. D., Johns Hopkins university, assistant professor of chemistry; Preston W. Edsall, B. S., New York university, instructor in history; John A. Knox, A. B., Randolph-Macon, assistant professor of Bible; Russell T. Purnell, B. A., Wesleyan university, instructor in French; E. C. Colwell, B. Ph., Emory university, instructor in English; Gordon Watson, B. A., Emory university, instructor in English.

School of Business Administration—James W. Martin, Ph. D., University of Chicago, assistant professor of economics and business administration; J. Friend Day, M. A., University of Chicago, assistant professor of accounting; Mercer G. Evans, B. S., Emory university, instructor in economics and business administration.

School of Medicine—Dr. R. H. Oppenheimer, B. A., Ohio State State university; M. D., University of Michigan, superintendent of Wesley Memorial hospital; Dr. Hugh Sheppard, M. D., University of Chicago; Ph. D., Cornell university, pathologist in Grady hospital; Dr. R. H. Wood, M. D., resident physician Grady hospital.

School of Law—J. M. Cormack, A. B., Northwestern university; LL. B., Yale university, professor of law; H. W. Caldwell, A. B., University of Georgia; LL. B., Harvard university, assistant professor of law.

CHARGES AGAINST TWO MEN PLANNED BY ALLEGED SIREN

Warrants charging robbery and impersonating a United States officer will be sworn out against R. W. Wheeler, 37, of 197 Dill avenue, and E. G. Glenn, 35, of 33 Brooks avenue, according to Miss Nan Perkins, 35, of 240 Courtland street, who was arrested Saturday morning on a blanket charge of suspicion. The two men are now charged with disorderly conduct.

The young woman's charges came as the aftermath of an affair which occurred at her home Friday night. According to the two men, while they were strolling along Courtland street Saturday, two pretty girls allured them into an apartment at 240 Courtland. There, they said, drinks were passed around, and they soon became drowsy. Upon awakening they found their bankrolls had disappeared, together with all the girls except one, who later, they stated, fled from the house.

The woman, in her version of the affair, says that both men were intoxicated when they came into the building in which her apartment is located. They knocked on her door, informing her that they were federal officers, and demanded entrance, she says. While the men were wandering about her apartment, she stated, she slipped out of the back door and telephoned the police. When she returned to the apartment, the two men were telling her negro cook, Minnie Gibson, that some one had stolen their watches and money. The story was repeated to Miss Perkins, and words followed, after which one of the two men, she said, struck her on the head, knocking her to the floor, and one of them removed five one-dollar bills from her stocking. She left the house, she said, and went to her mother's home. Saturday she was arrested by Detectives Cody and Davis.

Catholic Mother, 74, Savannah Home Head, Dies at Institution

Savannah, Ga., September 20.—(Special.)—The Reverend Mother Veronique De St. Augustin, head of the Little Sisters of the Poor, a Savannah institution, caring for 200 aged women and men, died early today at the home. She was 74 years old, a native of Alsace-Lorraine, France. She was in the service of the order nearly 50 years.

DeKalb County Pushes Construction Of Two Additional School Units

Officials who laid cornerstones at Ingleside and Scottdale schools are shown in the top picture above. They are officiating at the laying of the Ingleside school at the time this picture was made Friday, and later moved to the Scottdale unit and laid the cornerstone there. Those in the picture from left to right are Deputy Grand Master of Georgia Masons W. S. Richardson, Grand Master of Georgia Masons James D. Hambrick, of Carrollton; DeKalb County Superintendent of Schools R. E. Carroll and Past Grand Master of Georgia Masons Charles Bass.

Shown below is the new Clarkston school, which was used for the first time when schools were opened there last Monday. The Clarkston building is one of the most modern units in Georgia, and is said to be patterned after the ideal school drawn by educational experts. The plant was constructed at a cost of about $35,000.

DeKalb county in the past two years has spent on new buildings or is now constructing buildings which will run the total to over $250,000. New schools have been built at Clarkston, Emory university and Chamblee. Others are being built at Stone Mountain, Scottdale and Ingleside. Bonds have been voted for a school at Brookhaven.

R. E. Carroll, superintendent of the schools, has been instrumental in the new building projects, and it was under his direct supervision that many of the improvements have been made, it was stated Saturday by members of the board of education. He has been head of the DeKalb county system for 12 years and is considered one of the most modern and efficient school executives in Georgia, they said.

AVIATION FIELD NOT YET CHOSEN

Satisfactory progress toward selection of a site for a municipal landing field was reported Saturday night by Councilman Carl C. Aven, chairman of the council committee appointed to act with a committee of the county commissioners to secure one in time to get Atlanta on military and postal air routes.

Dr. Aven said that the committee was not ready to announce definitely the selection of a site because a number which had been offered have not yet been inspected by his committee, but that the joint committee, in company with Colonel Charles Danforth, of the aviation corps, would inspect all proffered sites during the first half of this week.

"We are confident of being able to submit a definite proposition for action of council at the meeting Monday, October 6," Dr. Aven said, "and we believe that the proposition will be acceptable not only to city and county authorities, but also to army and post-office authorities who must give it final approval."

The Brown's Mill road site, which at one time was leased by the city as a municipal airfield, was the last one inspected last week.

Dr. Aven said that he would ask Commissioner Paul Etheridge, chairman of the county committee, to call a joint meeting Monday. Edwin S. Johnson and Charles Turner are the other commissioners on the committee, and Aldermen J. L. Carpenter and Oscar Williamson are the other council members on the committee.

SECOND MESSAGE SENT TO HOLY NAME SOCIETY

Washington, September 20.—A second message from the pope was received today by the Holy Name society, in convention here, with three lusty cheers for the pontiff's health, led by Cardinal O'Connell, papal legate to the sessions.

Another high pontifical mass, celebrated in the stadium of Catholic university by Cardinal Dougherty of Philadelphia in the presence of Cardinal O'Connell and one of the greatest crowds yet gathered for the convention, opened the day's proceedings, which ended with a pilgrimage to Mount Vernon. Convening immediately after the mass, the convention listened to the pope's message, read by Father Ripple, national director of the Holy Name society.

"The holy father," it said, "deeply pleased by the solemn manifestation of affection and devoted filial homage of the Holy Name societies, sends to the assembled delegates the apostolic benediction."

After cheers for the pope and for Cardinal O'Connell had died down, Father Ripple introduced Archbishop Curley, of Baltimore, who, as official host to the convention, delivered a short speech of welcome, in which he stressed the spiritual and patriotic benefits accruing to the nation through the Holy Name activities.

"You are giving," he said, "the greatest proof of patriotism possible to citizens of this great land. It flows from our religion to love our country as we love our God. Give to Caesar what is Caesar's, without forgetting to give to God what is God's."

He explained the aims and purposes of the Catholic university, of which he is chancellor, and asked all Holy Name men to take an interest in the institution.

Cardinal O'Connell briefly replied to Archbishop Curley, receiving an ovation when he announced that he had decided to remain in Washington over Sunday and to celebrate tomorrow's mass.

The convention adopted a resolution recommending the formation of a permanent extension committee to institute Holy Name societies in all parishes where they are lacking.

GEORGIA FROSH TAKE ATHENS BY STORM

Athens, Ga., September 20.—Led by John Robert Morris, their newly-elected president, this year's freshman class at the University of Georgia took the town by storm tonight in the time-honored fashion. Morris, son of M. S. Morris, of Douglasville, was elected president of the class at a rousing meeting held in the chapel last night, being the only officer elected.

LOUISVILLE REVIVAL TO BEGIN THURSDAY

Louisville, Ga., September 20.—(Special.)—The stage is set for the Dr. George W. Truett meeting, which begins here Thursday night. Announcement is made by W. W. Abbott, general chairman of the committee arranging this unusual event, that the temporary auditorium seating 3,500 people is ready and that all other details have been perfected for the occasion. Meetings will be held daily at 11 o'clock in the morning and at 8 o'clock each night until October 5.

The meeting is supported by all the Christian forces of Louisville, including the Baptist, Presbyterian and Methodist churches, and also by various civic bodies of the town. Mayor R. L. Bethea has issued a proclamation calling upon the people of Louisville to give their hearty support to the meeting as an expression of their interest in an undertaking which promises to bring thousands of visitors to the city for the ten days during the meeting.

Dr. George W. Truett is regarded throughout the United States as an outstanding preacher. The Louisville committee feels that it has been fortunate in securing the man who will perhaps draw more hearers than any other one preacher they could have secured at this time. His annual visits to Altanta for the Bible conference at the Baptist tabernacle have proved his popularity. He has been widely sought during the past quarter of a century as special preacher in evangelistic meetings and on other special occasions. He has accepted very few invitations. The Louisville people appealed to his sense of sincerity when they told him that they wanted to see him go to a community where he could reach the great mass of country people and that

Louisville provided such a center for eastern Georgia. He accepted the invitation in the face of pressing invitations to go to many of the largest cities in the country.

His preaching will attract people from every section of Georgia. Auto parties have already been formed in Florida and in South Carolina to make the trip to Louisville. The highways leading into Louisville are free from weather inroads and will be available for the heavy traffic which the Truett meeting will levy upon them.

Edward Powell Lee will have charge of the singing. Mr. Lee was assistant pastor of the First Baptist church, Macon, last year and was a member of the faculty of Mercer university, teaching a number of courses and directing the Mercer Glee club. He has had wide experience as a song leader and is admirably fitted for the work of leading the big congregations that will assemble here for the Truett meetings.

The three pastors of the Louisville churches are cooperating to have every church member in Louisville at the opening meeting Thursday evening. Rev. W. A. Mallory, pastor of the Methodist church; Rev. M. R. Plaxico, pastor of the Presbyterian church, and Rev. J. G. Gunter, of the Baptist church, are the local pastors and through their influence the pastors of 100 surrounding churches will unite in making the meeting a great event for all this section of Georgia.

The leading business men of Louisville, regardless of denominational affiliation, are on the committees working for the meeting. Prominent business men in surrounding towns, as far as Augusta, are working with the Louisville leaders.

There will be a day service beginning Friday morning. Special arrangements for eating and lodging have been made for visitors attending the meetings.

ROBERTS CONTESTS WESTERN CIRCUIT SOLICITOR'S RACE

Athens, Ga., September 20.—Erastus Roberts, of Walton county, who was defeated for solicitor general of the western circuit by Henry H. West, of Athens, by 39 votes, tonight filed formal protest of the election with the democratic executive committee of Clark and Oconee counties. No protest was filed in Walton county. The protest charges that enough voters, who are tax defaulters, voted for West in the two counties under protest to make Roberts the nominee if their votes are thrown out. Various other irregularities are also charged.

YOUTHS ARE ARRESTED ON STATUTORY CHARGE

Chang Sweeping South on Pekin; Lu Army Doomed

Defender of Shanghai Gradually Withdraws Forces Before Before Superior Manpower of Chi.

LOANS ARE DEMANDED OF CHINESE BANKERS

30,000 Russians Reported Enlisted by Manchurian War Lord for Drive Upon Pekin.

Shanghai, September 20.—While Chang Tso Lin's army continues its unhalted sweep on Pekin from the north, complete defeat seems certain for Lu Yung Hsiang, his ally in the south.

Outnumbered two to one in man power, Lu's army spent Saturday in a gradual retreat before the overwhelming offensive of the forces of Chi Hsieh Yuan.

Heavy firing outside the gates of Shanghai, the roar of which had been heard in the city all day long, ceased at nightfall, when Chi began consolidating his victories of the day for an early morning attack, which may prove decisive. Lu brought up artillery reinforcements from the rear to meet him.

Eight Miles from Shanghai.

The Chekiang forces have been driven back as far as the outskirts of Nanziang, eight miles from Shanghai. They were bombed throughout the day by airplanes from the Kiangsu side and their own planes were able to do little in defense. In the opinion of foreign military experts, Lu cannot possibly hold out for another week.

Already Lu's deserting soldiers are being found among the hordes of refugees pouring into the city. The barbed wire entanglement erected around the foreign settlement has been charged with electricity, and defenses, under the command of Admiral Anderson, U. S. N., are being kept fully mobilized day and night, while the 25 foreign warships maintain steam in the harbor.

Demand Loans of Bankers.

Chekiang generals are demanding forced loans from the Chinese and are imprisoning all bankers and merchants who refuse. Eighty Chinese associations, which demanded an armistice which would prevent looting in the native districts, have been turned down by Lu.

Local Chinese authorities are attempting to persuade Lu to abandon what they call a hopeless struggle, pointing out that Chi has 60,000 men to his approximate 30,000.

Meanwhile, reports here from Mukden declare that Chang, the Manchurian war lord, claims further big gains and that he is reported to have enlisted 30,000 Russians in the army with which he intends to capture Pekin.

GENERAL WU DEFIANT DESPITE HIS DEFEAT

Pekin, September 20.—Undismayed by an initial defeat on the northern front, General Wu Pei Fu, commander of the Chihli forces, declared Saturday that he would fight Chang Tso Lin until he had not only turned back the Manchurian general, but had brought Manchuria under the control of the Pekin government.

Wu estimated that it would take about two months to subdue Chang and claimed that the Chihli faction had 200,000 troops, fully equipped and well trained.

Sallying out in an attempt to take Chang's invading army by surprise, Wu's cavalry is reported to have been severely defeated in the Chaoyang district and Chang is now expected to launch a heavy offensive against the city of Chaoyang within a few days.

Airplanes Do Damage.

Meanwhile, Chang's airplanes are inflicting considerable damage on the Pekin forces and the armies are reported to be only four miles apart.

Chiwi officials seem sincerely optimistic of their chances to turn back Chang's steady progress toward Pekin.

WOMAN, 80, BIDS FOR PUBLIC FAME AS BOBBED BANDIT

London, September 20.—If the American bobbed haired bandit club doesn't impose an age limit on its members, Mrs. Alice Margaret Hawkins, aged 80, is a candidate for admission.

Mrs. Hawkins, fed up with the obscurity and monotony of respected old age, bobbed her own hair with a pair of scissors, bought herself a false face, took the family hatchet and went out looking for plunder.

She invaded a shop in the little town of Weybridge, announced her arrival by imbedding the blade of the hatchet in a new near-mahogany counter and said briefly:

"Outside!"

The shopkeeper obeyed and when the errand boy failed to move fast enough to suit her, Mrs. Hawkins chased him upstairs.

"It's all right," she informed policemen who arrived a minute later. "I'm a member of the royal family and own the town."

MAYOR'S CONTEST CENTERS INTEREST OF CITY PRIMARY

Sims and Key Close Busy Week With New Charges—Prepare for Last Days of Campaign.

HANSELL AND ROBERT WAGING WARM BATTLE

Mrs. George Dixon Seeking City Warden's Place. 27,740 Atlantans Qualified To Vote.

With Mayor Walter Sims defending his own, and by insinuation attacking his opponent's record for sobriety, and with former Mayor Key declaring the Georgia Railway and Power company to be the real issue in this campaign and all others "the beating of a drum to distract attention of the people," the city primary campaign passed out of its preliminary stage Saturday night and both candidates announced plans for devoting today entirely to rest in preparation for the big push to be made during the 60 hours before the polls close Wednesday.

Although nine councilmanic, two aldermanic and four important administrative positions are to be filled, popular interest in the campaign has centered almost wholly around the contest for mayor between the incumbent, who has held the office for the last 20 months and has been an outstanding figure in city council for several years before becoming mayor, and former Mayor Key, who held the office for four years before Mayor Sims and has been active in city politics for nearly a quarter of a century.

27,740 Citizens Eligible.

With 27,740 voters registered, political dopesters are predicting a total vote between 15,000 and 16,000. Less than 15,000 votes were polled

ASSERT COOLIDGE AFRAID OF KLAN

Massachusetts Democrats Lash Republicans, La Follette and Adopt Strong Anti-Klan Plank.

Worcester, Mass., September 20.—Lashing out at the republican administration, the Ku Klux Klan and the La Follette-Wheeler independent ticket, the democratic state leaders repeatedly brought the state convention meeting here today to its feet wildly cheering.

Mayor Curley, of Boston, candidate for governor, was greeted vociferously when he rose to speak.

William H. Lewis, former United States assistant district attorney, hitherto a strong republican, declared he "could not keep company with a party which veils its convictions behind pillow cases and sheets," and declared he was typical of the negro race in seeking justice with the democratic party.

Hits La Follette.

John T. Fitzgerald, temporary chairman and keynote speaker, referring to the candidacy of Senator La Follette, said:

"We must pay particular attention to the laboring men, some of whom have joined La Follette. You who know La Follette's record know he betrayed Roosevelt while under the name of republican. He always played a lone hand from 1812 to 1918. He never worked with either progressive republicans or democrats. When two million Americans were overseas, Robert La Follette pleaded for the Germans and was only saved from following Debs to prison by Penrose and Henry Cabot Lodge."

Coolidge Afraid of Klan.

The resolutions committee reported a platform this afternoon denouncing the Ku Klux Klan by name and charging that President Coolidge was "afraid to raise his voice" against the order.

The anti-klan plank in part follows:

"The Ku Klux Klan is a menace to the peace and security of the country and its free institutions. It should be driven from American public life. Loyalty to American ideals and a sense of duty as president of the United States should have moved Calvin Coolidge long before this to condemn this organization. Yet, we are confronted with the spectacle of the president of the United States, the leader of the republican party, afraid to raise his voice against a society of masked men who are striking at the constitutional guarantees of liberty and religious freedom and who will, if not checked and dispersed, provoke deep disunion and disorder."

Other planks favored the child-labor amendment and modification of the Volstead act and pledged full support to the national ticket.

Calvin Coolidge Is Triple Personality

:: :: QUIET REGARD FOR FITNESS OF THINGS HIS CHARACTERISTIC :: ::

Dominated by Old New England Ideals

The president, while on vacation, received few persons. Among them was Montrose J. Moses, representative of The Constitution and the North American Newspaper Alliance. Although it is a rule that presidents of the United States may not be directly quoted, Mr. Moses gives here an intimate picture of the executive, the candidate, and the man.

This is the first of a series of easy-chair interviews with the leading presidential candidates and their running mates.

Succeeding interviews, to be published Tuesdays, Thursdays and Sundays, will include John W. Davis, Robert M. La Follette, Charles G. Dawes, Charles W. Bryan and Burton K. Wheeler.

BY MONTROSE J. MOSES.

I have been down Plymouth ways a-visitin'. Pennsylvania avenue has become the notch and the executive offices of the white house are crowded into the spacious bareness of a dance hall over the general store. The natives are staggering under the illusion of mistaken identity. The postmistress, month in and month out catering to a steady clientele of 29, begins to feel some of the weight of the postmaster general. Farmers on their way to feed their stock have to dodge secret service men and prove a right to be there after 50 years unquestioned. The Washington newspaper men, out for news, find themselves playing golf at the country club. Political sap doesn't seem to be flowing in Plymouth just now. But there's plenty of wine in the Vermont air and the president is drinking hard these prohibition days.

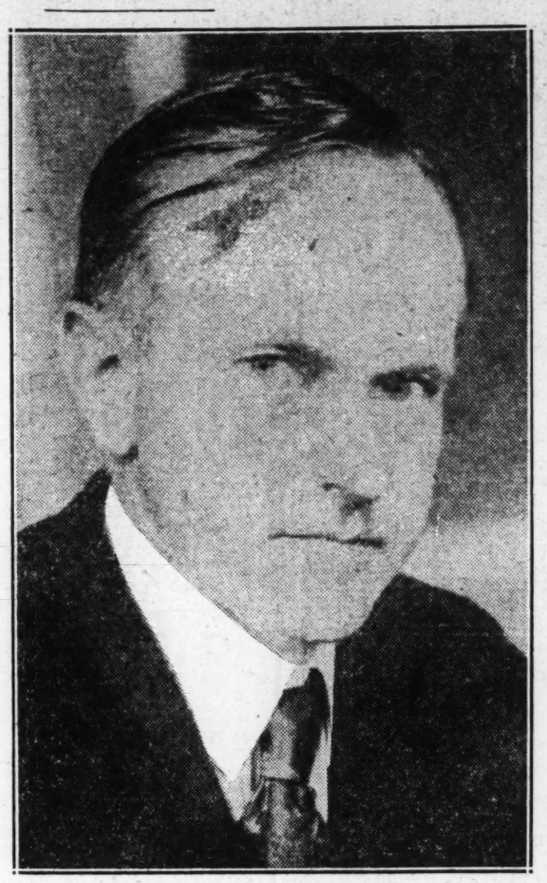

Did I say president? Here's surely a case of triple identity. Even the nation's chief finds it difficult from the recesses of a hammock to tell exactly who he is. What he wants for the present is to be simply a citizen of the home town. But when he goes out on the porch, when he stoops to pick a flower, he hears the click of cameras, he feels the eyes of cameras, he feels the eyes of secret service men and of tourists upon him. It is my impression after talking with Mr. Coolidge that he believes the most sequestered spot for a president is in the white house grounds. If only he could have shipped the Vermont air to Washington during the past sultry days he might have stayed there. But then, he rightly wonders whether the "Cal" of old days hasn't a right to be neighborly with his folks. And he also wonders whether the republican candidate for president shouldn't go about a bit. And then the president in him is in a quandary how far he should let the other two of him go unrestricted.

The great guide to the country up here is the president's secretary, Mr. Slemp; the air, the hospitality, the green carpet of the state have gone to his head. With one hand he waves off all business from the president so as to keep him literally free; with the other he polats eloquently to the undulating hills. A set smile comes over the president's face, with a cold twinkle to the eye.

"Slemp feels the whole country should be a golf course," he says.

In the early morning Mr. Coolidge

FOUND NEW PARTY, NOT THIRD PARTY, LA FOLLETTE'S AIM

Throwing of Election Into Congress Not Primary Purpose of Wisconsin Senator, Says Sullivan.

BY MARK SULLIVAN.

Washington, D. C., September 20.—To many voters about to make up their minds the question must have occurred, "Why is La Follette running?" He does not have the purpose of success, for he does not have the possibility of success. Even in a campaign of extraordinarily immense absurdities from the publicity of men of the various parties, no one in the La Follette party claims seriously that La Follette has any real chance of becoming the next president of the United States. La Follette himself does not claim it.

La Follette and his friends speak frankly of what his purpose is. It is an entirely worthy and dignified purpose, as will be clear when I speak of it more completely in a moment. But to many voters La Follette's purpose must seem a puzzle. Roosevelt, when he led a third party in 1912, had the usual and easily understandable purpose of making himself president. He hoped to win, had good reasons for hoping to win, and readily might have had a good chance to win—if the democrats had nominated some one other than Woodrow Wilson. La Follette has no such chance and no such hope. By no possible foreseeable combination of the complex events ahead of us can La Follette become president of the United States. Some of these events may give La Follette an important hand in deciding who shall be president, but by no combination of chances can La Follette make himself president. And since that can not be his purpose, what is?

Deadlock Result Not Purpose.

The republicans, through the practice of one portion of their campaign strategy, have created the impression that La Follette's purpose is to prevent both Coolidge and Davis from winning at the polls in November and thereby throw the election into congress. If you change the word "purpose" to the words "one probable result," that is a correct statement. It is not La Follette's purpose—at least it is not his primary purpose—to throw the election into congress. But decidedly, and rather increasingly, in the turn the campaign has taken just lately, it is a possible result of the La Follette candidacy that the election may be thrown into congress.

The republicans, in creating this impression of one possible effect of

Board to Discuss Pay for Officers In Fulton County

Preliminary Meeting To Be Held by Commissioners in October.

Various county officers who will go on a salary basis January, 1925, will submit to the county board at its first meeting in October, statement of expenses of office, salaries paid last year and salaries desired for the ensuing year.

The commissioners at this preliminary meeting will take no definite action on salaries until after the general election in November. Nominees of the democratic primary September 10 will be voted on at the November election, but while nomination is equivalent to election, salaries cannot be fixed until after the candidate has been legally elected.

The law abolishing the fee system in Fulton county and substituting the salary basis provides that salaries must be fixed at least 30 days before January 1, 1925, and shall not be changed during the year. Salaries of the solicitor of the criminal court of Atlanta is partially fixed by law.

The solicitor general's salary is fixed by law at $12,000 a year and he is allowed two assistants at $6,000 and $4,200 respectively.

Solicitor of criminal court's salary must be at least $10,000 with one assistant at a salary of $5,000 a year, according to the law.

County commissioners are given full power to fix salaries of tax receiver, tax collector, ordinary, and clerk of the court.

Report Depressed Cotton Unjustly, Harris Charges

Deterioration in Georgia Twice as Great as Reported, Senator Alleges.

Washington, September 20.—Complaint has been made to the department of agriculture that its report of the cotton-crop estimate has unjustly depressed the market, Senator Harris, democrat, Georgia, announced today.

"Cotton has dropped $40 a bale without any reason," he said. "In the state of Georgia, the crop deterioriation was twice as great as the department's report, and I have reason to believe that this condition exists throughout the belt.

"Such practices on the part of speculators," he declared, "will force the passage at the next session of congress of the Caraway bill, which would make it a penal offense to trade on the exchanges in cotton futures without the actual delivery of cotton."

BIG CIDER PARTY DID NOT ATTRACT SQUAD OF RAIDERS

Horde of "Farmers" Helps Wet Congressman Test Kick in 220 Barrels of Cider.

Baltimore, September 20.—It's the government's next step.

Congressman John Phillip Hill had his cider party Saturday night and it was as good as promised, but neither Prohibition Commissioner Roy A. Haynes, who was invited as an honored guest, nor any of his men came to the party.

Hundreds of others came, however, and partook of Hill's now famous 2.75 per cent cider at what Hill calls "Franklin Farms." "Franklin Farms" is a little back-yard plot 100 by 30 feet in the heart of Baltimore, surrounded by six and seven-story buildings. Hill made the cider from seven apple trees growing at the "farms," which has a back wall painted to resemble a red barn, with two cows gazing down from painted windows.

Guests Not Rained Out.

Into these atmospheric surroundings filed Hill's hundreds of guests. They made straight for four 55-gallon cider kegs, from which flowed the cider that Hill brought up with such tender and loving care to the alcoholic content of 2.75 per cent. There was a drizzling rain, but the guests kept on coming.

Nearby were three smaller beer kegs, which were not so popular. They contained half-of-one-per-cent beer. The idea was, Hill had explained, that all the "farmers" who came were to have the cider and any city guests must take the beer. This, Hill figured, was somewhat in accordance with what he considers a silly set of prohibition regulations. It was amazing the number of farmers who came in from the outlying rural sections this night.

1,500 "Farmers" Drank.

Hill estimated that 1,500 "farmers" had been entertained. The party was more than 2.75 per cent hilarious long before that time and this may have shed some light on Hill's claim that cider or beer of 2.75 per cent is non-alcoholic, or it may merely have meant that some of the guests had brought their own.

The only thing that slowed up the party was the fact that some 220 gallons of cider didn't seem to be enough. At 10 o'clock the last barrel was half gone.

Now Hill claims that if the government doesn't arrest him for the party tonight, it will have admitted that both 2.75 per cent cider and 2.75 per cent beer are non-intoxicating. He is the sponsor of several bills before congress to permit the brewing of 2.75 per cent beer.

Hill made it plain that he was ready to go to jail. He said so many times as he shook hands with guests who congratulated him on the success of his party.

At a very late hour no known prohibition agents had shown up, although there were many local officers, deputies, constables and undersheriffs helping guzzle the evidence.

HAGUE MAY LOSE STANDARD OIL JOB AS PARTY RESULT

Resignation Likely as Aftermath of Publicity Over His Party With Edith Bobe.

ROCKEFELLERS FROWN ON SUCH PECCADILLOES

Fate of James Stillman and Beverly Harris Cited as Examples of Oil Magnate's Moral Code.

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

New York, September 20.—The Sunday school influence of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., the same atmosphere that induced James Stillman and Beverly D. Harris to quit their fine jobs with the National City bank when their family scandals became Broadway chatter, may also cause Robert L. Hague to be fired.

Hague, the Marine superintendent of the Standard Oil company in New York, a rich man, married less than a year but estranged from his bride, was the companion of Edith Bobe, the beautiful Broadway dressmaker, when she was held up, beaten and robbed in her magnificent home on East Sixty-Third street one night this week.

For a few hours after the holdup, Edith, better known along Broadway as plain "Bobe," shielded the identity of Hague. She also refused to tell who gave her the $10,000 diamond and platinum bracelet which was the principal item of the robber's loot.

Hague Came Forward.

Hague, himself, boldly came forward and admitted that he was her companion of the evening, but both he and Bobe insist that he didn't give her the "service stripe," as bracelets are called in the chatty lingo which is blown back and forth between tables in the intimate little cabarets of Broadway between midnight and dawn.

Hague's income is said to be around $50,000 a year, which makes him a comparative piker in the company of Stillman and Harris. However, it was enough to qualify him as one of the preferred issues in the Broadway exchange.

Although many officials, both married and single, of many big firms, are notoriously adventurous in the zone of New York's night life, only those connected with Rockefeller institutions seem to be under constant threat of dismissal if found out. Hague's connection with the Bobe case was said to have been discussed at Saturday's meeting of the Standard Oil directors and it was reported that his resignation might be expected.

Forced Stillman Out.

Stillman, connected with the Rockefellers by marriage, was one of the richest men in the country and his position as president of the National City bank made him one of the most powerful financiers on the western continent. Nevertheless, after his divorce action against Fifi Potter Stillman and all the revelations concerning his life with the red-haired Flo Leeds, of the Jersey cabarets, Stillman quietly got out of the National City bank. The Rockefeller influence was credited with forcing Stillman to retire.

Beverly Harris was small potatoes as compared with Stillman, being only a vice president of the National City bank. But when his annulment action against his beautiful wife came to trial in New York and his private life was pretty thoroughly aired to the winds of public opinion, Harris also resigned.

Is Stickler for Virtue.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., has long been known as a stickler for impeccable private life and for his abhorrence of scandal. His distress when his own daughter, Abby Rockefeller, involved herself in a "fixing" case in the traffic court last winter, which resulted in a public inquiry and the public reprimand of the magistrate, may only be suspected. At any rate, Abby was "disciplined" with a trip to Europe in custody of her mother and when she returned she merely smiled but refused to speak to those who questioned her about the police court sensation.

Robbery Not Solved.

The robbery has not been solved and the detectives have encountered so many contrary currents of personal interest in the course of their inquiry that it is doubtful now that they will get enough evidence to convict even if they should arrest the guilty men. They had difficulty obtaining a true list of the people who attended some of Bobe's salons, which ran a wide range from her splendorous living rooms to the venetian walled garden in the rear of the mansion. These guests included some of the brightest names in the electric signs which illumine Broadway as well as names from the blue books of art, literature and society, so the reluctance to come forward is not exactly baffling to the detectives who realize that in a liberal and free-living society there are times when gentlemen or ladies go merry-making beyond the family circle.

Three suspects have been arrested, including another "matinee burglar," who must be at least the 500th imitator of the original thief who invented that trade name. All three of the prisoners have been virtually eliminated and the belief still persists that someone included in Bobe's calling list, probably some woman who greets her with smacking kisses and calls her "dearie," was the "spotter" for the robbers.

LA FOLLETTE DRAWS VOTERS' ATTENTION TO SUPREME COURT

Renewed Agitation in Next Session of Congress Likely as Result of Present Discussion.

BY THOMAS L. STOKES.

Washington, September 20.—Senator La Follette, of Wisconsin has centered the attention of the country on the supreme court and so presented his case that a lively discussion of the question is being taken up, which will result in renewed agitation in congress next session.

Gradually, as the plan of La Follette to have the decisions of the court subject to review by congress is being talked, two camps are springing up. Most lawyers and judges are strongly opposed to any movement to deprive the court of any of its authority, though the Wisconsin senator's plan has met with a favorable reaction, in some few instances, from the legal and judicial school.

It is finding much wider favor among the rank and file of the citizens of the country as the issue is presented. La Follette is driving for the change on the ground that the decisions of the supreme court, dealing as they do with great economic questions which affect the life of the people so closely, rise above mere legal interpretation, and that the representatives of the people, for this reason, should have the right to pass on decisions which affect the rights of the masses so closely

Cites Marshall's Opinion.

Answering those who attack his proposal as "radical and revolutionary," La Follette has called to his support the opinion of John Marshall, who was largely responsible for the shaping of the government through his interpretation of the law as chief justice in the early days of the republic.

In his recent speech in New York, La Follette cited a letter written by Marshall to Justice Cuase, of the supreme court, who was under impeachment at the time, which said: "I think the modern doctrine of impeachment should yield to an appellate jurisdiction in the legislature. A reversal of those legal opinions deemed unsound by the legislature would certainly better comport with the mildness of our character than

SYMPHONY SEASON OPENS OCTOBER 26

Brilliant Series of Concerts Promised—Enrico Leide Will Conduct Orchestra Again This Year

BY RALPH T. JONES.

With the addition of 12 new performers, Atlanta's Symphony orchestra, which opens its fall series of Sunday afternoon concerts on October 26 at Loew's Grand theater, will, it is believed, far exceed in perfection of production the symphony orchestra which created such a magnificent record in the fall of 1923.

The orchestra this year will number between 65 and 70 performers. From a strictly critical viewpoint any lack last year was in the violins, which were not quite numerous enough to give that volume and sweep to their playing which is an outstanding feature of the greatest symphony orchestras of the nation. The addition of 12 more violins this year will certainly remedy this lack.

Another improvement in the arrangements for this fall is the transfer of the Sunday afternoon concerts from the Howard to the Grand theater. While the Howard is a delightful playhouse, with magnificent acoustics, there was considerable disappointment last year among many people who were unable to hear the concerts because of the limited seating capacity of the house. The larger capacity of Loew's Grand will, it is believed, largely remedy this condition this year and it is hoped that every lover of music will be able, without undue difficulty, to secure a seat for each one of the eight concerts.

Liede Is Conductor.

Eight concerts will be given, every other Sunday during the fall season, with Enrico Liede conducting the big orchestra. The orchestra will be arranged upon the stage of the theater, giving perfect conditions and ample

ATTRIBUTES PLIGHT TO BOOTLEGGERS' PLOT

Important New Information To Form Basis of Murder Charge, Says District Attorney.

Mt. Vernon, Ill., September 20.—"Important additional information" has come to light within the last few hours in the case of the Rev. Lawrence M. Hight, Ina clergyman, in jail here charged with the murder by poison of his wife, F. G. Thompson, state's attorney announced today.

"We have the evidence now to go to trial on a murder charge," Thompson said. "I do not care at this time to disclose its nature, but at the proper time we will be able to show that the Ina minister was in the market for poison on a rather extensive scale this summer."

Commenting on the explanation the Rev. Mr. Hight had given for the purchase of poison, the state's attorney said:

Rats Must Have Been Bad.

"The rats in the parsonage must have been very bad, judging from the amount of poison the preacher was buying at drug stores in Mt. Vernon and elsewhere."

Interest today attached to the alleged finding in the parsonage yesterday of a picture, said to be that of Mrs. Wilford Sweetin, whose husband died under circumstances said by officers to have been similar in many ways to those surrounding the death of Mrs. Hight. The picture, it was said, was pasted on the back of a photograph of the pastor underneath the folder, and was discovered by a reporter. The minister denied all knowledge of the picture and said if it was found in the parsonage, some one other than himself had placed it there.

Admission that he had purchased poison three times that he "could remember" in Mount Vernon and Benton drug stores in recent months was obtained from Rev. Mr. Hight at the county jail today, officers said.

Carried off Chickens.

"The rats were awful about the parsonage," said the minister. "They carried off the young chickens right before our eyes."

The state's attorney said he received a letter from John Webster, Benton druggist, stating his records showed Hight had purchased poison there July 22. The state's attorney pointed out that Sweetin died July 28.

The Rev. Mr. Hight yesterday waived preliminary hearing. "I want an early trial," he declared, "in order to clear my name as soon as possible." He insisted he was not guilty of any such charge as had been brought against him, and attributed his plight to a plot of bootleggers whom he had fought from the pulpit.

Methodists Conduct Probe.

Aside from the formal investigation by the prosecution authorities, another is being conducted by the Rev. C. C. Hall, district superintendent, who will place the matter before the meeting of the Southern Illinois Methodist conference next week.

Members of the minister's congregation have reasserted their faith in his innocence and have assured him of their moral support and promised assistance during the court trial.

Autumn Chills Summer's Breath As Cycle Moves

Verdant Green Is Tinted With Red Season's Change.

Summer officially ends Monday morning at 1:59 o'clock.

Trembling leaves, breathed upon by chilly winter atmosphere, and touches of red where verdant green grew throughout the summer, are signs of autumn.

Feeling its first touches of the farewell of summer, Atlanta has clothed itself more warmly and blankets the past week have not been unused. Closed automobiles have flaunted their warmth and comfort, and in the street cars electric radiators remove the early morning chill.

The flapper contingent of the city has bidden adieu to furs, while others donned them. Baseball talk has given way to football prognostication. The vari-colored caps of college freshmen are appearing and fall frocks of modish femininity lend color to the season.

It all reminds us that September soon will give way to October and summer to autumn.

And while the eternal cycle of seasons moves gradually but surely, C. F. von Herrmann, local weather bureau head, announces that Atlantans may expect the same temperatures today as were experienced Saturday, which means from 68 degrees in the early morning to a little over 80 degress in the afternoon.

NEW ARMENIAN QUAKE LEVELS 3 VILLAGES

Constantinople, September 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—Sixty deaths and the destruction of three villages are given as the toll of a new earthquake reported in the Erzerum district of Armenia. Large cracks appeared in the ground from which loud subterranean noises were heard.

The population of the district is panic-stricken. The government is sending aid.

Rheumatic Pain Ended by Treating Inflamed Nerves

In Every Case of Rheumatism, Neuritis, Sciatica or Lumbago, the Actual Pain is Caused by Irritation or Pressure on the Nerves in the Muscles or Joints.

Pain in all forms of rheumatism, neuritis, lumbago or sciatica, is always due to an irritation or inflammation of the nerves. When you feel pain in a muscle, it is the nerves of the muscle that hurt; when the pain is in a joint, it is the nerves of the joint that are affected, just as everyone knows that in a toothache, the pain is in the nerve of the tooth.

The reason so many sufferers fail to get any real relief from liniments and ointments is because these are surface applications only and do not reach the nerves where the pain is. Just as a dentist treats the nerve to end toothache, so must a remedy reach the pain in the nerve of the muscle or joint before it can give you relief.

German science which has long specialized in the relief of pain, has now produced a remedy known as Buhler Oil which when applied to a painful joint or muscle, penetrates right through the skin, reaches the inflamed or irritated nerves—no matter how deep seated—so that relief from pain is quickly obtained from the first application.

Buhler Oil can be had from any of the druggists named below with a written guarantee of sure relief or money back: Jacobs' Pharmacy Co. (12 Stores), E. H. Cone, A. L. Curtis, Tucker Pharmacy, Franklin & Cox, Marshall & Pendergrast.

LUNG TROUBLE HELPED by simple home method

Hundreds of lung sufferers are now reporting prompt relief by new, effective home methods. Of this a Colorado physician says, "Relief has been reported even during early stages of treatment." You may test this new treatment without risking any money simply by sending in name and address to General Remedies Co., Dept. 1552, Denver, Colo. Ask them to send you their free book.—(adv.)

Man Loses Hundreds of Dollars

"I am sorry I did not hear of Mayr's Wonderful Remedy a few years ago, as it would have saved me several hundred dollars. Five years I suffered from indigestion and severe bloating. I grew worse all the time. My doctor said an operation would be all that could save me. I took a course of Mayr's Wonderful Remedy instead and for the past year have been entirely well." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded. Jacobs' Pharmacy and druggists everywhere—(adv.)

CHANG SWEEPING SOUTH ON PEKIN

point out that the imminent collapse of Lu Yung Hsiang's movement in the province of Kiangsu, said to have been instigated by Chang, will enable the Chiwi party to mobilize all its forces against Chang and outnumber him by three or four to one.

Winter Attack Doubtful.

It is an open question, however, whether the Pekin leaders will risk an invasion of Manchuria during the bitter winter, with the attendant danger of arousing Japan, or whether it will endeavor to make a temporary compromise with the Manchurian commander.

It is pointed out that the conquest of Manchuria would be relatively unimportant compared with the hopeful prospect of unifying China proper under a strong Pekin government. It is now felt that the elimination of Sun Yat Sen from the struggle for power in China will present no serious difficulty, and that after he is disposed of, the other minor and more stubborn Tuchuns will soon recognize the authority of Pekin.

PREPARATIONS MADE TO RESIST ATTACK.

Shanghai, September 21.—(1:30 A. M.)—(By the Associated Press.) Preparations were being made this morning by the Chekiang army defending Shanghai to resist an expected heavy attack by the Kiangsu force fighting for possession of the city.

The hours of darkness were busy ones behind the lines.

Rainfall late yesterday checked the intensity of the gunfire for a few hours, but it reopened moderately along the entire front, from the Yangtse coast to the railway early today.

Chekiang defense headquarters, at Lungwha south of here, declared this morning that their position was unchanged in yesterday afternoon's fighting, following the successful Chekiang counter-attack in the morning.

Believe Lines Will Hold.

Spokesmen at Lungwha declared their entire confidence that the Chekiang lines would hold today despite the expected assault.

The prohibition against observers venturing to the battle line was extended by official order this morning, barring them from all points within ten miles of the front.

Shanghai was reasonably quiet this morning, though additional precautions were being taken for protection, in case of emergency of the international settlement. Defense measures already taken were being maintained and guards were being strengthened.

GENERAL WU PLANS TO CHASTISE CHANG.

Pekin, September 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—With 200,000 troops ready to take the field, aided by four squadrons of airplanes and the combined Nanking, Shanghai and Tsintao fleets, General Wu Pei Fu expects to put an end to Marshal Chang Tso Lin's reign in Manchuria within two months, the Pekin government military told the Associated Press when interviewed today.

Based on one experience in which he defeated the forces of General Chang in 1922, when the Manchurian war lord was the aggressor and attempted to invade Chihli province, General Wu authorized the statement that he intends to pursue the campaign until the central government in China again is in position to administer the affairs of the three eastern provinces in which Chang has maintained himself since his defeat.

"Nothing but General Chang's resignation from his self-assumed dictatorship and his complete elimination from the political affairs of China will stay the avenging hand of the Pekin government against the Manchurian war lord, General Wu added. In this connection, he pointed out that Chang had mobilized his forces on the Manchurian-Chihlian border against the Pekin government.

With the reported collapse of the Chekiang forces rebelling against the Pekin government, General Wu pointed out that Pekin war craft now centered around Shanghai will be sent to Manchurian waters for a blockade.

In all these necessary military operations, General Wu continued, it is the desire of the Pekin government to disturb existing conditions as little as possible.

"However, we must relieve the people of Manchuria of the heavy burden of taxation imposed by Chang Tso Lin," he said. "Japanese interests in Manchuria, including the south Manchurian railway, will not be disturbed by the Pekin government," he added.

Season Tickets for Artists Series Will Be Placed on Sale September 29

Season tickets will be put on sale Monday, September 29, for the five concerts of the artists series to be given at the auditorium this fall and winter, the sale to be conducted at the store of Phillips and Crew, Peachtree and Ellis streets, Russell Bridges, president of the southern musical bureau, announces that season seats will be offered at $10, $7.50 and $5 each, plus war tax, which will make a considerable saving over tickets for separate performances. The season sale will last only one week.

"The series is probably the most notable ever offered in Atlanta," said Mr. Bridges, "in that it includes a complete grand opera by a high-class and established company, the San Carlo Opera company, which will present 'Madame Butterfly' on New Year's eve. Tamaki Miura, the Japanese soprano, will sing the title role.

"Paul Whiteman, himself, is booked for January 15, when he will bring his 25-piece jazz orchestra to present his concert called 'An Experiment in American Music.' We expect to fill the house with this concert.

"Vladimir de Pachmann, the veteran pianist whose tour in America has caused so much comment, opens the season on November 14, when he will demonstrate his method of playing, which he claims enables a pianist to play for hours without fatigue. He has been the most widely-discussed pianist of the year.

"The other attractions are the Deni-shawn dancers, led by Ruth St. Denis and Ted Shawn, and Mischa Elman, one of the outstanding violinists of the world.

"After the close of the season sale it will be possible to obtain seats for separate concerts at prices considerably higher, especially for the grand opera performance."

Mail orders addressed to the southern musical bureau, Healey building, will be given prompt attention, and out-of-town patrons will be given especial attention, it is announced.

CHURCH WORKER FINDS BRIDE IN PRISON CELL

Charlotte, N. C., September 20.—A romance which began five weeks ago when a group from the Christian Men's club visited the county jail to conduct religious services ended in a marriage ceremony Friday night when 20-year-old Pansy Thacker became the bride of 24-year-old Lennie W. Silver, salesman for a local store.

The marriage ceremony was performed after Superior Court Judge W. F. Harding ruled that a year's sentence being served by the girl should end if she got married.

Mr. Silver announced today that he and his bride, who is said to be from Burlington, N. C., would leave for Washington or New York, where they will make their home.

LA FOLLETTE DISCUSSES U. S. SUPREME COURT

would a removal of the judge who has rendered them unknowing of his fault."

La Follette's general idea is not without its champions in congress. Senator Borah, of Idaho, is sponsoring a measure which would require the approval of seven of the nine members of the supreme court to declare an act unconstitutional. Senator Fess, of Ohio, regarded as a conservative, is also in favor of a similar charge. He would require two-third vote of the court to declare an act unconstitutional. These changes are sought because of the number of "five-to-four" decisions of the court in recent years on great questions which affect the people.

Fess Hits 5-4 Decisions.

Senator Fess, in discussing his position, said that "when the act of one department involving the judgment of 531 members of house and senate is adjudged by another department composed of nine members, the act should not be set aside as constitutional by a five-to-four vote."

"It might means," he said, "making a law void by so narrow a decision that one man is umpire. This close decision has several times in the past set aside a law. It is the procedure in the national judiciary. It was so in Ohio until 1872, when we changed it.

"I would favor making a similar change in the national practice requiring not less than six of the nine to pronounce a law unconstitutional and void. That makes the judiciary just as independent as before. It does not in the least interfere with its proper function, and does not operate as any sort of attack upon the courts."

FOUND NEW PARTY, LA FOLLETTE'S AIM

La Follette's running, are seeking, quite legitimately, a definite body of voters. We may call it the anti-Bryan vote. It appears that this vote is considerable. It is composed of people who either dislike all of the name and tribe of Bryan, or who, having nothing against William Jennings Bryan in the role of evangelist, and nothing against his brother, Charles W., in the role of brother of an evangelist, nevertheless have always had serious misgivings at the thought of William J. in the white house; and in this campaign have equally serious misgivings at the thought of his brother, Charles W., in the white house. In order to get this anti-Bryan vote, it is a part of the republican strategy to point out that one result of La Follette's candidacy may be to make Charles W. Bryan president of the United States. It is true that this is a possible result, and the republicans are well within both accuracy and their rights to point it out.

Would Found New Party.

La Follette's primary purpose is to found a new party. Not a third party, but a second party. His real aim is to found a permanent party which shall take its place as one of the two main parties of the country and which shall provide an enduring home for radicals, progressives and every degree of political opinion that now fails to find satisfaction with either the republican or the democratic party. La Follette and his friends earnestly believe there are enough such voters in America to make up a party which in future elections shall stand as one of the two main contenders.

La Follette and his friends make no secret about this. In private conversations frequently, and on occasion publicly, they say: "We are looking not to 1924, but to 1928." Another way in which they occasionally express it is that "1924 is to be the 1856 of the La Follette party." By this they mean to suggest an analogy to the beginnings of the republican party—an analogy which, if it should be fulfilled, would be full of promise for the La Follette party. The republicans made their first effort as a party in 1856. They carried ten states, which, incidentally, is the number of states the more optimistic La Follette people hope to carry this year. Then, four years later, in 1860, the republicans established themselves permanently and elected their candidate, Lincoln.

(In this analogy, by the way, there is food for apprehensive thought for the two old parties. The republicans as an incident of establishing themselves in 1856 and 1860, eliminated one of the two preexisting parties, the whigs. If La Follette is to have similar success which of the two old parties is to go to the graveyard in order to make a place for the new one?)

Success Is Doubtful.

This is La Follette's primary purpose. Most of us doubt if it will be successful. All our speculation on this point goes back to Roosevelt and the progressive party in 1912; and we generally sum it all up by saying, "If Roosevelt and the progressives could not establish a third party nobody else can." As Alexander P. Moore, the present ambassador to Spain, who was one of the leaders in the old progressive party, occasionally puts it, "We had the most magnetic leader, we had the best platform, we had the most enthusiastic workers and we had all the money we wanted; if we could not establish a party under those conditions nobody else can."

If it be asked why La Follette makes his try in this present year; why after staying punctilicusly a republican throughout a political lifetime of insurgency, he chooses this present year of 1924 to break away—if this question be asked, the answer lies in the date of La Follette's birth, which was June 14, 1855. La Follette on the 14th day of next June will be 70 years old. His years suggest the fateful now or never.

Even so, La Follette might not make the efort this year, or at all, but for another consideration. He must do it, and do it while he yet has his vitality, or it may not be done at all. There is no one else in sight. There is no one identified with La Follette's politics who even faintly approaches his stature. There is no young man on the horizon. If La Follette should pass away the opportunity would have to wait an indefinite number of years—until some new man should arise around whom a new party of this sort could crystallize. That waiting might be very long. Within the last generation in American politics there have been only two men with the quantity of personality needed to lead so formidable an enterprise, Roosevelt and La Follette.

Roosevelt's Experience.

These are the considerations that crowd La Follette to make his dash in 1924. It may readily be that he makes it with some dismay. In the inner souls of leaders of enterprises so formidable as this, things are not always so rosy as may seem on the surface. Roosevelt, after he started the progressive party, and after he met his initial defeat three months later, knew few moments of hope or even comfort, so far as this enterprise was concerned. From the day of that first election in which the progressive party contended, Roosevelt knew it was doomed. It was true he got over 4,000,000 votes, over 1,000,000 more than Taft and almost within 2,000,000 of as many as Wilson. It was true that he carried six states as against the republicans' two, and 88 electoral votes as against the republicans' eight. It is true that on the surface and sincerely in the hearts of millions of his followers all the motions of a permanent party went on. But Roosevelt was not deceived. To him the test of the new party's performance was not the number of votes he had received but the truer index of the number of congressmen and senators that had been elected. And that number was a negligible handful. From the day of the election Roosevelt knew the progressive party was doomed, and that he as its leader had to share its doom to a large extent. In moody moments of intimacy he used to say, "I am carrying a dead horse on my shoulders."

La Follette's chances of founding a permanent third party this year are inferior to Roosevelt's in 1912. The times are even more against La Follette than they were against Roosevelt. Indeed, the times rather favored Roosevelt. Roosevelt's progressive party was spontaneous fruit of the people's mood and the current of events. La Follette's is not. La Follette is swimming against the tide. A brief analysis of his platform will show this.

Many Issues Dead.

The principal item of La Follette's platform is opposition to monopoly. He shows the place this issue has in his mind by the position he gives it as the first paragraph of his platform.

But who now is concerned about monopoly? Who talks about it? Maybe we ought to be concerned about monopoly. Maybe we ought to talk about it. If so, this is another example of the unhappy distance there sometimes is between what ought to be and what is. Who hears men in smoking cars or in barber shops discussing monopoly?

There was a time when monopoly was a vital issue. In 1908 Bryan made it the backbone of his campaign. (How many can recall, only 16 years later, the device, the formula, Bryan invented as a definition of monopoly: If a corporation has 51 per cent of the business in its line, it is a monopoly and should be prosecuted; if only 49 per cent, let it alone.)

Whether we like it or not, the people have become tolerant of big units of industry. They don't get excited about this subject as they did in the years between 1900 and 1910. Of this change in point of view there is a most vivid example: For 20 years of American politics the prevention of combinations of railroads was a leading and successful issue. Today it is incorporated in the statutes that the railroads must combine into larger units under government compulsion, whether they like it or not; and the combinations are actually under way.

Monopoly in the railroad world, and in the world of public services generally, is, of course, a different matter from monopoly in competitive industries. But even as to the latter, the only outcry now being made against monopoly is that which comes from La Follette, and he is not listened to as once he was.

Views on Supreme Court.

The next point in La Follette's platform aims to take away from the supreme court its power of declaring statutes passed by congress to be void. That, too, was once a living issue, but is not today. When the supreme court declared the first income tax law unconstitutional by a 5 to 4 vote—after one of the justices had changed his mind within the course of a few weeks—at that time, and for the 17 years that followed, there was outcry against the supreme court. But there has not been such outcry recently. Here again, who, by the test of the common talk of men, can discover any great interest?

Of the fundamental points in La Follette's platform, the third is the public ownership of the railroads and other forms of public utility. Apply once more the test of public interest in the subject, and who can find enough such interest to justify the expectation of such a revolution as would be the sucessful establishment of a new party?

Aside from his disinterested public purposes, La Follette may have, consciously or unconsciously, a personal one. Most of us have in all our enterprises. Most of us habitually and steadily seek the expansion of our egos, the gratification of whatever may be the degree of our appetites for fame and name. Probably La Follette has more of this than most of us. Practically all big men—big in the political sense—have. One of the interesting details of La Follette's personal history is the fact that as a young man, as a student in Wisconsin university, he had an outstanding interest in two characters of Shakespeare. He wrote lectures on them, lectures that commanded respect from critics. One of these lectures he has continued to deliver up to recently. The two characters who absorbed La Follette's interest were Hamlet and Iago. And Hamlet and Iago are among the two greatest egos in all literature; excelling in self-consciousness about their honor, their reputations, about how other men thought of them. It would be in accordance with a familiar law of psychology if La Follette has an ego analogous to that of the literary characters who interest him so greatly; and if he is eager to add to his place in history the crowning detail—since he could not be president—of founding a party. If La Follette has this among his motives, it is entirely worthy. The public is indebted to the ambitions of individual men for a good many of its most prized institutions.

STAR MOTOR CARS

Jackie Coogan Is Greeted

:: 9-YEAR-OLD MOVIE STAR GIVEN OVATION ::

As Boy Crusader in Paris

Paris, September 20.—Jackie Coogan has arrived here on his way to the near east with a million-dollar cargo of foodstuffs and clothing for orphans under American care in the near east.

Thousands of Parisians, most of them adults, welcomed the young American movie star when he arrived Saturday. It was such a big crowd that many in the rear, not knowing that Jackie was in the center of it all, thought it could be no one but the French premier who was receiving such an ovation and cheered lustily—"Vive Herriot."

Although accustomed to crowds in America, "the kid" seemed frightened at the gesticulations and shouts in a strange tongue which greeted him.

Forty gendarmes were required to push back the crowd when he was carried with his parents from the station to an automobile.

Friends and admirers have planned a happy time for Jackie here. He will be accorded honors probably never before received by a nine-year-old child, not even a child of royalty.

President Doumergue will receive Jackie at the Elysee palace. Monsieur President is a little man in statue and won't have to reach down very far to shake Jackie's tiny fist. Also Jackie will meet another great citizen of France, M. Clemenceau. The famous "Tiger" is known for his ironic wit and dominating personality. But there is a softer side of him that only little children know. Jackie probably of this grand old man, and the two will bring out the most lovable traits ought to become firm friends, although there are more than three score and ten between them. M. Clemenceau is a strong booster for the American relief workers, and he wants to tell Jackie what a fine thing he is doing by coming here in the interests of other children.

French children gathered at the station quickly recognized Jackie. They know him well. His pictures are as popular here as they are in America, especially his first picture, "The Kid." Jackie was surprised that these foreign children knew him so well, "such a long way from Los Angeles," but he will understand Sunday when he passes down the boulevards and sees his pictures on big display signs in front of movie theaters. He is known here as "Le Gosse," which is "The Kid" in French.

One of the first to greet Jackie at the station was Frank M. America, an official of the near east relief, who came here from Athens to conduct him on his tour. With his parents, a secretary, nurse and valet, Jackie was taken to the Ritz, where he occupies a luxurious suite. One of his first requests was to be taken to the top of the Eiffel tower. Looking out of the train window the tower was the first thing he saw of Paris and he recognized it from pictures he had seen in school books. He will realize his ambition to climb it, for a special concession has been made for him, since it is against the rules for children to go to the top.

The "children's crusade" that Jackie is conducting has met with a sentimental response in Europe, and Jackie has been received as a little hero, personifying the American child who wishes to help and play with other children not so fortunate.

NEGRO SHOT DOWN IN GAMBLING RAID

Henry McMichael, negro, was shot and perhaps fatally wounded by Patrolman J. F. Nance, when the negro, with several other negroes and white men was caught at 11:30 Saturday night in a gambling game at a garage on Hills avenue, according to the officers.

According to Patrolman Nance and George B. Lee, who made the raid, McMichael attempted to escape and put his hand to his hip as if to reach for a gun. Patrolman Nance then fired on him.

Escaped Murderer Of Georgia Officer Held in San Diego

San Diego, Cal., September 20.—A man described as Dr. J. W. Peacock, who, according to officers of the local sheriff's office, escaped from state prison in Georgia two years ago after being convicted of murder, was arrested near here today on a ranch, where he had lived since February. It was announced that he would be turned over next week to S. J. Busbee, warden of the Georgia state prison.

According to information furnished the sheriff here, Dr. Peacock shot and killed the police chief of Thomasville, Ga., firing first through a window and then entering the chief's office and shooting into his body. He was sent to prison June 21, 1924, and escaped two years ago.

The man made no resistance when the sheriff's deputies reached his ranch.

MAYOR'S CONTEST CENTER OF INTEREST

in the primary two years ago with five mayoralty candidates in the race, with a definite fight on the Ku Klux Klan and a referendum on a site for Girls' High school to stimulate interest. No effort has been made by any candidate in this campaign to stir up the klan issue.

The contest for chief of construction is commanding city-wide interest secondary only to that in the mayoralty campaign. William A. Hansell, incumbent, is opposed by C. S. Robert, who was elected county surveyor in the county election last March. Chief Hansell, in the eleventh ward Saturday night, said that his friends had helped elect Robert surveryor in an effort to keep him out of the race for chief of construction, which he had made unsuccessfully against Hansell two years ago.

Mrs. George Dixon's contest for the office of city warden against W. H. Johnson, incumbent, is centering interest because Mrs. Dixon is the only woman running in this campaign and the first woman to seek a city hall office.

W. F. Florence and C. E. Gillet are running for city tax collector to succeed Marvin Roane, who declined to stand for reelection.

W. E. Harwell, city marshal, is being opposed for reelection by W. S. LaSalle, at present connected with the construction department.

J. Allen Couch, councilman from the Fifth ward, is carrying his campaign for alderman against Foster Hunter, incumbent, into every ward in the city while Alderman Hunter is conducting a quiet campaign for reelection.

Carl Dolvin, a former councilman who was defeated by Alderman I. N. Ragsdale three years ago, and C. M. Ford, new to politics, are running for the seat as tenth ward alderman to be made vacant when Alderman Ragsdale becomes a county commissioner in January.

Candidates Unopposed.

Alderman W. B. Duvall, of the first ward, whose term also expires in January, is not being opposed for reelection. Councilman Pennington, of the first; Dr. C. J. Vaughan, of the fourth, and W. H. Johnson, of the eleventh, are not opposed.

The second ward is the scene of the only three-cornered race in the city, with C. G. Allen and J. W. Weaver both fighting to unset Councilman J. A. Beall, who has served the ward for several terms.

Charles S. Chosewood, former alderman and councilman, is opposing J. J. Greer for reelection as third ward councilman.

Charles Garner and Tom Morris are running for the councilmanic seat in the fifth ward now held by Councilman Couch.

Councilman Harry York is being opposed by Ed Bond in the sixth.

Wiley Moore, elected by council to fill the unexpired term of Arthur Dyer, is being opposed by W. M. Rogers, whom Dyer defeated two years ago.

Councilman J. L. Wells, of the eighth ward, is opposed by former Councilman Frank H. Reynolds.

Cobb and Knight.

Councilman C. D. Knight, of the ninth ward, is opposed by Bobb Cobb, Jr., and Councilman Garland Cooper, of the tenth, by C. J. Wooten.

Councilman William E. Saunders, of the Twelfth, is opposed by former Councilman L. J. Cassells.

All voters who registered specifically for the city primary, either at the court house, the city hall or the League of Women Voters' registration booth, are included in the 27,740 who are eligible to vote, it was made plain Saturday by City Clerk Walter C. Taylor.

Some confusion as to qualifications developed over the removal of the office of city registrar from court house to city hall by city ordinance at the beginning of this year, it was stated.

No questions except the choice of the candidates named are to be settled at the election Wednesday, the city democratic executive committee having rejected all proposals to tack referendums on public questions onto the primary ballot.

Voters in A precinct of the tenth ward will cast their ballots at 69½ Lee street in the city primary Wednesday, it was stated Saturday by W. J. Laney, secretary of the city democratic executive committee. All other polling places were announced Friday.

Hits Anonymous Ballots.

In speeches Saturday night, Sims, at Peachtree and Fifteenth, in the eighth ward, and Key at Slaton school, in the third, and Faith's Crossing in the eleventh, the two candidates covered practically the same points they have touched in previous speeches during the last four weeks.

Mayor Sims again pitilessly assailed the sender of anonymous ballots, tending to damage the character of the mayor and candidates for other offices, designated by the ballots as members of the Sims-Taylor political clique.

"Every little sniper and submarine politician wants to take a shot at men in public life during a campaign," the mayor stated, "and it was just such a man as this that mailed out these anonymous ballots. Every candidate opposed by the sender is designated as a member of the Sims-Taylor political ring, and as a wet."

"Is the Atlantic ocean dry? If it is Jim Key, our would-be congressman, also is dry. I have gone on many trips since becoming mayor of this city, but I did not have to go to a hospital to recuperate from any of them before I was able to resume my duties. I never had to be assisted or carried from the mayor's office because I was too intoxicated to walk. I never took a drink in the city hall while mayor of this city."

Taylor Supported Key.

"Walter Taylor supported Key when Key was elected four years ago, but he will not support him now, so Key is sore. My opponent charges I am a member of a political ring, but the charge is absurd. However, it would be better to be a member of almost any sort of ring than the Key-Huff ring.

"The same ring that fought me two years ago is fighting me now. They are not after the office of mayor, but seek that of chief of police. If I had appointed a certain man chief of police, and if I had acceded to the demands of a political ring, I would have no opposition now."

Sims also spoke of the Ansley Park sewer problem, stating that sewers built in that section of the city during Key's administration were paid for by Ansley Park residents.

"I have built more sewers in Ansley Park during the past 20 months than Key did during his entire four years," he declared, "and I'm not a member of the golf club, either. Until hearing one of my opponent's addresses, I didn't even know that being a member of the golf club was a requisite of a mayoralty candidate."

Spring Street Viaduct.

"My opponent claims credit for the Spring street viaduct idea," the mayor said, "but he never thought of it. The only progressive idea conceived of by Key during his entire term as mayor was that of building a public comfort station in the front yard of the city hall, and he had to make several inspection trips and study the situation carefully before he could make that great improvement. A member of the board of county commissioners told me that even all the money for that wasn't paid by the city, but that the county gave $1,000 with the understanding that the station was to be built in the basement of city hall.

He also reviewed practically every other issue of the campaign, including the school situation, negro high school, increase in water rate, Key's employment agency, infant mortality, and Key's failure to raise the pay of city firemen.

In comparing his record with that of his opponent, Sims stated that when Key was mayor, street car fares were raised twice, gas rates once, tax rates four times, and practically all other expenses of which the public bears the burden at least once.

J. Allen Couch, candidate for reelection as alderman, followed Sims on the improvised platform. Both were introduced by Mrs. B. M. Boykin.

Pensions Made Issue.

Mr. Key opened his Eleventh ward address by calling to the platform J. W. Dickson, former construction department employee, one of the men who had been cut from the temporary pension roll by Mayor Sims at the first of this year and later was reinstated by council over the mayor's veto.

Dickson declared he had spent 21 years in the city's employment until he was crushed by an automobile while working on a street paving job, during Key's administration. The pension granted then had been stopped by Mayor Sims, he said, although he is still unable to work.

Key declared that he believed in pensioning all men injured in the city's service and keeping them pensioned, regardless of whether they recovered sufficiently to do other work, until they could resume the tasks at which they had been injured.

"It would be mighty discouraging for a fireman or a policeman to disregard his own life and his own body for the public good, knowing at the time that the city would pitch him aside like an old shoe if he got hurt doing it," the candidate declared.

Union Labor Record.

Key review his record of friendship to union labor, calling for members of the street car men's union or the electrical workers union in the crowd to vouch for his position as a friend of the working man "when he needs a friend and not just when I need his vote."

He then plunged into a bitter attack upon the Georgia Railway & Power company and what he alleged to be its methods in politics.

"It works like a common pickpocket, starting a big noise way over there somewhere to get your attention while the stealing is going on over here," he declared.

"The company is going about peddling a lot of prejudices about the negro high school and other things trying to get your mind off your business while its officials are getting ready to sock you good and plenty," he asserted.

Rate Increase Pending.

Application by the power company for higher street car fares, higher gas and electric rates, higher power rates, relief from paving charges, lower receipts, tax charges and other new privileges are all pending and all being kept quiet now awaiting the outcome of the election Wednesday.

"If you send this gang back with a red hot commission from the people, you are going to pay for it, and pay a plenty," he declared.

"That's why they're spending all this money on this election, $25 a day for Sims workers in some cases, and they mean to charge it all up to you if they win," he charged.

"And I'm opposed to their cutting down on what they're paying these workers," he said. "I'm opposed to cutting any kind of wages and I'm opposed to scab politicians just like I'm opposed to scab labor."

Key was introduced by Alderman J. R. Bachman, his campaign manager.

Hansell Makes Plea.

Chief of Construction William A. Hansell spoke before Key's arrival, reviewing the $909,000 street paving program put through already this year and explaining that it would have required $350,000 instead of the $50,000 appropriated by council to keep all Atlanta streets in perfect condition.

He said that he and his friends had supported his opponent, C. S. Robert, in a successful race for county surveyor last spring in the hope that it would keep him from making another race for chief of construction, "which takes a lot of hard work and money," and urged that Mr. Robert be "permitted to keep the job he's already got and that we keep ours."

Charlie Ford and Carl Dolvin, rival candidates for Tenth ward councilman, and Mrs. George Dickson, candidate for city warden, also spoke.

Although both candidates for mayor issued statements Saturday, each declaring himself sure of a sweeping victory, both also announced plans for continuing the drive for votes from the hustings right up to the eve of election day. Sims speaks at Little Five Points in Inman Park, Ninth ward, while Key speaks at English avenue school, Fifth ward, at 8 o'clock Monday night. Sims closes his campaign at the corner of Carnegie way and Spring street, Sixth ward, and Key has at Howell Park, at Seventh ward, at 8 o'clock Tuesday night.

SYMPHONY SEASON OPENS SEPTEMBER 26

room for the best possible rendition of the numbers.

Sale of memberships to the Symphony association, each membership carrying with it the right to two reserved seats for each concert, is proceeding rapidly. Applications for membership should be filed at the Peachtree street store of Phillips & Crew Piano company. Memberships vary in cost from $15 up for the season. A $15 membership entitles the holder to two reserved seats for each concert on the lower floor of the theater. A $20 membership includes two reserved seats in the loge, while box memberships, carrying reservations of six or eight seat boxes, cost $150 and $260, respectively, for the entire season.

Admission to the balance of the house is free to the general public, who will also be admitted to any untaken seats in the reserved sections after the opening number of each concert is concluded.

Doors will be opened at 2 o'clock, one hour before the time for the beginning of the concert. Patrons will be required to stand in line and will be admitted to the unreserved sections on the principle of first come, first served, until all are occupied.

Hodgson to Appear.

The opening concert on October 26 is featured by the appearance of Harry Hodgson, famous young concert pianist of Athens, Ga., who will give two piano numbers during the course of the program. The feature of the orchestral program will be Tchaikowsky's "Marche Slav," which was one of the most popular numbers introduced to Atlanta by the orchestra in 1923.

The number of memberships in the association is necessarily limited to the number of reserved seats which are available. Approximately 500 memberships are to be sold, of which number 400 have already been taken. Therefore, with but 100 still to be sold, it is advisable that any who may wish to secure them, with the attendant advantages of the seat reservations, make application at once to the Phillips & Crew company.

New members admitted to the association during the past week are as follows:

Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Arnold, Mr. and Mrs. Edward P. Amerine, Mrs. E. S. Anderson, Mrs. L. P. Blackburn, John A. Brice, Francis Clarke, Thomas W. Connally, Dr. and Mrs. B. T. Carter, Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Have you seen this new car?

—It is both a closed car and an open car!

VALUE POINTS—
New Special Six

1 The new closed-open DUPLEX BODY framed and shaped in steel. It is light, steel-strong and permanently beautiful. The price is the same as that of an open car.

2 Genuine Balloon tires—the big tires with the small wheels, 20x6.20 in., which means riding comfort, protection for the chassis and body against road shocks, greater braking surface, much less possibility of skidding.

3 Chassis and body mechanically designed for balloon tires, steering, springs, and even the fender lines moulded to harmonize in appearance with big tires.

4 New Force Feed Oiling System with new idea in clean surplus oil supply.

5 The design of the crankshaft gives an entirely new sensation in smooth vibrationless performance.

6 New satin-lacquer finish in dark blue with ivory striping.

7 New ease in gear shifting, new ease in brake power and control, new ease in steering and clutch action. More room than in any other car of its wheel base. New comfort in balloon tires, long springs and a new idea in seat cushion springs.

8 Four-Wheel Brakes optional—a system totally unlike anything ever used on an American car before—unsurpassed in simplicity, safety and power. Pressure developed automatically—you apply it like you apply engine power.

A WEEK ago the new Studebaker Special Six DUPLEX-PHAETON was first announced

Today, countless thousands of people are talking about this entirely new type of car.

One moment it is a closed car—in five seconds it can be transformed into a delightful, airy, open car. But it is always the closed car in deep soft cushions, beautiful fittings and finish and luxurious riding comforts.

When you see it and ride in it you will know why it has made so profound a sensation—you will realize then that it gives you more than the finest open car can ever give you, plus the comfort and protection of the closed car.

And all at the price of an open car!

And this is the new DUPLEX BODY on the famous Special Six Chassis.

Hundreds of thousands of owners all over this country and abroad have given the Studebaker Special Six a name for value, dependability and performance second to no other automobile.

The new Studebaker Special Six retains all the qualities which make great reputation—to these have been added every real improvement which science and owner-service could suggest.

Even aside from the sensational new DUPLEX BODY—the Studebaker Special Six has no superior in value in any car yet built. It was the conscientious intention of Studebaker in planning and designing the new Special Six to make it just such a leader—to that end every resource of the great Studebaker organization has been concentrated.

Even if we had the space we could not begin to tell you of the very many new and unusual features which indicate its superiority.

Certainly no words could do justice to its distinctive beauty.

In appearance it is unlike any other American car—yet its long, low, broad, sweeping lines are conservative, crisply stylish and in beautifully good taste.

Think of the new Studebaker Special Six Duplex-Phaeton as the ultimate in value and performance in a five-passenger car—think of it as a car matchless in practical convenience and desirability.

But to appreciate the sparkling beauty of its totally new lines you must see it. To know its perfection of operation and performance you must ride in it and drive it.

If you have not seen this NEW type car—come today.

HUDSON FACTORY FIRST TO MAKE CLOSED CAR

"There is an unusual combination of comfort, performance and super beauty in Hudson and Essex enclosed cars," said J. W. Goldsmith, Jr., Georgia distributor. Motorists will be interested to know of Hudson's long and distinctive connection with enclosed cars.

"First of all, Hudson was the originator of the type of car known as sedan. The first sedan ever to be built by anyone was constructed and named by the Hudson Motor Car company away back in 1913. At that time an enclosed car was a great novelty and Hudson's venture was considered a daring departure.

"Hudson also originated the coach. The coach was first applied to the Essex by the Hudson organization, but it was shortly afterwards made a part of the Super-Six line. In a very short time the coach business has increased by leaps and bounds until the coach is said to be the largest selling six-cylinder enclosed car in the world.

"The Hudson Super-Six coach became the first car in history ever to sell at exactly an open-car price. Its cost now is exactly that the the Hudson seven-passenger phaeton. Hudson now makes a greater volume of enclosed cars than it does open ones, which is why this price equality is possible. This is true of Essex, too."

walks over those hills, clean-cut against the sky. He has grown up with the very trees around; no president—unless it were Roosevelt—has ever had so quick an eye for the flight of bird, for the variety of timber; with a glance he tells you who is raising what hereabouts. And then he goes back in recollections to crops in his grandfather's day. These shapely hills have shaped him; they cradle the memory of his boyhood; and now they cradle his own boy resting in a little cemetery, to which he makes daily pilgrimages, a bare four blocks away—down the road a piece.

The Colonel's Son Is Visitin'.

Plymouth's main square is stirring. The country store was sold some time since. Its owner moved to Ludlow in the hope of seeing more than one automobile every hour or two. Now, there's congested traffic on the main square, with Vermont motor police directing it. Official mail wagons dash past, army cars speed down the road unmindful of the cows in the pasture and of the instability of wooden bridges which as they pass rattle like musketry; the stuffed owl on the piano above the stove, near Mr. Slemp's wooden-horse improvised desk almost blinks in astonishment. Times for twlve days have changed in Plymouth, and, as a matter of fact, times have changed forever in Plymouth since they gave their son to be president.

Around the porch outside the postoffice hovers the president's father—a host to hosts. He's on his home ground; however many hands he has to shake he's Colonel Coolidge, of Plymouth—and his son's across the road visitin'.

On the opposite corner lives an aunt of the president. I saw her only yesterday wearing a sou'wester, and feeding her chickens in the rain. Across the ironingboard in her house I was shown a tintype of Calvin at 2, in its original embossed paper frame—a chubby little fellow with tinted cheeks and a little compressed mouth. Surely it's home ground here in Vermont.

The president views it all very personally—but he can also stand aside from it, as he did with me, and say that, even as these, his people, are going about their business of watering the cows, gathering the hay and storing the feed, with the president of the United States nearby—so the nation during moments of high stress, commensurate to the stress felt by this small community at the present time—always show their common sense, their balance.

On Radicalism.

It was in this connection that we turned the conversation to the radical spirit. The president has inbred faith that no radical tendencies can stalk abroad which will not eventually be tempered by the saneness of the American people. In fact, it is my impression that even in countries where radicalism has the upper hand, like Russia, the president waits the slow movement of large bodies toward clear-minded intention to keep international obligations.

From the postoffice porch of the general store one can see the Coolidge home up the side street a bit—the barn, the stable, the kitchen, the living room, side by side and interjoined. The bay window reveals the president in the rocker reading the morning paper. The radio is to his left. There's a story about this radio. It is a counterpart of the one on the Mayflower. It was sent to Colonel Coolidge as a present by a radio company. For days it remained in its packings at Woodstock. The colonel had to debate whether or not he had a right to accept such a gift. Again the quandary of identities. Who was he?

I went up the street by the Episcopal church, where on clear Sundays in summer the organ is brought outside for open-air service, and across the road to the Coolidge porch where a short while before I had seen Mrs. Coolidge separate flowers destined for the cemetery. The president met me in the living room and for a long while I had a talk with Mr. Coolidge of Plymouth. If that indeed were only so I might quote him. I might even quote the republican presidential nominee. But there sat the president of the United States also, and so I must be careful.

His Type of Mind.

But the fact remains I talked with all three. And I saw all three merge into the personality of one man. Long before this I had discovered the transcendental in Mr. Coolidge. It may not be customary for him to talk of Plato and Emerson and fundamentals, but I have heard him on such subjects. This is his type of mind. He must have a bedrock fundamental to begin with. He doesn't speak until that bedrock fundamental is found. In the meantime he does a heap of thinking. In the busy days since August, 1923, when he entered the white house, he has had no time to do anything but the work at hand; he has had to study the problems suddenly put upon him for decision. I asked him if there was any moment when he could read for sheer amusement. He shook his head negatively and outlined to me the hugeness of a president's work in comparison with the simplified work of the presidents in the past. The job has grown in Washington with the years; the president's indication of it reminded me of what the head usher at the white house once told me about the growth of official housekeeping. "It's not so long ago," he said, "that the white house staff consisted of a coachman and a cook; now there are 36 taking care of the president's comfort."

In the midst of work, however, Mr. Coolidge gets an indirect relief from the strain of work. I am told on good authority of an evening not long ago in the white house—the scene is the president's study on the second floor. He is seated in an armchair with his feet upraised, a dog in his lap, a state paper in his hand, while through the open door he listens subconsciously to Mrs. Coolidge playing the piano in the next room. As I sat in the living-room at Plymouth and saw through the open door in the parlor a piano, on the rack of which was a campaign song, a hymnal and a songbook, the distance between the white house and Vermont was not very far—a mere matter of relativity.

The Clock Struck 10.

We sat there some time by the colonel's Glenwood stove—shining with the touch of good housekeeping—while before us from the old-fashioned secretary stared the statute books of Vermont. There were many intervals of silence, but no barriers. He took his time and talked when he wanted to.

There's a story of a visitor to the white house—a writer who spent the night there, sent to "observe" the president. After dinner the two sat before the open fire. Silence. A futile effort on the part of the interviewer to get "information." Ten o'clock struck, and in the silence he rose.

"Mr. President, I wish you good night."

An extended hand from the chief executive. "I hope you will sleep well," he said. Then the famous blank smile, not forced but slow suffusing. "Don't you think," he said, "it would have been well for you to let the president make the first move?" A sense of humor here, with a certain impersonal sense of the position he was holding. I suppose every president faces that quandary of etiquette. Recall Roosevelt debated how far he should allow his sons to throw pillows at their father and how far at the president of the United States.

We barely touched upon the present political situation. Dawes' speech was upmost in his mind and he interpreted the general's use of the word "straddling" as meaning that the weakness of his opponents lay in the fact that they did not nominate either two Davises or two Bryans. The president cannot analyze privately for publication what he is expected to say officially. But one can gleam from the way in which he returns to some of his pet themes what is of greatest concern to him outside of official statement.

The Constitution Not Outworn.

He brought the conversation to the subject of the constitution—for there has been much talk of late that the constitution is outworn, that we have outgrown it. More than once has the president expressed his belief that the true force of public service is to be had only through adherence to the constitution. Someone close to the president told me once that when asked his opinion of this restless attitude toward the constitution he answered indirectly, "If you remove power from the supreme court, where would you put it?"

At this point in our conversation an army officer stood before the screen door of the Coolidge porch, carrying a basket of fresh vegetables and some newly-caught fish.

"Let Aurora get busy with them," said the president genially. Some friend had brought them and had come to call. A sun-tanned former state attorney general, summering across the mountain. There was exchange of greetings, inquiry as to relatives and friends, a tracing of genealogy; many times have I heard the president, before he became so, inquire as to who this person married and all about a certain family unto the third and fourth generation. These two men spoke of early days in and near Plymouth, they located where tanneries had been in boyhood times. They spoke of wheat and flax and spinning-wheels, and new and old style field rakes. And then followed the swapping of fish stories.

"I went fishing the other day," said the visitor.

"And I suppose you let the biggest one get away," suggested the president, with the usual slow beam. Then followed a recollection. "I remember," said Mr. Coolidge, "in the pond yonder—" pointing his long white hand in that direction—"when I was a boy they caught a ten-pounder!"

"Not a black bass," challenged the visitor; "it must have been a pike."

"Yes, a pike," said the president. And so they went on until we finally were left alone again.

Defines Americanism.

"This country reminds me of the Wordsworth lake region," I suggested. There was cordial assent; it seemed to set the president's mind in another channel, not new, for his speeches are filled with the subject. I quoted to him the first line of Wordsworth's ode to duty: "Stern daughter of the voice of God." Once more the president reiterated his belief in a sense of duty as being the greatest national asset, and the supreme duty to support law and order. In this way he defines Americanism—a call to duty. Citizenship, so he said to me again in substance, consists in the supreme duty of the individual to take full part in public affairs.

I would infer, and were it possible I would almost quote—his belief is that the consuming duty of this country at the present time is to give stability to the world. I am sure that it is his conviction that this duty has been largely forwarded by the successful culmination of the Dawes plan, which is helping to dispel the fog of the European situation. He was once heard to say that the head of Europe could not forever rest on the lap of the United States; that it must be lifted in order that Europe could help herself. He has watched carefully every effort on the part of European states to meet their economic and financial obligations, for it is his conviction that any failure to so meet these obligations shows a lack of the sense of moral obligation. Human conduct is what interests Calvin Coolidge more than anything else.

It is my impression that part of the proverbial silence of the president is due to his firm belief that talk so often breeds a wrong reaction. He deplores the overaccentuation of certain matters which, were they left to themselves, would either fade away or become stereotyped and harmless. I'm of the belief that, being on the side of law and order and religious liberty, the president would denounce any attempt to undermine the essential spirit of our national life. He mentioned newspapers that he admired and which had erred on the side of overaccentuation of such matters.

Loath to Show Emotion.

Some, however, may credit Mr. Coolidge's silence on certain points to political expediency, but the Coolidge of academy, Amherst, and early Springfield days was a silent being. I recall an incident which occurred in my presence during the vice-presidential term. I was with him in his office at the capitol. A visitor approached him.

"What shall I say to that man, Mr. Vice President?" he asked. Mr Coolidge dropped his pencil and looked up.

"Is it necessary to say anything?" was the laconic, disconcerting reply. The man was taken aback. The vice president continued: "Aren't you a sufficient student of human nature to know that he will be more flattered by your listening to him than by your talking to him?" A typical Coolidge attitude.

Has the president an emotional quality? It is deep-seated; like all New England, he is loath to show that quality, but often-times it comes out unexpectedly. A visitor to the white house last winter told me of such an incident. He was with the president in his study, whose windows overlook the Potomac. After a while Mr. Coolidge arose and went to one of the windows; he pulled aside the curtains and stood there a long time, silent and still. Then he turned.

"Do you know," he exclaimed. "I've been trying to put myself in Lincoln's place when he stood by that very window and realized that just across the water the Confederate army threatened the national capital. The moment must have been staggering."

There is no clammy reaction here; imagination and feeling are uppermost, but they are in control. Self-control is a goodly Vermont inheritance of Calvin Coolidge. One can detect in the way he met the recent death of his son—a white heat of quiet submission. But it is a white heat which explains the firm compression of the lips, the sometime impassive expression of the face.

Touch of Orient Is Found At New Curry Tiffin Kidei

:: GLOW OF SOFT LIGHTS ADD TO BEAUTY ::

BY PIERRE VAN PAASSEN.

Lanterns swaying softly in the cool breeze of evening, brass charcoal braziers in which glow soft, red lights, the intoxicating perfume of Oriental incense escaping from tiny censers, Buddha-shaped and many-hued tin plate from the Malay Straits, food from the fashionable establishments of high caste Hindu and Parsee quarters—in short the languorous, colorful influence of the East has been brought to Atlanta by H. Palmer, proprietor and operator of Curry Tiffin Kidei, the new restaurant at Corner of Peachtree and twelfth street.

With utter disregard for expense Mr. Palmer has fitted up an establishment that would do credit in the midst of metropolitan setting. Flaming yellow, color of highest Hindu social classes, is the "leitmotif" of the eating salons and reception rooms which resemble a small museum.

There are cheroots made in Bombay and Calcutta; tiny but accurate models of sampais and praus, Dayak fighting craft, complete in every detail of equipment; heads of native deer, shot by the proprietor on his hunting expeditions in the jungles of Bengal and Hindustani; samples of Malay craftsmanship; receptables for betelnut; bonbonnieres fashioned with crude instruments but of meticulous precision in their dimensions; masterpieces of rattan work, but above all the spicy, aromatic, appetizing curries from the Far East.

Is New in Atlanta.

In opening a curry lunch shop in Atlanta, Mr. Palmer has brought something here that has so far not been duplicated in the south. There are such establishments in San Francisco, in Paris, perhaps in New York, but even there they are mostly frequented by native Hindus or other Orientals.

In Atlanta the luxurious, glittering Curry Tiffin Kidei caters to those who wish a change of menu, who want to taste the flavor of Oriental cooking without leaving their Occidental home city.

Prepared and presented in the true Malay fashion, a beef curry represents a work of art. Of its perfection and savory qualities, its appearance and correct serving, the Orientals are just as proud as the chefs of the Hotel Pays-Bas in Paris or Wiener Gasthofe in Vienna.

A beef curry requires 19 hours of continual cooking, stirring, turning, mixing of new curries and administration of different temperatures. In short it is a rite of culinarism that may well suggest the muttering of weird and strange acadabras by the artist as he stoops over its mysterious composition.

Mysterious while in the copper pot, simmering and smoking; appetizing and delicious when served on the table.

Chicken curries and fish curries involves less arduous preparation, but when ready for the consumer they are part and parcel of an Oriental atmosphere. With the curries come dainties and delicacies, unknown outside Singapore and Sourabaya. Tiny balls of candy that contain perfumed wine-sucade that has the aroma of musk, daintily fashioned Malay cake strewn with cocoanut, coffee from Persia, prepared in the way of the bazaar.

Interesting Talker.

Should you wish to hear a real adventure story, after dinner or luncheon, buttonhole the proprietor. He has an inexhaustible source of anecdotes, incidents, haps and mishaps from his life as a British resident in the interior of the Malay states. Elephant hunting, tiger hunting, hairbreadth escapes from gigantic serpents, strange customs and habits of the people of Borneo, Celebes, New Guinea, in fact with every object that adorns the walls and tables of his establishment, Mr. Palmer will connect some particular incident from his colorful and highly adventurous life in India.

The best part of the new establishment is the rare cooking. The opening of Curry Tiffin Kidei gives Atlanta a lead over other large cities. It is a landmark on the road to metropolitan development and therefore, requires the patronage of every Atlantan who wishes to see his city take its appointed place in the vanguard of American cities.

J. EDGAR WHITEMAN DIES SATURDAY NIGHT

J. Edgar Whiteman, 49, well known Atlanta newspaper man, and manager for this district of the Western Newspaper union, died Saturday night at his residence, 19 Elmira place.

Mr. Whiteman was born in Ontario, Canada. After coming to the United States, he became connected with the American Press association in Columbus, Ohio. He was transferred to Detroit, then to New York, and was sent to Atlanta in 1909 in charge of the southern division. The American Press association later was absorbed by the Western Newspaper union, and Mr. Whiteman made manager for this section.

He was a member of the Georgia Press association, the Atlanta Ad club, and was prominent in church work, being a member of the West End Presbyterian church.

In addition to his widow, Mr. Whiteman is survived by a son, Edgar R. Whiteman, and one daughter, Miss Virginia Whiteman. Funeral arrangements will be announced later by H. M. Patterson & Son.

JUDGE HOWARD SPENDS $9,780.43 IN PRIMARY

Judge G. H. Howard, of the Fulton superior criminal court, in his campaign for reelection to the judgeship, spent $9,780.43, it was shown by a report filed Saturday with the clerk of Fulton superior court.

John A. Boykin, who was reelected as solicitor general, spent $4,316.95, while Miss Margaret Culberson, who was nominated to the office of county treasurer, spent $1,195.85. Frank A. Hooper, successful candidate for the legislature, spent $426.75, and Walter C. Hendrix, unopposed candidate for the state senate, spent $130. Other candidates have not filed expense accounts.

CHANDLER BRINGS OUT TWO DE LUXE SEDANS

Two new sedan models of striking beauty in design and unusual richness in all their appointments, have been brought out by Chandler. They are the chummy sedan, the distinctive Chandler two-door model that combines the advantages of the five-passenger sedan and the four-passenger coupe, and the Metropolitan sedan de Luxe, both of them glorified models of cars that have long been leaders in the Chandler line.

Both models are equipped with a new type windshield, described as the greatest single advance ever made in closed car comfort and convenience. This windshield is absolutely full-vision, being without divisions or rubber strips, yet gives a far wider range of ventilation than ever was available before. The entire windshield is a single plate of glass, so arranged, in felt-lined grooves that it may be raised vertically by means of a regulation window crank. Every operation of raising or lowering may be performed by the driver while the car is in full motion.

The new bodies, while distinctively Chandler in appearance, are a striking departure from previous sedans of the same make. Both are much lower, giving the appearance of great length, an effect that is heightened by the new double belt of moulding, the lower bead running the full length of the car. At the rear the tops are beautifully rounded, giving a brougham effect, and a new type leather-covered visor makes a marked improvement at the front.

The interiors are as greatly in advance of the previous models as are the exteriors. The window mouldings are of Circassian walnut, and the instrument board and full-width ventilator are pannelled in walnut to match. The seats have been made deeper, and are covered with high-grade mohair plush in a beautiful gray, with carpet to match. The interior hardware is a combination of silver in dull and bright finish, new in design.

The motorist will be particularly impressed with the advantages of the new windshield, as it is the first design that does away with the inconveniences of adjustment and regulation, usually requiring the driver to stop and even leave his seat.

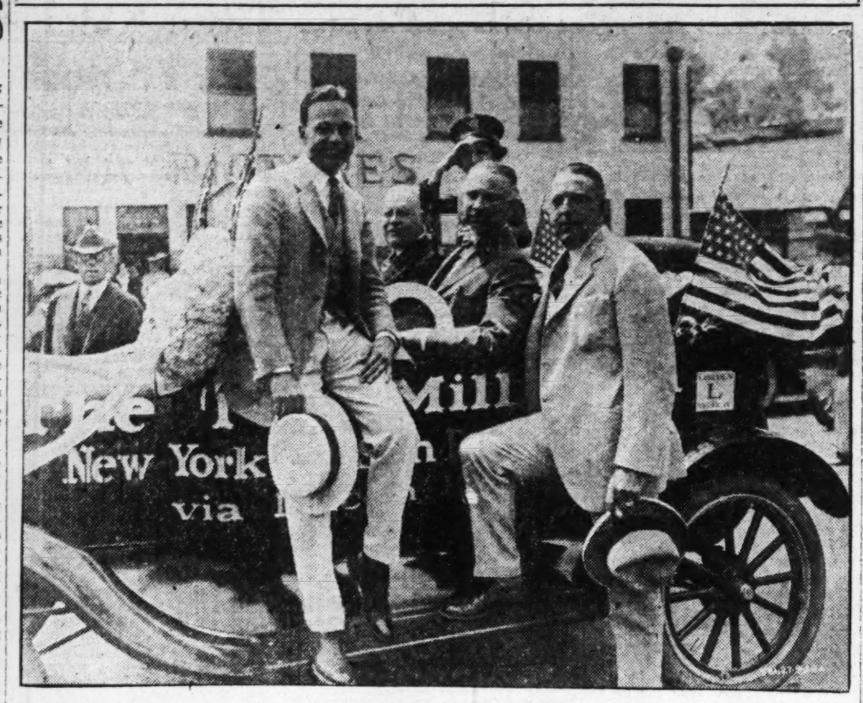

The new windshield is designated as the VV type, signifying vision and ventilation. An ordinary window regular, such as is used to raise or lower the glass in the car windows, is mounted over the windshield in front of the driver. A half-turn of the regulator raises the glass vertically a distance of one inch. In this position, air does not flow directly into the car, but follows a course under the lower edge of the glass into a ventilator that extends the full width of the body. The air is led down between the instrument board and the dash, setting up a circulation throughout the car.

Further turning of the regulator raises the glass still higher, so that it rises above the edge of the ventilator, admitting air directly into the body of the car. A strip three inches high, in addition to the area of the ventilator, may be opened, giving an area of 125 square inches for the direct flow of air.

The ventilation may be further controlled by means of the car windows. With the shield raised only a small distance, and a rear window opened, circulation is set up that will completely change the inside air every few minutes without strong draughts.

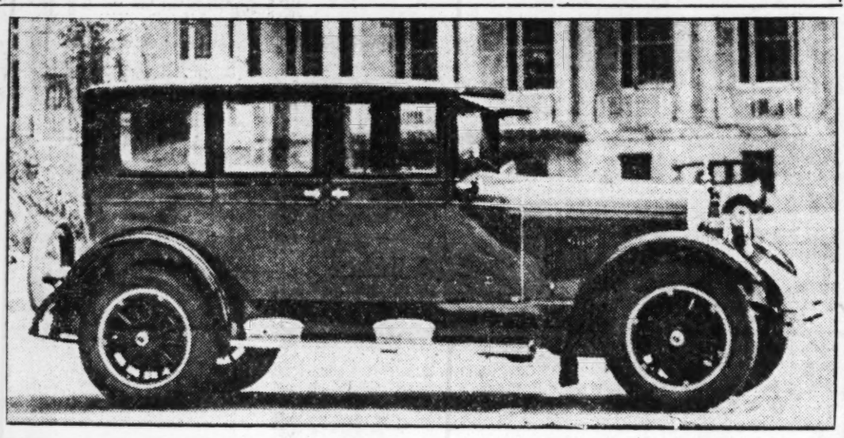

Both new models are powered by the famous Pikes Peak motor and incorporate the traffic transmission with its certain, clash-proof action. Standard equipment includes full balloon tires, nickeled radiator shell, motometer, bumper, automatic windshield wiper regulated from instrument board, and an improved type leather-covered visor. Standard colors are black an Luxor blue.

PICKARD WILL PREACH AT TABERNACLE TODAY

Dr. W. L. Pickard, pastor of Central Baptist church, of Chattanooga, Tenn., and one of the best-known preachers in the south, will fill the putpit at the Baptist Tabernacle at both morning and night services today.

Dr. Pickard is vice president of the Southern Baptist convention, and former president of Mercer university.

MASONS OF FIFTH DISTRICT CONFER MASTER'S DEGREE

In line with inauguration of the program for the development of the Fifth Masonic district with regard to educational, benevolent and social affairs, Worshipful Master W. G. Hastings, recently elected chief executive of the Fifth Masonic district convention, announces that officers of the convention will confer the master's degree in Gate City lodge No. 2 at the regular communication Tuesday night.

Dr. Carter Helm Jones, pastor of Second Baptist church, will make the principal address, and invitations have been extended to Grand Master James D. Hamrick and Director of Welfare Charles L. Bass, of the grand lodge, to be present and deliver addresses, in addition to which there will be several short talks.

The Past Masters' association of Gate City lodge will attend in a body, headed by Past Master Thomas H. Jeffries, who will make the address of welcome.

Officers of the convention will occupy the various stations on the lodge and the degree will be exemplified in full form, the lodge opening at 5 o'clock for the first two sections of the degree. The business meeting of the lodge will be held at 7:30, after which the degree will be concluded and addresses made.

Following are officers of the convention: W. G. Hastings, worshipful master; E. J. White, deputy master; Bayne Gibson, senior warden; Fred H. Snead, junior warden; Judge E. D. Thomas, senior warden; F. C. McDaniel, junior deacon; Paul Latimore, senior steward; Bob Hayes, junior steward; Percy Taylor, secretary-treasurer; E. P. Young, tyler.

URBAN LEAGUE WEEKLY BULLETIN

Two places in the official personnel of the National Baptist convention that came to a close in Nashville, Tenn., Monday night after a most successful session, were given to two prominent Christian leaders of Atlanta. Dr. A. D. Williams, pastor of Ebenezer Baptist church, was elected treasurer of the National Baptist convention, incorporated, succeeding the late Dr. A. J. Stokes, recently of California, formerly of Montgomery, Ala. Dr. Stokes held the position as treasurer of the National Baptist convention for 34 years. Dr. A. D. Williams, who was for a number of years a member of the finance committee, so demonstrated his ability to handle and account for all monies coming into his hands that he was elevated to the position as treasurer by unanimous vote. A new position was created and designated as national organizer of the young people's department. Supervisor L. L. Craig, of the Urban League employment service, prominent member in Wheat Street Baptist church and one of the best known missionary workers in the Baptist denomination, was elected head of this department. This will be welcome news, not only to the Baptist denomination of Georgia, but to the Christian leaders generally, because of the positions these two church workers occupy in the religious life of the state and nation. This gives Georgia three national officers as Willie F. McKinney has been the official pianist of the National Baptist convention for a number of years.

Students continue to come to the Opportunity school seeking to be enrolled in some of their classes. The classes in cooking, sewing and millinery have the largest registration. Some of the more advanced pupils in the millinery classes have finished their first hat. They express a peculiar pleasure to be able to wear for the first time hats being made by their own hands.

Field secretary, Jesse O. Thomas, has been appointed by William W. Sanders, of Charleston, W. Va., who was elected national president of the National Association of Teachers of Colored schools, as transportation manager of the association. The following letter was received a few days ago from Mr. Sanders:

"My Dear Mr. Thomas: Your name has been suggested by a member of the executive committee as transportation manager of our association. As president of the association, I am writing to advise that I think this a happy suggestion and I know of no one in a position to do this as well as you. I am, therefore, requesting you to take charge of this matter. Kindly indicate to me as early as convenient whether you will accept. Your title will be transportation manager of the National Association of Teachers of Colored schools.

"Thanking you in advance for an early and a favorable reply, I am,

"Very truly yours,

"WM P. SAUNDERS, President."

The colored citizens are planning to present to Dr. C. B. Wilmer a loving cup in testimony of the unselfish Christian service he has rendered mankind without regard to race or color. This cup will be presented at Big Bethel church, Sunday afternoon, September 28, at 3:30 o'clock. The following letter sent out to a number of leading colored citizens, August 29, expresses the regard and esteem the colored citizens have for Dr. Wilmer:

"Dr. C. B. Wilmer, rector of St. Luke Episcopal church, of this city, has resigned the position that he has held for 24 years to accept the deanship of the theological department of the University of the South in Sewanee, Tenn.

"As rector of St. Luke church, Dr. Wilmer did not confine his activities to the welfare of the membership of his parish, nor indeed to the interest of his racial group. Dr. Wilmer was one of the organizers of what has become the national inter-racial commission. This commission grew out of what was called the Atlanta plan. Every civic movement calculated to promote the general wellbeing of all the people in the city and state has had Dr. Wilmer's enthusiastic indorsement and cordial support. The negro race has no better champion than Dr. Wilmer.

"In consideration of the attitude that Dr. Wilmer has always taken where our interest was involved and in consideration of the fact that he is soon to assume his new duties at the University of the South, a number of the leading men of our group have expressed a desire to present Dr. Wilmer a concrete token as our appreciation of his moral worth to our cause. A call is being made to 100 of our leading citizens, men and women, clergy and laymen to meet in the basement of Big Bethel A. M. E. church, Thursday afternoon, September 4, at 5 o'clock. This group will decide upon the type of expression we will make to Dr. Wilmer, as well as the nature of the occasion provided for its presentation.

"Every one who knows how Dr. Wilmer has stood for justice and fair dealing will want to share in this effort. Remember the time, 5 o'clock; date, Thursday, September 4; place, basement Big Bethel church.

Signed COMMITTEE.

Georgia Bankers Outline Banking Course in Schools

A series of talks on banking and elementary economics will be delivered in the grammar and high schools of the state during the present school term under the direction of local county committees, it was announced Saturday by Robert Strickland, Jr., vice president of the Fourth National bank of Atlanta and chairman of the public education committee of the Georgia Bankers' association.

The subject matter of talks will follow the outline prepared by the public education committee of the American Bankers' association. The object of the campaign is the promotion of a better understanding on the part of the school children of the fundamentals of economics, the financial structure of the country and the nature and uses of banks and their proper functions.

Subjects of the talks, the first of which is to be delivered during the coming week in the schools of the various counties, are "The General Idea of the Bank," "The Bank Check, "Loaning the Bank's Money," "Character, the Basis of Credit," "Why a Corporate Trustee?" "The Bank and Your Investments," "Our Relations and the Bank's Relations With the Rest of the World," "The Relationship of Farmer and Banker," "Relation of the Bank to the Federal Reserve System," "Analysis of a Simple Bank Statement."

Mr. Strickland states that the campaign is being carried on along the same lines in every state in the union, and that bankers throughout the country believe that not only will pupils in the schools be benefited greatly by the broader and more practical conception of the economic and financial structure of the country which will be imparted to them, but that the benefits to the individual will be material factors in increasing the prosperity of the community and the public at large.

Serving with Mr. Strickland on the state committee are J. S. Kennedy, vice president Atlanta and Lowry National bank and president of the Georgia Bankers' association; Haynes McFadden, published Southern Banker and secretary of the state association, and group chairmen as follows: Group 1, Abial Winn, vice president First National bank, Valdosta; group 2, W. N. Harrison, cashier First National bank, Lavonia; group 3, J. S. Calhoun, president First National bank, Cartersville; group 4, H. E. Davis, vice president Albany Exchange bank, Albany; group 5, A. W. Garrett, vice president First National bank, Dublin.

'BOOSTER WEEK' TO START TODAY

A "Booster Week" for Atlanta, to begin today and continue until September 27, has been announced by the Atlanta Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Appeal is made to every man and woman in the city to encourage the booster spirit which has so long prevailed in Atlanta and which has been in the past a potent factor in the growth of the city, Jay-cee officials point out. The junior chamber desires to promote to a higher degree the slogan "Atlanta—a Dandy Place to Live."

Theaters of the city have given hearty cooperation to the movement and during the week official booster songs will be featured. Special slides also will be thrown on local screens.

The Georgia Railway & Power Company has pledged its support and merchants will offer show windows for display of cards.

The song, "Toot! Toot! Atlanta!" has been selected as the official song for the week.

Much interest is being taken by Atlantans in making the "Booster week" a success. Hundreds of letters have been written to Roy LeCraw, president of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, by business men praising the plan and promising to do everything posible to insure its success.

Stickers, bearing the slogan of the movement, will be placed on hundreds of automobiles and placards will be placed in windows and on telegraph poles.

Morris Brown Opens For Annual Session On September 24

The fall term of Morris Brown university for negroes begins on Wednesday, September 24. Registration of students takes place Monday and Tuesday.

C. L. Harper, principal of high school and professor of mathematics, has been elected principal of the city junior and senior high school. H. D. Gregg, dean of the college department, and L. S. Smith, head of the commercial department also will teach in the city high school. E. F. Bailey, instructor in chemistry, resigned to do post-graduate work. F. D. White, a graduate of Harvard, who taught French last year has been elected dean of the college department, thus causing new faces on the faculty.

Among the new teachers are O. N. Morris, professor of physics and chemistry; W. G. Mason, instructor of English and education; N. P. McGhee, instructor in mathematics; Luther E. Jones, of Sandusky, Ohio, will assist in the department of music.

Opening exercises will take place at 10 o'clock. Bishop J. S. Flipper, president of the board of trustees will deliver the principal address. Bishop W. A. Fountain, R. D. Stinson and other representatives of the church and race will be present.

Jewett's Mechanical Perfection

Proved by Billion Miles of Use

Every part that enters into the Jewett Six—from heavy-duty axles to the big Paige-built motor—has been tested and proved right by more than a billion miles' service for 100,000 pleased owners. They know what a pleasure driving can be!

The Jewett buyer is not experimenting. He gets proved performance and sturdiness.

The big Jewett motor was first used in a $2000 Paige. Then improved it became the motor of the Jewett. It is the biggest motor ever put into a car in the $1100 class! And the best proved! Constant refinements have kept it the leading motor in its field.

Jewett's sturdy chassis is amply strong for this big motor. 2805 lbs. of finest materials (200 to 400 lbs. more weight than light sixes) prove Jewett's strength—its ability to stand up under hard service!

Here are the vital parts of a car. Read how Jewett provides for long, joyous performance.

Big Six Motor

Jewett's big motor has 249 cu. in. of piston displacement. That is 20% to 40% more power than ever before put into a car of this size. Some speed up small motors to get power. But that means shortened motor life! Jewett's size accounts for its long-lived power and performance! Jewett "does its stuff" uphill, through sand, in traffic, without ever straining!

Sturdy 6-Inch Deep Frame

Jewett's frame is 6 inches deep—stoutly braced by four cross members. A wonderful foundation for ruggedness. Jewett owners appreciate the solidity and steadiness of road action this gives. They know the comfort of substantial construction in long life and freedom from the troubles of "flimsy" cars.

Easy Acting Clutch and Transmission

Jewett is amazingly easy to handle. The smooth-acting clutch takes hold so gently that the car is never jerked, the motor never stalled. Jewett's sturdy transmission is extra strong—handles Jewett's big power easily. Change gears quickly or slowly—there's never a "clash" or "miss." Even shift from high gear to second while traveling at 30 miles an hour—there's barely a sound!

All-Steel Universal Joints

Jewett's universal joint is built of finest steel—with sealed-in lubrication good for 15,000 miles. It operates indefinitely without wear. So back-lash and rattles never occur! Long, trouble-free service is assured.

High Pressure Oiling

What wears out machinery? Friction! Friction is metal rubbing against metal—lack of lubrication. Jewett is not merely lubricated—it is high-pressure oiled. Its high-pressure, hollow crankshaft oiling system forces 2 gallons of oil per minute through main bearings and connecting-rod bearings at 20 to 40 lbs. pressure. Metal never touches metal—always a film of oil between. Wear is long postponed!

Heavy Duty Rear Axle

Jewett's big power demands a staunch rear axle. This is well provided for with a heavy duty rear axle. A recent check-up with Jewett owners shows less than one-tenth of one per cent rear axle trouble—including accidents!

Extra Large Wrist Pins

Wrist pins carry the weight of every power explosion. Jewett's wrist pins are so large that a wrist pin of a well-known light six drops through one of Jewett's! Jewett's big wrist pins are typical of Jewett's sturdy motor construction.

New All-Metal Timing Gears

Motor timing—gear or chain—is subject to great wear and noise. Jewett provides against this by all-metal, perfectly fitting, helical-cut timing gears. Gears for each motor are accurately fitted, burnished and carefully matched for silence. They do their work—running cam and pump-shafts, quietly and efficiently for the car's long life. (652-4)

Jewett's soundness of design and construction is best proved in its amazing performance, riding comfort, freedom from repairs! Whatever its job—Jewett does it easily, makes play of it.

The real way to test the proved Jewett—is to drive it—put it through its paces. Watch it easily outperform others. Come in or call us and we'll arrange a demonstration for you and your family. Do it today!

"ONE BILLION MILES BEYOND EXPERIMENT"

STOCKS READY FOR RESUMPTION OF ADVANCE--PLATT

Many Will Reenter Market If Present Strength Holds For Few Days, He Declares

New York, September 20.—(Special to The Constitution.)—The stock market seems to have struck a bullish pace and to be ready for a resumption of important advances. In the past week there were several minor reactions and then some brisk rallies developed and many stocks went sharply higher. There is no indication that the resumption of strength was manipulated by trading groups. There was a lot of selling by professional traders but very little real liquidation in the previous week and the early part of the last week. Therefore when shorts tried to cover they found very little stock being offered and therefore were forced to "reach for stocks." The advance seemed due entirely to that fact, but as it developed in activity it was apparent that a lot of new buying was being attracted by the rising trend in stocks. There are hundreds of people who are bullish on the stock market who have been waiting for the irregular periods to end. These prospective buyers are likely to flock to the market in increasing numbers if the strength of the market is maintained for a few days.

It is the usual case that the public will never buy freely unless there is a strong advance in progress. They will then come in at levels 5 to 10 points above the lows in much greater numbers than at levels 2 to 3 points up. As a result it is rare that the public makes much money in the stock market. If the present outlook for five or six weeks of strength, possibly eight or ten weeks, such of the public as comes into the movement early has a good outlook for profits, but as these protracted movements go it is always at the end of them that the greatest wave of public buying appears.

Sees Increased Trading.

The present outlook is for increasing volume in the trading until days of two million share transactions are reached. At that time there will be the greatest public demand and the highest prices of the advance. Then profit taking will prove the brake on the upward movement and as prices turn lower those who bought at the top will be forced out or frightened into selling at a loss. It is the history of all bull movements in stocks. It was the case during the summer There was a very light public participation up to the time that stocks started aggressive advances after the middle of August. Then public participation increased, but the majority of new buyers only held their position a week or two before a sharp reaction had developed. On this reaction a majority of the outside traders were shaken out at a loss, or forced out, yet in many cases the market recovered practically all of its losses in the past week at the highs and those who held through the reaction were again on the profit side. The reason for the greater optimism over stock market prospects is to be found in the reports of better business conditions in many industries. This is especially the case in the steel trade where scrap iron and pig iron are tending higher and a large volume of steel business is being placed. Up to a few days ago there were political fears to be heard in the stock market, but it seems to be the case now that there is a growing feeling that President Coolidge will be reelected and that there is little chance that the election will be thrown into congress. It is known that some of the big business interests have had a very thorough canvass made of the outlook in various doubtful states and that enough of them seem to be tending towards the president to assure his prospects.

Trade Thermometer.

The stock market is a recording instrument of general sentiment towards business and its recent advance seems to record a feeling of hopefulness in the highest banking, financial and business circles. One of the things that helped to turn the market upward was the declaration of a regular dividend by one of the steel companies which had been expected to pass it. This indicated an optimistic view on the part of the directors. It is also probable that no more important passings of dividends will occur in the near future and there are possibilities for several companies to increase their rates, pay extras or stock dividends, or for others to start to make payments before very long. Another important factor in the stock market is the preparation that is being made for the German loan, which is looked for next month. To insure its success it is necessary for the sentiment in the financial world to be stable and one thing that promotes such stability is in the cheerful atmosphere that always exudes from a strong stock market. That is why banking groups which have large bond flotations to make will always give support to the stock market during the time that the loan is being floated. In very important loans this support to the stock market is given long before.

Money ruled at 2 per cent on call loans through most of the week. There was more of it available at that rate at times than could be used, and it is reported that some private loans were made for "over-night" at a lower rate. The call money market also has been easy. The recent sale of government obligations on a 2.34 per cent yield basis for a year has convinced the money market that there is little likelihood of a higher loan rate in the near future and that for a long time ahead the money market will be easy. It is feared that this may be cause for new inflation before very long, but the banks and the federal reserve system are taking steps to check any serious inflation that may appear. There is bound to be some of it, however, with so much gold as a basis for loans and with every indication that a speculative sentiment is starting to spread in securities, commodities and foreign exchange.

The bond market has been steady, and issues which have a rising earning power behind them, where the previous position had been poor, have been quite strong. There seems to be an intensive investment demand, however, and the rise in Liberty bonds and other high-grade issues proves this. Traders report an indication towards greater activity in special issues but the main body of bonds has been quiet and probably will continue so until the German loan is out of the way.

Exchange Firm.

Foreign exchange has been firmer. There are many indications that the operation of the Dawes plan will bring prosperity to Europe. This is not expected in a rush, but a slow improvement is indicated. A study of the situation in Germany indicates that it will be a long time before the industries in that country have been reorganized to a degree that will allow of any important exports of German goods.

Further reductions were made in crude oil prices during the past week, but there was a stronger tone in the oil stocks. This was because the cut in oil had been expected and prepared for, and it is believed that it marks the low point in the decline, so far as Mid-Continent crude oil is concerned. A steady increase in the demand for gasoline is indicated by the larger sales of motor cars and the outlook for a very good sale of automobiles in the next year. The recent heavy inroads on the storage supply is indicated for this month and probably next. Therefore, the long pull outlook for the oil industry is very promising and there are good possibilities for many of the oil stocks to start to discount this future promise by some good advances in the next few months.

Rubber conditions are also much better. There has been an advance in crude rubber and finished goods are tending higher. The demand for mechanical goods, footwear, etc., has been growing and there is also a better prospect for tires.

Motor Car Sales Larger.

Motor car sales have been larger. Several companies have brought out new models which have met with success. There is also a rising trend in prices for cars. The future of the industry depends almost entirely on how far the current improvement in general business extends, but there is every indication that the industrial expansion which started a few weeks ago will continue for a long time.

Copper has been slightly lower in price, reflecting the unsettlement of the London market. This followed on a sharp break in tin, and while the two metals do not compete in most uses, there is a sympathy between their markets. The growing demand for copper here and abroad is expected to result in a rise in prices again in the near future.

Steel scrap was advanced $2 a ton in some sections during the past week. There is a rising tendency in pig iron and steel prices as a whole are firmer. Some large orders are pending and several good contracts have been placed recently. The steel trade as a whole is in a very optimistic mood and expects that there will be a steady improvement in business through the next few months. Another increase in the Steel corporation's unfilled tonnage figures is expected for September.

Cotton prices started off the week in a continuation of the decline of the previous period. This weakness resulted from the indications that the new crop will be around 13,000,000 bales. While there may not be a serious loss from that figure when the crop is all ginned, there are indications now of a moderate scaling down of the total. Prospects for the textile trades are also good. A consideration of these prospects brought about some rallies later in the week.

VICTOR RELEASES FOR COMING WEEK FEATURE STARS

This week the Prince of Wales talks on a record about "Sportsmanship." His presence in America adds interest to a record that immortalizes the voice of this popular heir apparent. On the reverse of the record the band of H. M. Coldstream Guards plays his "own song"—"God Bless the Prince of Wales." The royalties from this record, incidentally, go to the British Legion fund.

The daintiness of Lucrezia Bori finds expression in two records this week, "Milonquita" (My Little Troubadour) and "La Majo Discreto" (The Gallant Lover).

Cortot's two records are piano display numbers, a scherzo by Mendelssohn, and "Bourree," by Saint-Saens.

A new record by Lambert Murphy, his first in some time, records one of the late Victor Herbert's very best pieces of harmonization, "My Dream Girl," from the musical play of that name. With it is paired "Memory Lane."

This week Peerless quartet takes up the burden with "'Mid the Green Fields of Virginia" and "The Girl I Loved in Sunny Tennessee."

This week Victor band makes records of four favorites—"Lead Kindly Light," "O Come, All Ye Faithful," "Come Thou Almighty King" and "Holy, Holy, Holy," clear, sonorous and powerful.

"The Little Old Clock on the Mantel" is an active fox-trot by Paul Whiteman and his orchestra, out this week.

On the other side is "Charley My Boy," brilliant and humorous, by Jack Shilkret's orchestra, and Wendell Hall's classic, "It Ain't Gonna Rain No Mo'," on a fox-trot record by International Novelty orchestra, with Billy Murray and Ed Smalle. The other side is no more serious; "Hayseed Rag," by the Dizzy Trio, a so-called novelty fox-trot and well-named at that.

The Virginians this week in "My Papa Doesn't Two-Time No Time" are like a 90-mile gale with Billy Murray assisting in full voice. "Superstitious Blues," by the Southerners, has trick effects and a difficult sax solo.

Like the calm that follows the storm Vincent Rose and his Montmartre orchestra produce "Moonlight Memories," a slow waltz rich in string harmonies Italian in flavor. "Tell Me You'll Forgive Me," by International Novelty orchestra, has a violin duet, a vocal refrain and interesting brass solos.

UNIVERSALISTS' MEET COMES TO END TODAY

Morning services today at the Liberal Christian church, 301 Peachtree, will conclude the state convention of Universalists of Georgie which has been in session here for the past three days.

Mrs. Ethel M. Allen, national president of Women's organization of Universalists, was the principal speaker at Saturday morning's service, following addresses of welcome delivered by Mrs. Dan Bonds and the response of Miss Grace House, secretary of the conference. Brief addresses by the officers of the conference were heard Saturday afternoon at the final business conference.

Officers of the convention are: B. F. Cheek, president; J. F. Bowers, vice president; Miss Grace House, secretary, and W. G. Owens, C. W. Parker, Frank Durden, H. C. Blake and T. D. Weaver, trustees.

Prominent southern Universalists present at the convention included Mrs. C. Stanford, president of the Woman's Alliance, Rev. John Smith Lowe, national superintendent; Mrs. D. T. Barnes, secretary of the Woman's Missionary association; Rev. T. B. Bishop, of Montgomery, southern superintendent; Rev. A. G. Strain, of Atlanta, and Rev. George A. Gay, of Chattanooga, Tenn., and others.

MRS. KATIE MAE NASH TO BE BURIED TODAY

Funeral services for Mrs. Katie Mae Nash, beloved Atlanta woman, who died at her home, 97 Pulliam street, Friday night, will be held at 11:30 o'clock this morning from the chapel of Greenberg & Bond. The Rev. H. E. Roe will conduct the services, and interment will be in the Decatur cemetery.

Mrs. Nash, who was 48 years old, besides her husband, Wilson F. Nash, is survived by two daughters, Mrs. R. T. Joyner, of Charlotte, N. C., and Miss Elizabeth Nash, of Atlanta; one son, Clarence Nash, of Atlanta; six sisters, Mrs. W. D. Armstead, Mrs. W. O. Stovall, Mrs. W. M. Wadkins, Mrs. J. A. Joyner and Mrs. W. M. McDonald all of Conyers, Ga., and Mrs. W. H. Baer, of Atlanta, and one brother, J. N. Painell, of Atlanta.

WEEKLY METAL MARKET REVIEW

New York, September 20.—Business in steel remains at about the previous level of around 60 per cent of capacity, demand coming mostly from automobile, agricultural and railroad interests. Because of lessened building operations, there has been some decrease in bookings of fabricated steel, and on the whole demand this month has been under expectations. Many mills doubt if present production can be maintained during the next two months. Pig iron is in somewhat better shape, although price levels do not yet justify much increase of production.

Further price shading has been resorted to in the copper market, owing to a continued slack demand at home and abroad. Second hands and some of the smaller producing interests are said to have accepted business at the 13-cent level. At this price sales of between 5 and 10 million pounds were reported and rather a steadier tone developed toward the end of the week, when most of the larger selling agencies were said to be holding electrolytic for 13 1-8 cents.

Tin declined sharply under free offerings, due to bearish developments at London. Consumers absorbed moderate quantities at the decline.

Lead was quieter, with an easier tendency at the west. Producers are well booked ahead and consumers appear to have anticipated nearby requirements.

Zinc ruled easier with only a small trade. While producers are not offering freely, operators seem inclined to sell.

Antimony continued strong because of the Chinese situation, but the chief inquiry is for nearby parcels.

KIWANIANS WILL FEAST ON GEORGIA PRODUCTS TUESDAY

Atlanta Kiwanis club will observe Georgia Products day at its weekly luncheon to be held at the Ansley hotel at 12:30 o'clock Tuesday.

The entire menu will consist of Georgia products including Georgia yams from Valdosta, pimentoes from McDonough, butter, cream and cheese from the Georgia state farm in Athens; peaches from Ft. Valley; peanuts from Waycross, tobacco from Bainbridge and other products.

A delegate from the Kiwanis club of each city mentioned will be present at the luncheon and will deliver a four-minute talk on Georgia products from that section.

Hebrew Benevolent Congregation Opens School of Religion

The religious school of the Hebrew Benevolent congregation, on South Pryor and Richardson streets, begins its annual session today at 9:30 a. m.

The regular services for the year will be conducted by Rabbi Marx in the main auditorium of the temple beginning Friday, September 26, at 8 p. m. The temple has been redecorated and renovated, and the public is cordially invited to attend this first meeting of the fall season to welcome Rabbi Marx after an extended visit through the west.

EARNINGS OF CITIES SERVICE SHOW GAINS

Gross earnings of Cities Service company for the 12 months ending with August 31, 1924, were $17,147,441, as compared with $16,638,879 in the corresponding period of the preceding year, according to Ben F. Noble, district sales manager.

In the same 12 months, net earnings amounted to $16,561,827, as compared with $16,116,326. Net to stock and reserves was $14,400,277, which is 2.84 times the preferred stock dividends, as compared with $13,475,410 for the 12 months ending August 31, 1923, which was 2.71 times the preferred stock dividends.

Net to common stock and reserves was $9,334,726, equivalent to $20.24 a share on the average amount of common stock outstanding as compared with $8,512,130, or $18.30 a share for the 12 months ending August 31, 1923.

SINGERS OF CHATTOOGA HOLD MEETING TODAY

Lyerly, Ga., September 19.—(Special.)—The Chattooga County Sacred Harp Singing convention will be held at the Christian church at Trion, 12 miles north of Lyerly, Sunday. Two singing classes from Alabama and one from Chattanooga, as well as prominent singers from various places over Georgia and Alabama, will assist. J. D. Whitehead, of Arion, is president of the convention.

The Investor

BY PAUL WILLARD GARRETT

Public Service Company of Oklahoma, Which Now Offers a New Series of Its First Mortgage Bonds, Belongs Among the Properties Under Insull Management.

The Public Service company of Oklahoma has not been a large borrower at the New York market and is not very well known to some utility investors. If there were investors who did not recognize this company's first mortgage issue a few days ago, when a $3,275,000 offering was made, almost every investor must have recognized the excellent management affiliated with the Oklahoma utility.

The outstanding common stock of the Public Service company of Oklahoma is owned or controlled by the Middle West Utilities company, and that, investors know, is the holding company for most of the Insull properties outside of Chicago. Mr. Samuel Insull and his associates, it will be recalled, control the Commonwealth Edison company, the Public Service company of Northern Illinois, the Peoples Gas and Coke company and other important utilities.

Something About the Territory.

Public Service of Oklahoma supplies electricity to eighteen communities centering around Tussa. So much has been said about the oil industry of Oklahoma that many investors do not realize, perhaps, that there are many other lines of industry in the state that have had a prosperous development. There are an abundance of rich agricultural and coal lands and some manufacturing. According to the 1920 census, the value of all farm property in Oklahoma was $1,660,423,544, making that state rank twelfth among our states in the value of farm property.

Growth in the demands for service made upon the Public Service company of Oklahoma gives some indication of the general improvement of the territory. Ten years ago the company had only 5,362 customers; by the end of July, 1924, it had 23,953. Ten years ago the kilowatt output of the company was only 10,078,262; the July, 1924, figure is 42,234,135.

Company's Capital Structure.

Upon completion of the present financing Public Service of Oklahoma will have outstanding $4,170.400 of first mortgage bonds and $636,000 of general mortgage bonds. This represents the entire funded debt. After that comes the stock issues. Of these there are outstanding $549,600 of prior lien 7 per cent stock, $260,000 of 6 per cent preferred and $2,000,500 of common.

The first mortgage bonds are a first lien upon all of the company's properties, conservatively valued at an amount well in excess of the par value of the bonds outstanding. While the mortgage is an open lien, and additional bonds may be issued from time to time under the same mortgage, there are conservative restrictions designed to protect bondholders against excessive issues in the future. Furthermore, provisions are set up for a maintenance and renewal fund. The company agrees to expend during each calendar year, unless credited with excess expenditures in previous years, an amount not less than 12½ per cent of the gross earnings of the company from operation of properties upon which the bonds are a mortgage.

Distribution of Earnings.

An analysis of the company's net earnings for the twelve months ended July 31, 1924, shows that electrical services account for nearly 79 per cent of the earnings and ice about 19 per cent.

The gains in both gross and net earnings of the Public Service company of Oklahoma have been persistent and steady for the past decade. Gross earnings have grown from $457,855 in 1914 to $1,898,957 for the twelve months ended July 31,1924, net earnings meanwhile growing from $163,461 to $575,729. The annual interest charges of the company upon completion of the present financing will be about $250,104, an amount comfortably covered by the $575,729 available for such charges as things stand now.

New York, September 20.—Stock prices displayed a firm undertone in today's brief session of the market with speculative interest again centered in a few specialties. Except for the more favorable tenor of the weekly mercantile reviews, there was little outside the market to influence speculative sentiment.

Sixteen issues established new peak prices for the year, including American Tobacco and B., Liggett and Myers B, California Packing, United Drug common and first preferred, National Biscuit, Loose Wiles Biscuit, Studebaker, Nash Motors, Consolidated Gas, Brooklyn Union Gas, Colorado and Southern, Missouri Pacific preferred, Pittsburg and West Virginia preferred and Southern Railway preferred.

Standard Plate Glass broke more than five points to 19 1-4. This was probably due to the changing in the corporate name of the company which led to the announcement that the old shares would be "stricken from the list." Recent rumors that the company planned to do some new stock financing were officially denied.

Western Railroad shares were again under accumulation on the theory that the heavy grain loadings of the last few weeks would be reflected in the earnings statement of the next few months. Union Pacific, Canadian Pacific, Great Northern preferred, Missouri Pacific preferred and Wabash preferred A, moved up 1 to 1-2 points while Chicago and Northwestern climbed 3 points.

Strength and activity of the American Tobacco issues, which added 3 more points to their recent gains, is said to be based on a split up of the shares. Good buying also was noted in United States Cast Iron Pipe, National Lead and Jewel Tea, all of which climbed a point or more.

Losses, as a rule, were held to fractions, although a few issues for which there was a thin market, such as American Radiator and Nickel Plate showed substantial losses on a small turnover.

The weekly clearing public statement showed increases in most of the principal items.

Foreign exchanges showed an improved tone in quiet trading. Demand sterling ruled about half-a-cent higher around $4.46 1-4, and French francs were again quoted above 5.30 cents.

Cottonseed Crushed In August Shows 8,000-Ton Increase

Washington, September 20.—Cottonseed crushed during August totaled 63,541 tons, compared with 55,096 tons in August last year, and on hand at mills August 31, 92,649 tons, compared with 123,003 tons on August 31 last year, the census bureau announced today.

Cottonseed products manufactured in August and on hand August 31, were:

Crude oil produced 17,922,241 pounds, compared with 15,182,320 last year, and on hand 9,346,594 pounds, compared with 7,588,473 a year ago.

Refined oil produced 11,144,121 pounds, compared with 12,066,749 last year, and on hand 54,201,292 pounds, compared with 68,690,554 a year ago.

Cake and meal produced 29,0669 tons, compared with 26,003 last year, and on hand 23,229 tons, compared with 26,881 a year ago.

Linters produced 11,657 bales, compared with 10,029 last year, and on hand 44,499 bales, compared with 22,463 a yea ago.

Exports of cottonseed products during August were:

Crude oil 598,233 pounds, compared with 402,363 last year; refined oil 850,653 pounds, compared with 1,306,965 pounds; cake and meal 4,143 tons, compared with 6,794, and linters 6,064 bales, compared with 3,825.

The Southern railway today applied to the interstate commerce commission for authority to issue $7,050,000 4 1-2 per cent equipment trust certificates, with which to purchase 50 locomotives, 25 passenger coaches, 10 baggage-express cars, six dining cars, 2,500 box cars and 250 stock cars, the total cost of which will be $8,835,000.

Final value of the Danville & Western Railway company was fixed by the interstate commerce commission today at $1,913,000 as of June 30, 1916.

Declaration of a 33 per cent stock dividend by the Western Pacific Railroad corporation contingent upon change of the Denver & Rio Grande Western reorganization will not be voted by the directors until the latter road has been sold and the receiver discharged, according to Western Pacific officials. Action of a Denver court in fixing upset price of $17,935,700 and ordering the auction of the road within 38 to 70 days had indicated a final settlement before the end of the year. On the basis of this, Western Pacific stock yesterday touched a new 1924 top price at 25 1-4.

Railway operating income of the Kansas City Southern Railway company declined $117,606 in August compared with the same month last year. Operating revenues dropped $283,789. For the eighth months of 1924, operating revenues showed a decrease of $1,154,454 and operating income declined $283,323 in comparison with the corresponding period of 1922.

Fewer commercial failures in the United States this week are reported by R. G. Dun & Company, the total of 291 comparing with 319 last week and 302 in the corresponding week in 1923.

Fresh reductions in gasoline prices, counteracting the good effect of a contraction in crude-oil production, yesterday curbed the speculative enthusiasm that had been built up for an advance in stock prices during the week. The disconcerting oil situation, which recently had appeared to be improving, had an unsettled effect on the entire list.

Dividend distribution in October, it was estimated, will be the largest of any month this year and also will swell the total for the last quarter to the highest level of any three-month period. The release of this heavy volume of funds had raised some conjecture as to the probable effect on the money market. It is expected, however, that this will be upset by the small amount of bond issues called for payment during the month.

WEEKLY COTTON GOODS REVIEW

New York, September 20.—Trading in cotton goods has been light and irregular owing to the uncertainty of raw cotton values. Prices for the staple have become lower than many manufacturers anticipated at this period and the rapidity of the decline has unsettled some buyers. They need goods and should be entering into contracts, but are held back by apprehension of still lower prices as the crop movement bears down on values.

Print cloths, sheetings and other convertibles declined in price from 1-4 to 1-2 cent a yard without stimulating large purchases. The finished goods markets have been fairly steady, but both retailers and wholesalers continue to buy for spot and nearby delivery. Percales and ginghams are in moderate call. Bleached muslin, unbranded, are lower with sales of fair proportions. Sheets and pillow cases are being bought steadily, and in some instances mills are comfortably supplied with business for the next few weeks. Tickings, denims and other colored cottons are in lighter stocks in first hands. Flock dot voiles, broadcloths, warp sateens and crayon mixtures continue to lead in fine goods demand. Cotton and silk mixtures continue strong for spring.

Curtailment of production is slowly decreasing. In some southern states 90 per cent of the spindles are now in operation. Wage revisions are under way and others are being talked of.

Prices current in primary markets are as follows: print cloths, 28 inch, 64x64's, 7 cents; 64x60's, 6 3-4 cents; 38 1-2 inch, 64x64's, 9 cents; brown sheetings, southern standards, 15 1-2 cents; ticking, 8 ounces, 26 cents; denims, 2.20's, indigo, 22 cents; prints, 10 cents; staple ginghams, 15 cents, nominal; dress ginghams, 18 1-2 and 21 cents, nominal.

Denver and Rio Grande Railroad To Be Sold At Auction October 29

Denver, September 20.—The Denver & Rio Grande Western railroad will be sold at public auction on October 29, according to an announcement here today by Cass E. Harrington, special master to conduct the sale named by Judge Foster Symes yesterday. The minimum to be bid, under the direction of the court, will be $17,935,700.

New York, September 20.—An opening advance in today's cotton market was checked by week-end realizing and prices later eased off on the appearance of renewed selling by the south. December broke from 22.25 to 21.90, or 18 points net lower, and closed at 21.95, with the general market closing steady at net declines of 7 to 23 points.

The market showed considerable strength at the start, initial prices advancing 14 to 19 points on reports of further rains in the south, steady Liverpool cables, and more encouraging advices from the goods market. October sold up to 22.85 and January to 22.32, as trade buying was augmented by further covering of shorts. The failure of demand to broaden appeared to be a disappointment to holders of contracts, however, and as soon as the initial buying had been supplied the market turned easier under liquidation.

Reports that selling orders were again reaching here from the southwest contributed to the easier tone of the market later in the morning and there were declines of some 30 to 37 points from the best, with October selling off to 22.48 and January to 21.98 in the late trading. Last prices were 6 to 7 points up from the lowest on covering.

Private cable attributed the firm undertone in Liverpool to unfavorable weather reports and buying by brokers with London trade connections. Reports from Worth street indicated that there had been a considerable increase of business in gray goods for delivery extending up to the first of the year, and that prices were generally firmer. The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 67,973 bales, against 68,097 last year.

TONE IRREGULAR AT NEW ORLEANS.

New Orleans, September 20.—The cotton market was somewhat irregular in today's trading, which was largely of the usual week-end and evening-up character. As shorts had pretty well covered during the last few days most of the evening up was in the way of longs liquidating, hence the general trend of values was downward, although there was no particular selling pressure and fluctuations were comparatively narrow with final results showing a net decline of 11 points on the more active trading months.

As Liverpool was about due at the start first trades in near months showed losses of 1 to 8 points, but by the time March was reached on the opening call prices rallied in sympathy with New York, which had opened higher, and late months showed initial gains of 5 to 14 points. October, December and January soon were 6 to 7 points above yesterday's close, and these figures represented the highs of the day. The market later eased off gradually on long liquidation until October traded at 21.55, December at 21.66, and January at 21.79, or 22 to 27 points down from the earlier highs. There was a slight rally in the final trading on shorts covering for over the week-end and the close showed net losses for the day of 10 to 11 points.

It was largely a weather market, although price movements were also influenced by week-end liquidation and evening-up of commitments in advance of the government reports, due September 23. The initial small gains were due to overnight buying orders based on recent rains. As soon as the map was posted showing no rains in the western belt, the market eased off on selling by both speculative shorts and by the trade. The official weather forecast for over Sunday called for showers in practically every section of the belt.

News, Views And Reviews

Stock Letter.

FENNER & BEANE.

New York, September 20.—Once more the market was for the most part of the specialty variety and many individual stocks moves were in evidence. Standard Plate Glass was extremely weak while American Tobacco, California Packing, Wabash preferred "A," American Wool and Missouri Pacific preferred moved up sharply. The railroads as a group were in moderate demand and the northwestern roads, Great Northern and Northern Pacific seem to be undergoing a change of sentiment owing to optimistic public utterances on the part of railroad officials regarding the financial future of these roads. Industrials and oil stocks were for the most part dull and without feature. Final tone of prices showed a moderate amount of optimism regarding the future of stock market quotations during the coming week.

LIVINGSTON & CO.

New York, September 20.—With the advent of new General Motors stock on the stock exchange, we should have a new leader which will be able to make substantial moves. And as a result of its large holdings of General Motors, Du Pont should become a very good trading stock. It is probably a buy around these prices.

We continue bullish on Steel, Sloss, Gulf States, American Locomotive, Hide and Leather preferred, Alcohol, Fuel, Missouri Pacific preferred, Katy preferred, Frisco preferred and the copper stocks.

Cotton Letters.

C. P. ELLIS & CO.

New Orleans, September 20.—Today's market has been rather quiet, the trading representing for the most part evening up of speculative transactions in advance of the bureau report to be published early next week. A slight early advance on further rains from Arkansas, east, was checked by renewed hedge selling induced by clearing weather in the southwest. The immediate course of the market will depend upon the character of the bureau reports, but with clearing weather and a resumption of the movement upon a full scale we are inclined to look for further pressure and a lower market.

POST & FLAGG.

New York, September 20.—The selling movement looks to have reached its climax for the time being, and with prices below cost of production speculative interests are likely to act with increasing caution in selling for short account, recognizing that only a full realization of the higher crop idea will serve to bring on such pressure from the actual as will serve to give operations of that sort a successful issue. The nature of the report next week cannot be forecast, but the figures will need to hold up well if they are to promote reselling at this level by those who have already covered their shorts. The chief menace to the crop now is an early killing frost which would cut the prospective yield very sharply.

FENNER & BEANE.

New Orleans, September 20.—Sentiment still leans largely to selling side on theory that the government estimate is more likely to come bearish than bullish on account of the small deterioration reported by the private bureaus whose estimates averaged 57.4 compared with 59.3 from the bureau on September 1. Indications are that we are in for a period of rainy cold weather, which may have as much effect on sentiment as a high bureau if it materializes.

LIVINGSTON & CO.

New York, September 20.—Apparently the technical position has been greatly eased by the recent covering by large shorts, and in the absence of continued covering demand doubt if the market can be sustained unless something develops to revive bullish confidence. Weather conditions, however, will be an important influence during the next few weeks, but increased hedge pressure is to be expected with active resumption of picking and there is talk of a considerable quantity of cotton probably coming this way for October tender.

P. R. DUGGAN & CO.

New York, September 20.—We hear many reports that the bolls are small, that cotton has opened prematurely, and that they are getting less lint cotton than usual. The weather has been bad of late, which has caused a halting of the movement and a better basis of course. If the weather turns good we may have another flood of hedge selling and cotton prices may go lower temporarily. Nevertheless, we advise purchase on good breaks, as we expect considerably higher prices ultimately.

ORVIS BROS. & CO.

New York, September 20.—We would prefer purchases on moderate weakness and liquidation on strength before Tuesday's bureau report. Liverpool due Monday: October, 12.78; January, 12.60.

H. & B. BEER.

New Orleans, September 20.—A. V. Curran & Co., correspondents: Course of market for near future will likely be governed by nature of next Tuesday's crop forecast which will be issued September 23, 10 a. m., New Orleans time. The government report of September 8 pointed to a production of 12,787,000 bales. The average of eight mid-month private reports as to condition is 57.5. On 8th, instant, returns to government as of September 1 averaged condition of crop 59.3. Indicated crop would be, if next Tuesday's bureau 58, about 13,154,000; 57, about 12,927,000; 56, about 12,700,000; 55, about 12,473,000.

HUBBARD BROS. & CO. 4 N4

New York, September 20.—A better demand for goods was reported in the dry goods market with an advancing tendency in prices. The trade as a whole are still skeptical as to the long side as they feel that this is simply a temporary recovery in prices previous to the government report. There is, however, a much better feeling and if the government report should be at all bullish, we will have a sharp advance. Liverpool futures are due tomorrow: October, 12.79; December, 12.53.

New York, September 20.—Bond prices rallied moderately in today's brief session of the market, which was unusually active for Saturday trading session. Heavy buying of railroad issues buoyed up this group and stimulated trading in other sections of the list.

Bonds of the western carriers moved up in sympathy with a rise in stocks, based on expectations that forthcoming earnings statements would reflect the results of heavy grain traffic in the last few weeks. Substantial gains were recorded by Atchison general and adjustment 4s, Rio Grande Western 4s, St. Paul convertibles 4 1-2s, Grand Trunk Railway 7s, St. Louis Southwestern 4s and Minneapolis and St. Louis refunding 5s.

Missouri Pacific and international Great Northern issues continued to respond to progress in merger plans. The latter road's adjustment 6s moved up 1 1-4 points to 63 1-4, extending their net gain for the week to more than 6 points.

Establishment of a new top price for the year at 147 by Brooklyn Union Gas 7s of 1932 featured trading in public utility bonds.

Liberty bonds reached new high levels on the current upward movement and foreign obligations held firm.

DAILY STOCK FEATURE

Over Fenner & Beane's Private Leased Wire.

ERIE will probably earn during 1924 at least as much as the $5.22 per share on the common stock reported in 1923.

STANDARD PLATE GLASS: Standard Plate Glass was decidedly weak in today's market and may easily gravitate toward lower price levels. There seemed to be very little support for the stock, around $20 a share. An unseasoned issue of this kind is always susceptible to reactions of this kind whenever market conditions are unfavorable.

The Day in Finance

BY R. L. BARNUM

Too Much Resistance by Labor to Wage Adjustments May Impair Profits, Is Belief of Credit Man — Business Tone Is Firm, Say Observers.

New York, September 20.—Labor must learn that too much resistance to wage adjustments may impair profits which are absolutely essential to healthy business and prosperity for all concerned, J. H. Tregoe, executive head of the National Association of Credit Men, declared at this week's meeting of his organization held at Atlantic City. While this viewpoint was being voiced the whole of New England was holding mass meetings, having parades and exhibitions, and otherwise joining in a "prosperity" drive in an effort to revive its textile industry while conferences were also being held between textile mill managers and employees to see if it is possible to cut wages from 10 to 15 per cent.

Take Fall River, one of the cities which joined in this week's textile industry celebrations. That city has no less than 111 cotton mills alone, employing 35,000 operatives. For months these mills have either been shut down entirely or have been working on a schedule of three or four days a week between shut-downs and even then have been employing only one-third of the usual normal force, with the average weekly wage not over $12.

When general trade was dragging on the bottom a few months ago much talk was heard of a coming widespread readjustment in wages. At that time a number of industrial and financial leaders were interviewed on the subject, the consensus of opinion as then expressed in this column being that no general wage readjustment was in sight if for no other reason than that such a movement on the eve of a presidential election would be discouraged by leaders of both the republican and democratic parties. That viewpoint proved to be correct. But talk of wage cuts after election is now being heard. Is it likely that this new movement will succeed?

Something Must Be Done.

In the case of the New England textile industry it is perfectly obvious that something must be done. With more modern machinery and cheaper labor the south is rapidly taking leadership in the textile industry away from Fall River and other New England long-established manufacturing centers. In some other lines of industry wage readjustments downward may be ahead. But industrial and financial leaders interviewed again this week on this subject again expressed doubt as to general wage cutting in the near future.

In leading industrial and financial quarters here the belief was expressed this week that the time to bring about wage reductions is when general business is on the decline, not when it is improving as it now is. In such quarters it was pointed out that because of high overhead, largely in high wages, manufacturing profits are now very small and likely to get smaller as a result of domestic and foreign competition. However, it was added that the cost of living is again increasing and likely to go on increasing for some months to come and that under such conditions wage reductions are not likely.

There is no question but that the cost of living is again showing an upward tendency. When general trade inactivity was at its worst this summer the purchasing power of a dollar, taking 1913 at 100 cents, was figured around 69 cents compared with only 40 cents when commodity prices made their average high in 1920. This week's average of commodity prices made the purchasing power of a dollar only 66 cents. As general trade tinues to improve, commodity prices will continue to advance, resulting in a corresponding decrease in the buying power of the dollar.

No Marked Decline.

However, in the best industrial and financial circles here the decline in the purchasing power of the dollar is not expected to go very far. In such quarters it was pointed out that the average of commodity prices in England and elsewhere abroad is now declining and that under such conditions we could expect increased competition which would check our upward movement in commodity prices.

In this week's conference the executive head of the National Association of Credit Men, who is in close touch with 30,000 manufacturers, wholesalers and bankers, expressed the belief that this country is financially sound and with business on the upgrade, adding, however, "the commercial sickness of the world caused largely by the instability of finance and maneuvering among the industrial powers of Europe and their governments, has been very serious. A clear road out of the situation has been found in the so-called Dawes plan. There should be from now on steady revival of trade in Europe, although American credit executives do not expect the Dawes plan or any other plan to restore conditions to normal over night."

May Impair Profits.

In brief, Mr. Tregoe expressed the belief that from now on" our industries should profit by the return of Europe's business health," but that before a thoroughly healthy condition is reached, "labor must learn that too much resistance to wage adjustments may impair profits which are absolutely essential to healthy business and prosperity for all concerned."

Here is the way one leading banking house here analyzes the situation and outlook: "While there is a large volume of business moving, as attested by the usual indices of bank clearings, car loadings, etc., it is still well below that of a year ago and the improvement is but very gradual. Business is being done on a close margin. Perhaps the situation may be fairly sized up by saying that there is nothing to cause concern and nothing to arouse much enthusiasm."

The views last quoted accurately reflect the opinion prevailing in the best industrial and banking circles here at the close of this week, regarding the general business outlook. This week the treasury at Washington in one day had a turn-over in the money market of $1,000,000,000 without causing the least flurry in interest rates, the rate on call loans actually falling that day on the outside market from 2 to 1 1-2 per cent. At this time last year smaller treasury operations advanced the open rate on call loans from 5 per cent to 6. If any great expansion in general trade was in sight money would not be lending at the low rates quoted this week.

BIG BREAK SEEN IN WHEAT PRICES

Chicago, September 20.—Wheat underwent a decided setback in price today at the last. Prospective enlargement of the United States visible supply total on Monday was a weakening factor. Closing quotations for wheat were heavy, 2 cents to 2 3-8 cents net lower, December $1.31 1-2 to $1.13 3-4 and May $1.37 3-8 to $1.37 5-8, with corn 1 3-8 to 2 1-8 cents down, oats showing 1-2 cent to 1 1-8 cent decline, and provisions unchanged to 7 cents higher.

For at least the time being, demand from wheat buyers appeared to have been filled up. It was poined out that there had been nearly two months of big receipts of winter wheat and several weeks of large arrivals from the spring crop, with prices only a few cents under the season's top record. Besides, an estimate was current giving world stocks of wheat on September 1 as 219,958,000 bushels compared with 161,916,000 bushels last year. Under such circumstances, numerous holders of wheat appeared to lose courage to retain ownership over the week-end, and their efforts to sell found buying power at its lightest.

Persistent rain in Canada delaying the crop movement there and damaging the quality of wheat was largely responsible for relative strength in wheat prices during the earlier part of the day. It was also asserted that much of the new Canadian wheat arriving at terminals was showing injury by frost. Argentine and Australian crop advices, however, were bearish and with no aggressive demand in evidence the market gave way abruptly near the finish.

Summer-like weather eased down corn and oats, despite a frost forecast for Wyoming and North Dakota.

In sympathy with hog values, the provision market was firm.

Grain Letter.

FENNER & BEANE.

Chicago, September 20.—WHEAT: Weakness developed in latter part of session. Market rallied quickly from opening depression as Winnipeg was strong. Good buying followed and a firm tone prevailed for considerable period. However, there was general fear sale on the bulges, particularly by houses with northwest and southwest connections and this checked advance. Selling by commission houses later attracted local selling and long liquidation and considerable decline resulted. Seaboard reported 600,000 bushels worked for export.

CORN: Market had heavy tone most all day. Much of the buying was local. Some selling credited to east. Discouraged longs sold late and brought on considerable liquidation. Rain general over country and unfavorable for crop.

OATS: Market was easier, the action of corn was depressing and there was a little hedging. Liquidation more conspicuous late. Commission houses bought, but the general trade was not large. German crop estimated 130,000,000 less than last year.

RYE: Market relatively firmer than others. There was liquidation by local longs because of weakness in other pit but exporters absorbed all offerings.

PROVISIONS: Market quiet. Early firmness due to some outside buying of deferred lard. Later demand light and market eased off. Hogs, steady. Cash trade not as good as earlier in week.

PAIGE-JEWETT DEALERS IN SOUND POSITION

Coincident with an article published recently in the nation's leading financial newspaper (Wall Street Journal) in which it is pointed out that "the ratio of current assets to current liabilities is more than three to one," referring to the Paige-Detroit Motor Car company's sound financial position, Harry M. Jewett, president, calls attention to the sound condition of the company's dealer organization.

Records of stock (new cars) in Paige and Jewett dealers' hands show that on the average there are two and one-half Jewett and three-quarter Paige cars per dealer, according to Mr. Jewett. He also points out that this includes cars on showroom floor and demonstrators, both of which usually are not included in records of this kind.

Should every dealer carry a full line of cars he would have on hand seven Jewetts and seven Paiges," says the Paige company head. "Of course, at no time does every member of our big dealer organization keep one of each model on hand.

"The Paige-Detroit Motor Car company has no cars in storage, having only the normal day-to-day supply to meet shipping requirements. Further, during the month of July stocks in dealers' hands were decreased 2,400 new cars, 300 of which were Paige cars and 2,100 Jewett cars.

This means that Paige and Jewett dealers sold during the month 2,400 more cars than were shipped from the factory. The present stock of cars per dealer is as low as the company has ever had under normal conditions.

"With the bringing out of the Proven Jewett and its record of a billion miles of service behind it, the dealer organization is wonderfully well equipped from a financial standpoint to materially increase its present large volume of business.

"Our records, obtained from dealer reports, also show less capital tied up in used cars than at the same period last year. There is every indication that the automobile industry and the Paige-Detroit Motor Car company especially will enjoy a larger volume of business this fall than during the same period of any other past year."

Atlanta Girls Win Honorable Mention On Agnes Scott Roll

Nine Atlanta girls were on the honor roll of Agnes Scott college, it was announced Saturday by Dr. J. R. McCain, president. The purpose and aim of this honor roll, an innovation at the college, is to give mention to girls who have done exceptional work during the past year, but who did not gain admission into Gamma Tau Alpha, the highest honor society at the college. The list, taken from the present senior, junior and sophomore classes, follows:

Seniors: Miss Elizabeth Cheatham, Atlanta; Miss Sarah Fullbright, Atlanta; Miss Julia Pope, Washington, Ga.; Miss Margery Speake, Huntsville, Ala.

Juniors: Miss Isabelle Clarke, Atlanta; Miss Juanita Greer, Atlanta; Miss Olive Hall, Atlanta; Miss Martha Jackson, Atlanta; Miss Margaret Whittington, Atlanta; Miss Louisa Duls, Charlotte, N. C.; Miss Catherine Graeber, Yazoo City, Miss.; Miss Nan Lingle, Richmond, Va.; Miss Grace Ogden, Mobile, Ala.

Sophomores: Miss Susan Clayton, Atlanta; Miss Grace Zachary, Atlanta; Miss Mary Floyd Davis, LaGrange, Ga.; Miss Frances Buchanan, Macon; Miss Miriam Preston, Korea, Asia; Miss Roberta Thomas, Waverly, Tenn.

NAPIER HAS RETURNED FROM RICHMOND MEET

Attorney-General George M. Napier returned Saturday to his office at the state capitol after attending the annual convention of securities commissioners, held during the past week at Richmond, Va.

Mr. Napier stated that there was a strong probability that next year's convention will come to Atlanta. Had the decision been made last week, Atlanta would undoubtedly have been selected as the 1925 meeting place, he said, but under the rules of the association the executive committee will choose the convention city some time next year.

T. B. Connor, chief examiner for the Georgia securities commission, is first vice president of the national body and on the opening day of the Richmond convention presided in the absence of the president.

Halifax, Nova Scotia.—By next summer there will be 10,000,000 seedlings at Frank Barnjum's nursery in Annapolis Royal, Nova Scotia, and these will be distributed free of charge to the farmers of Nova Scotia. It is hoped in this way to get the reforestration of the sea-coast province under way on a broad scale.

South's Largest Used Car House

Carrying on hand a selection of more than 200 late model standard make cars, all of which have been reconditioned and carry a guarantee to the purchaser, J. M. Harrison & Co., the largest and best-known used-car dealers perhaps in the southern states, has opened their new showrooms at 125-131 Ivy street.

Beginning about five years ago, with a limited stock and in showrooms with a total of perhaps 10,000 square feet of space, this concern has progressed by fair dealing and the practice of rendering full value to all purchasers, to the leadership among used car dealers in the south and today showrooms totalling more than 40,000 square feet are required to carry the splendid line of automobiles offered for sale.

During the five-year period since the opening of this remarkable business, its sales have increased with leaps and bounds and a staff of salesmen, office workers and shop force has more than doubled. Each of the 200 or more used cars on the salesroom floor has been placed there only after a thorough reconditioning in their own shops ,where a force of expert mechanics familiar with every make car is maintained. The cars are purchased only after their worth has been determined by buyers experienced in the close examination, inspection and appraisal of used cars, and the very fact that they occupy places on the salesroom floor is prima facie evidence that they are quality cars.

Only Best Cars Bought.

The practice of selecting only cars that can be placed in the very best of condition after taking them over, giving them the kind of reconditioning that will make them about as good as new, coupled with the frank, fair way in which the members of the J. M. Harrison & Co. staff deal with their patrons, is said to have given this concern the impetus required to place it in the front rank among southern used-car dealers.

The personnel of the J. M. Harrison & Co. is composed of the following well-known figures in Atlanta automobile circles: J. M. Harrison, proprietor, who is perhaps the leading used-car dealer in the south. He has been in the used car branch of the automobile business for five years, during which time he has built for himself and company a splendid reputation for fair dealing and business efficiency.

R. S. Evans, sales manager, also an outstanding figure in local auto circles, whose used-car experience has been of equal duration with that of Mr. Harrison. Mr. Evans, who is a young man of vigorous ideas of selling, has built up a staff of salesmen that has continued to increase the business of the house with each month and year until its sales are perhaps larger today than those of any similar establishment in the southern states.

Joseph Redwine, manager of the Alemite Lubricator Company of Georgia, owned by the J. M. Harrison & Co., is said to have made good with a rush in his connection with the company. He has been with the company only a short time, but is looked upon as one of the most capable sales specialists in the business. He has charge of the sales of the well-known lubricant named above.

Ruggles Shop Manager.

F. G. Ruggles, shop manager of many years' experience in the reconditioning of cars, it said to have added his quota to the splendid reputation of this concern for turning out the very highest types of used cars to be found upon the market in any southern city.

Louis I. Cline, chief of the office force handles the business matters for the company and keeps step with the increasing activity of the firm. Mr. Cline is well known in business circles of Atlanta and is a popular member of the Harrison organization.

H. H. Harris, member of the sales staff, has contributed much to the popularity of the J. M. Harrison & Co., by his personality and his ability as a salesman of high-grade used cars.

A. J. Bowman, also of the sales staff has had much experience in the used-car business and has a wide circle of friends in the automobile business.

Harold Walraven, salesman, is given much credit for the sales made in the Alemite department and is looked upon as an authority on matters pertaining to proper lubrication. Mr. Walraven is popular among automobile and service station people in Atlanta.

"Our success," said R. S. Evans, chief of the sales staff of the used-car department, has been because of the fact that we give the public a square deal. By this we mean that nothing in the way of an automobile is offered to the public that we are not willing to guarantee. The house maintains a corps of buyers whose duty it is to thoroughly examine every car offered us for purchase. The investigation is painstaking and we do not purchase a car that can not be put in first-class condition and carry our guarantee."

Sales Staff Increased.

Mr. Evans called attention to the fact that in addition to the sales staff, the company maintains a corps of mechanics who work on the used cars in a shop that is equipped with every modern tool and device for making practically new cars out of those that have had some use. The mechanics are thoroughly familiar with every make of car and capable of doing any sort of repair that might be necessary. Cars are painted, upholstered and put in as near perfect condition as possible for a used car and a visit to the mammoth salesrooms of the company will convince anyone that efficient work has been done on the cars, many of which look like new.

"We seek to give the public not only the benefit of our experience as dealers in used cars, but we superintend the reconditioning to make sure that no hidden defect might be allowed to weaken one of our cars, unknown to the purchaser. It has always been the policy of the J. M. Harrison & Co., to state to each purchaser the exact condition of the car of their choice, and this square dealing has produced a great volume of business for us."

The big salesrooms of the J. M. Harrison & Co., with its three floors cover approximately 40,000 square feet of space. It is the largest show room to be found in Atlanta. The modern business offices are located on the ground floor with the offices devoted to the sale of Alemite, the well-known lubricant for which this company has the sole distributing rights in Georgia.

The big shop with its full line of tools and equipment for reconditioning cars, is to be found in the basement, which also has storage space for cars.

The top floor is devoted entirely to showroom space.

Ottawa, Ontario.—Creamery butter manufactured in Canada in 1923 amounted to 163,456,759 pounds, valued at $56,894,008, an increase in quantity over the previous year of 10,954,859 pounds, and an increase in value of $3,440,726, according to a report issued by the bureau of statistics. The production of creamery butter in 1923 exceeds in quantity the production of any previous year and is exceeded in value only by that of 1920, when the average price per pound was 57 cents.

AIR-COOLING FAVORED BY AIRCRAFT BUILDERS

The third world famous builder of air-planes to be added to the list of Franklin owners is Donald W. Douglas, president of the Douglas Aircraft company of Santa Monica, Calif., designer and builder of the 'round the world flight planes. Orville Wright, of Dayton, and Glenn Curtis, of Hammondsport, N. Y., have for many years been listed as Franklin owners.

In a recently published interview concerning the air-cooled motor, Mr. Douglas points out the advantages it possesses because there is less wear and tear, less chance for the cooling system to suffer from inadvertancy on the part of the operator; saving in weight on account of fewer parts, resulting in saving in power and, therefore, greater fuel efficiency.

Mr. Douglas has applied the same means to judging efficiency to the automobile as he uses in regard to the airplane, that is, the ratio between useful load and dead load. The greater the amount of useful load an automobile can carry in proportion to its dead load, the greater its efficiency. Mr. Douglas finds that the Franklin, which is the lightest fine car built, comes close to his ideas of what an automobile should be.

"The saving in first cost, upkeep and operating cost is much the same in the efficient light-weight car as an airplane," says Mr. Douglas, "and the trend in automobile design must be towards lighter structures, consistent, of course, with durability and safety."

ZENITH BUILDING NEW CARBURETOR FOR FORDS

S. D. Katz, distributor in the state of Georgia for Zenith carburetors, advises that the Zenith-Detroit corporation has brought out a new carburetor for use on Ford cars and trucks, known as Model HT3 1-2, which is the horizontal type having a 7-8-inch barrel and a special Ford flange bolted directly to the intake manifold.

Its compact construction combined with a lacquer finish over its rust-proof coating is said to make this new model of exceptionally pleasing appearance.

The design is much the same as that of other Zenith products, with one improvement of outstanding importance in performance, that of idling under load. This new Zenith-Ford product was tested in heavy traffic and its jet sizes chosen to give the best results under these conditions.

It is claimed that the carburetor will travel at four miles an hour in high without bucking and that it will accelerate quickly from that speed to maximum speed. Another attractive feature is said to be the short time in which the new Zenith can be installed.

The first nurses' training school in the United States was organized at the New England Hospital for Women and Children at Roxbury, Mass., in 1872 by Dr. Susan Dimock.

CITY EXTENSION PLAN INCLUDES TWO SQUARE MILES

Addition to the city of approximately two square miles, part of which is located in each of the fifth, seventh and tenth wards, probably will be approved by the city planning commission at its meeting Monday.

City limits were extended to include the property by an amendment passed by the legislature at its last session, and by an ordinance adopted at a recent meeting of council.

The Morningside subdivision, which includes practically the same area, and which will be in the eighth and ninth wards, will not be taken into the city until after January 1.

BRUSCH WILL ADDRESS LOCAL AUTO DEALERS

Auto Association Meeting on Wednesday Evening To Feature "Service."

Realizing that costantly improved service to the public is a primary factor in the success of those engaged in the retail end of the automotive industry, the Atlanta Automobile association, composed of 160 businesses, embracing every automotive trade line, will open their fall general membership activities with a general membership meeting Wednesday evening, September 24, 6:15 o'clock supper roof garden, Cecil hotel, with a special discussion of subjects dealing with the sales and service ends of the automobile business and its allied trade lines.

George H. Brusch, now sales manager for F. E. Maffett, Inc., and formerly special representative for the National Association of Automotive Dealers, will present to the meeting the splendid possibilities offered the members of the association through cooperative sales and advertising. He is expected to present in a most practical and effective way the unusual benefits to be derived from the right kind of cooperative advertising and publicity. Upon the conclusion of his address, the meeting will be thrown open for general discussion, and in all probability something will develop that will mean the placing of Atlanta on the map as an automotive trading center in a way that has never been attempted before.

In addition, one of Atlanta's big civic leaders will deliver an address on "The Business Outlook," along lines that will appeal particularly to the interests of the members of the automobile association.

An orchestra has been engaged for the occasion, and Fat Elrod, chairman of the entertainment committee, will introduce some features during the service of the supper.

TECH NIGHT SCHOOL OPENS NEW BUILDING

Tech High night school, with classes in eight subjects, will open Monday at the new building at Jackson and Tenth streets, it was announced Saturday by T. W. Clift, director of vocational training.

Trade classes will be offered in departments of auto mechanics, machine shop, sheet metal, applied electricity, machine designing, shop mathematics, architectural drafting and blueprint reading and commercial art and design.

These classes are designed primarily for those working in mechanical trades. No tuition will be charged, but a fee of $1 will be assessed to provide for purchase of required supplies.

Ottawa, Ontario.—About 160,000,000 pickerel fry have been distributed in Ontario, Manitoba and Saskatchewan this season from the fish hatcheries operated by the federal department of marine and fisheries. Over 11,000,000 fry were distributed in Manitoba, 2,000,000 in Saskatchewan, and the balance in Ontario.

EXACT MEASUREMENT ASSURES ACCURACY

Probably no other feature of inspection of Overlands and Willys-Knights is so intricate and detailed as that of the inspection of the differential gears of the Overland models.

A complete outfit of micrometer gear-testing machines furnishes an inspection requirement that is the terror of manufacturers who furnish Willys-Overland material for these parts.

"Willys-Overland gear inspection is more exacting than that of any other car manufactured under $1,500," was the recent statement of the engineer of a company which furnishes the spiral gears for Overland differentials.

Each gear in the Overland's rear system is tested and inspected to the most minute fraction of an inch to prevent a howl or growl in the rear end. Definite assurance of long wear is made by the closeness and accuracy of these tests, which are also the terror of ambitious parts salesmen.

Pekin's most unique school is one for prison officials, which is soon to be opened.

How to Buy a Used Car!

What Is a Used Car?

Any car which has passed from the hands of the Motor Car dealer into the hands of the owner is a used car, regardless of the lapse of time. It may be the veriest junk or it may be a beautiful creation which has been run from the dealer's showroom to the owner's garage. Every car you see on the street is a used car.

Does a Used Car Represent Real Value?

Ordinarily speaking, yes. In many cases a USED CAR represents a better value than a new car of a lower price class, for the reason that depreciation has been figured out of the total cost and you pay for the actual merchandise. The determining factor should be the answer to the question: Why is it offered for sale as a used car?

What Is Your Protection in Buying a Used Car?

Only the reputation of the dealer from whom you buy it. If the dealer is willing and ready to tell you truthfully the facts, to show you records and cost sheets, to consider the sale of a USED CAR as vitally affecting the future of his business, then your USED CAR purchase will be satisfactory, in every respect, as if you were buying the latest model in his line.

In Buying a Used Car You Are Entitled to Know!

1. The name and address of the previous owner.
2. The service to which the car has been subjected.
3. The approximate mileage it has gone.
4. The amount, nature and cost of reconditioning.
5. The reason the car is offered for sale as a used car.

THE REPUTABLE DEALER

Takes in trade only those cars which can be resold at a fair valuation. "He is not a gambler and he is not a horse trader." He considers the used car a piece of merchandise which must be sold fairly and priced correctly. He has the car reconditioned in an efficient manner, at the lowest cost, after a careful examination by experts. He is glad to have you know the entire history of the car so you may competently judge the fairness of the price. For he fixes the price according to the true value and merchandises them according to business lines.

LEGITIMATE MERCHANDISING SALES

SECRET FOOTBALL PRACTICE ORDERED AT TECH

Corkran Leading in National Amateur; Jones Second

Dark Horse Breaks Par 3 Strokes

BY HOMER GEORGE.

Merion Cricket Club, Philadelphia, Pa., September 20.—(Special.)—Playing a phenomenal round and breaking the course record by four strokes, E. Clarke Corckran, of Philadelphia, made a show of the field in the first round of qualifying play for the national amateur golf championship today. He had a total of 67 strokes, which was five better than was done by Bobby Jones, former open champ, of Atlanta, who finished second with a great total of 72. The two were alone in front of the field of 166 starters, though several had 73 and 74s, while many under 80 were turned in. Twenty-nine turned in scores of 77 or better, with 49 at 79 or better.

For several days golf followers in Philadelphia have been figuring that 164, or something like that, would get in the charmed circle of the 32 who will start match play Tuesday. Now it looks certain that it will take better than 160 to get in. As a matter of fact, if the present pace is kept up it will take around 155 to make the grade and with five strokes lead, it looks as if Corckran will have to do something sloppy not to hold the low score when it is over Monday afternoon.

Certain it is that this is the fastest field which ever went out for the grand amateur prize. All kinds of champions are falling by the wayside, but so many stars are shooting super-golf that nothing less is counting.

Difficult Course.

They are shooting it over a course which offers difficulties which are trying the very souls of the competitors. The rough is truly rough, while traps are everywhere. Altogether more than 300 traps are around the course, 100 having been placed since 1916, when the championship was held here last. Bobby Jones took two terrific strokes to get out of that long grass on No. 11 when he hooked his drive, and Chick Evans took an eight on this hole. Twice he tried to hit his ball and failed to move.

The remarkable playing of Corkran, who has been a bit overlooked in the advance gossip, included six birdies. He was over par one stroke on three holes.

Corkran's card:

Par, out	5	4	4	4	3	6
Corkran, out	4	4	2	4	4	4	3	6
Par, in	4	4	4	3	4	3	4	3	4	70
Corkran, in	3	4	4	3	3	3	4	4	3	67

Bobby Jones had tough luck on two holes and this cost him several strokes. However, he was playing in magnificent form and all the Atlanta following is thoroughly pleased with his score. It means he will not have any worry over Sunday and will be able to take it fairly easy Monday in order to qualify. He shot one under par going out, but was three over coming in. His card follows:

Jones card:

Par, out	5	4	4	3	6	3	4	4	3	36
Jones, out	4	4	3	3	5	4	4	4	3	35
Par, in	4	4	4	3	4	3	4	3	4	70
Jones, in	5	6	4	2	4	3	5	4	4	72

The bad error of Jones came on the eleventh when he hooked his drive in the rough. Here it took two powerful blows to get out and Bobby was only trying to get out at that. This made him take a six on the hole. Then on the sixteenth he topped his drive and was forced to take a five. Aside from these two mishaps he was shooting par or better all the way except on No. 10, when he took a five.

One of the largest galleries of the day followed Jones and Max Marston, the latter present champion. Marston shot a 76, having no really bad holes, but getting one over par on six.

College Champ Stars.

Among the youngsters who furnished surprises were Dexter Cummings, the intercollegiate champion who had a score of 73 and who really deserved a bit better, having missed two easy putts, and Roland McKenzie, of Washinton, also with a 73. McKenzie is a 17-year-old high school lad, but played like a veteran. He had a 34 going out, but had some poor luck coming back, taking a 39. He has been playing phenomenal golf for two years, but failed to qualify in the last national at Flossmore. However, he has won a lot of hard matches and has a record which makes it look as if he will be one of the hard players to beat.

Aside from Bobby Jones, the southerners did not do much. Tess Bradshaw had an 88 which put him out of the running. Chick Ridley did not turn in his card which would have been around 90. Al C. Ulmer, of Jacksonville, turned in a 79 and nothing but sensational golf will qualify him. F. M. Laxton, of Charlotte, also failed to turn in his card and was marked withdrawn.

Stars Still in Race.

Most of the big stars are still in the race, though most of the Englishmen were disappointing. Little Willie Hunter got a 74; Francis Ouimet had a 75, Wood Platt a 74, Chick Evans and Max Marston 76 each, while Cyril Tolley, the former English amateur champion, had a 79. Captain Frazer Hale, of Atlanta, was off his game and turned in an 86, which puts him out of the championship flight.

One of the most remarkable putts I ever saw was made by Tolley on the thirteenth hole when he ran three-quarters around the hole and the ball stopped for two full minutes or more then to drop in the hole. He was playing with Jess Guilford, and the latter squatted some ten feet away and whistled and crooked his finger like calling a pet. The ball fell in during this performance.

Thomas B. Paine, of Atlanta, is present and doing many of the important things which the executive committee is called upon to perform. A number of other southerners are here watching the play.

"I'm Not Unreasonable," Says Bennie Karr.

Bennie Karr is rated as a holdout because he has refused to deliver himself to the Cleveland Indians. Sold to the Indians for $10,000, Karr says he was offered a "bonus" of $500, but wants $1,000 to go to the American league club after twirling good ball for the Atlanta Crackers all season. Benny is now sitting pretty in Mount Pleasant, Miss., and says he has his eyes on independent baseball for the rest of his days. From there, he writes:

BENNIE KARR.

BY BENNIE KARR.

The reason I did not report to Cleveland was a little disagreement Mr. Michalove (president of the Atlanta ball club) and I had about the sales rights. All I asked was $1,000 of the price the Cleveland club was to pay for my services.

I don't think I was at all unreasonable in my request after having two seasons like I had with the Crackers. Independent baseball is the way I'm headed now.

Secret Practice for Petrels; No Scrimmage This Week

BY BILL MORROW.

With one of the crises of the Oglethorpe '24 football schedule to be met Saturday when the Petrels mix drive and defense with Tech's powerful crew, Coach Jim Robertson called a halt on open practices following yesterday's workout, and prior to the meeting with the Golden Tornado, spectators will be prohibited from following the Petrels in their final period of preparation.

Unless the present plans of the coaching staff are radically changed the scrimmages of yesterday and Friday marked the last work of this kind before the get-together with the Jackets. Frequent injuries and a badly bruised and battered squad, together with the coaching staff's desire to curtail further hurts in the Oglethorpe camp, caused the let-up at this time.

Under the leadership of Harry Robertson, brother to Jim, the Petrel's hopes have been led at a fast pace since September 1, and the slacking of the pace six days before the battle with Tech will come as a blessing to the Oglethorpe camp. The Petrel grid candidates have held two workouts daily since the opening of the training period, the mornings being spent in light exercising and running signals, while the afternoon sessions were filled with scrimmages, tackling, hitting the dummy and additional heavy work of this kind.

No Loafing.

Though the let-up will be noticed the Oglethorpe candidates will certainly find that their path is not one strewn with roses, for, doubtlessly, the coaching staff will give additional plays to the squad and the majority of the short time that separates the Petrel eleven from actual combat will be spent in perfecting the signals, working of the line and the backfield, in so far as would be expected for an initial encounter.

The Oglethorpe menu or encounters called for a meeting with Piedmont college's representatives yesterday afternoon, but the mountaineers failed to round into satisfactory shape for the Petrel's opener and Piedmont athletic officials were forced to call off this meeting.

Bob Kilgore, veteran fullback, was out in uniform, but failed to take an active part in yesterday's workout on account of an injured side. This hurt is expected to hold Bob in check for a day or so, but will not keep him away from Tech flats Saturday afternoon.

Clay Parrish also received injuries in the hard scrimmages of the past week at the Petrel stronghold, but it is not expected that this big boy will be kept away from the pivot position on account of these injuries. Joe Barton is another one of the dependables on the injured squad, but his return to active duty is expected tomorrow. Other injuries naturally associated with the gridiron are evident around Hermance field, but with scrimmage barred during the week, the squad should be in better condition for the formal opening of the 1924 grid season.

Looking for Reserves.

Coaches Jim and Harry Robertson have been unusually watchful for additional reserve material. As in the past, the reserve strength has failed to completely fill the need and at this stage of the practice session, this season promises to be no exception to the rule. In Barton, Clayton, Summerour, Redfearn, Shephard and several freshmen backs, the Petrel mentor has fairly satisfactory substitutes in the backfield.

The line appears to be the doubtful quantity. The veteran backs have shown up well in the practices, and several new-comers have fitted in well, but the true strength of this department will not be known until the Jackets try their wares against the Petrel defense.

Brantley Boswell, former university star, is picked to give "Nutty" Campbell an interesting race for the quarterback berth. Although a late arrival at the Petrel camp, Boswell showed up nicely while attempting to evade tacklers. Coach Robertson would not allow Boswell to attempt too much, seeming satisfied with his exhibition during the first part of the afternoon.

Start Veterans.

Though the coaching staff has given no inkling into what eleven men will play against the Jackets, it is expected that the veterans will be given first chance. The veteran backfield of Captain Maurer at half, Campbell at quarter, Kilgore at full, and Smith closing the list at the open halfback berth, has been working together for the past week. Nix and Carroll have been in charge of the end positions, Crowe and Justus, tackles; Hardin and Corless, guards, and Parrish completing the list at the pivot positions.

The loss of Reggie O'Dwyer will be felt. O'Dwyer proved to be one of the best bets in the freshman backfield of '23, and he was expected to make a great bid for the quarterback berth until his decision to abandon the gridiron this year and enter the business world. Not only will the loss of O'Dwyer be felt on the football team, but in basketball his loss will be even keener. Playing one of the forward positions on Boys' High, Reggie was practically a unanimous choice for all-state and all-prep and he was counted on heavily to take a lead when the moulding of the Oglethorpe varsity quintet was started.

V. M. I. BEATS WOFFORD 33 TO 0

Lexington, Va., September 20.—(Special.)—In a drizzle that changed to a driving rain the V. M. I. Flying Squadron opened the grid season by defeating Wofford college, 33 to 0. The Cadets staged an irresistible attack soon after the opening whistle, scoring three touchdowns as the result of long runs by Caldwell and White, and one after a series of line plunges including a 20-yard sprint off tackle by Foster, and one from a kick blocked by Clements behind Wofford's goal line and recovered by McCracken.

In the second half the fighting Wofford eleven took a decided brace and held their goal line intact. The Cadets threatened on several occasions after long, beautifully-executed passes from Wyndham White to Jim White and Cherry Watkins, but the Wofford defense tightened at crucial moments, due mainly to the excellent work of Hill.

The playing of Rikard and Haynesworth in the line was a feature of the game, together with Caldwell's 55-yard run from scrimmage, followed shortly by his 60-yard return of a punt.

Wyndham White scored one touchdown after a 65-yard end run behind superb interference and another by plunging six yards through the line. Captain Hammond Ferguson and Watkins also played well for V. M. I. The line-up and position.

Boston, September 20.—The Boston American league baseball club today completed a deal with the Mobile club, of the Southern league, by which Pitcher Harold Wiltse, a left-hander, comes to Boston.

CRACKERS WIN BOTH BARON GAMES

Birmingham, Ala., September 20.—(Special.)—The Barons ushered out the 1924 baseball season here Saturday afternoon in the same listless manner which has characterized their final two weeks' stay, losing to Bert Niehoffs' runners-up by the count of 5 to 2 and 2 to 0.

The lone hope of the final appearance of the Stewarts came in the first game, when they snatched an early lead and actually held it until the eighth stanza. But Harris, twirling for the locals, was unable to hold in check the heaviest hitters in Dixie's major, and the Crackers pushed over a trio of scores, enough to clinch the victory.

Then Mr. McLaughlin held the Baronnial clan to two safe wallops and eliminated all scoring from the ranks of the locals in the second game of the afternoon.

The Stewarts jump to New Orleans Sunday for their final baseball appearance of the season.

They narrowly have missed the opportunity of becoming champions of the cellar, and should the schedule have but a couple of games more, hope would swell high in the breast of local followers of the national pastime for their "favorites" to become real title holders—of the cellar.

Flowers-Siki Bout Called Off

Battling Siki has refused to post a $500 forfeit guaranteeing his appearance here on October 7 with Tiger Flowers, and as a result the bout Saturday was declared off. It was to have marked the first fight-promoting venture here of the Disabled American Veterans of the World War.

In the absence of Walk Miller, matchmaker, Commander A. Harbort stated that he did not know whether or not the veterans will go ahead with plans to stage a fight here October 7. He declared that a decision will be made this week when Miller returns from Ohio, where he is directing Flowers in a series of fights.

Calling off of the Flowers-Siki match will prove disappointing to Atlanta ring fans, as they have not seen Flowers in action since he won the newspaper decision over Harry Greb in their recent meeting at Freemont, Ohio.

Flowers will fight Lee Anderson at Columbus, Ohio, Monday night. He meets Tut Jackson at Canton on September 29 and September 30 he battles Battling Gafee at Zanesville, Ohio. He is matched with Lou Bogash at New York on October 11.

Plays To Retain Trophy

Mrs. Robinson is a former champion of Michigan and is taking a big part in southern golf since she came to Atlanta. Her game may let her keep the trophy another year.

MRS. L. J. ROBINSON.

The cup which Mrs. Robinson now holds was first won in 1922 by Mrs. T. T. Williams, who will seek it again this year.

Mrs. Robinson with the Maier & Berkele trophy which she won last year and for which she will play again on Tuesday.

Play Will Begin Tuesday For Maier-Berkele Golf Cup

BY MRS. CLARENCE BRADLEY.

The woman's third annual handicap golf tournament for the Maier & Berkele cup will get under way over the municipal course at Piedmont park Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock.

Mrs. L. J. Robinson, former Michigan state champion and the present holder of the cup, will be the defender against one of the classiest fields that has ever competed for the cup.

Miss Rosalie Mayer, runner-up in the recent southern championship tourney, led the field last year in the qualifying rounds with a 79 and also hung up a new course record for women, and it is doubtful if that score will be lowered this year.

Mrs. Charles V. Cornell, president of the Atlanta Woman's Golf association, will have charge of this tournament and the players are assured the tournament will be handled in a very efficient manner.

Stymies will be played during this tournament and owing to the excellent condition of the greens and fairways, summer rules will be played. L. L. Wallis, general manager of parks, has made the Piedmont course into one of the best nine-hole municipal courses in the south and assured the committee that the course would be in still better condition for the tournament.

The qualifying rounds will be played within the handicaps and the eight players turning in the lowest scores will form the first flight that will compete for the cup. The second lowest eight will form the second flight, each player will be placed in the flight according to the qualifying score and the handicaps will apply in all matches.

In addition to the Maier & Berkele cup, handsome silver trophies will be awarded the winners and runner-up of as many flights as fill.

The present ground rules now in effect at Piedmont park will be used, and it is requested by the Atlanta Woman's Golf association that the qualifying rounds and all matches be played in the mornings, owing to the crowded condition of the course in the afternoon.

Those expected to play in this tournament are:

Mrs. William Akers, Mrs. L. H. Beck, Mrs. C. E. Bidwell, Mrs. P. Calhoun, Mrs. C. A. Collier, Mrs. C. V. Cornell, Mrs. Jackson Dick, Mrs. K. B. Hancock, Mrs. J. H. Harland, Mrs. J. E. POWER CO. NINE AGAIN WINS CITY TITLE

The Georgia Railway & Power Co. baseball team won the city amateur championship for the third consecutive year yesterday, defeating the fast Atlantic Steel team, 1 to 0, in one of the best amateur games of the local season.

Keys, who has pitched practically every game for the Power company, was on the mound Saturday afternoon and ended the season in a fitting climax, giving up only one hit, a single in the sixth inning by Landrum, playing third base for the Steel company. Only three balls were knocked to the outfield, and two of those were caught after beautiful runs by the Power company outfielders.

Lawson, a former Tech High star, was on the mound for the Steel company and he also pitched good ball, but could not win when his mates were held to one safe hit. Lawson gave up only five hits, but three of those came in the fourth inning when the one opposing run was scored.

Only 28 men faced Keys during the game, and only one man was left on base. Keys did not issue a base on balls.

Englett, of the Power team, made a great running catch in the eighth inning. The slam looked good for at least three bases but Englett, by a leap in the air, speared the ball and saved his mates from a possible defeat.

Both teams fielded well, especially the Power company, as only three balls were knocked to the infield and only three men were retired by strike outs.

HUNT, OWENS DOUBLES CHAMPS

BY M. D. GLEASON.

Jeff Hunt and Frank Owens, the Georgia tennis doubles champions, retained their titles for another year by winning from Carlton Smith and B. M. Grant, Sr., in the final match yesterday of the state tournament that has been going on at the Piedmont Driving club since September 8.

All four of these men have been former Southern and state champions several times, and, after eliminating all other players, they met again and furnished a great match.

Smith and Grant won the first set, 6-3, and it looked like they were going to win the match from the younger men, but when the second set got under way Hunt and Owens began that old team work for which they are famous and began to win game after game, taking the second set, 6-3, and the third set by the same score, 6-3.

After a few minutes' rest the fourth set was played and the large gallery saw some of the best doubles tennis played around Atlanta in many years. Each game went to deuce three, four and five times with the ball passing back and forth many times before the point was finally scored, Hunt and Owens finally winning out, 6-4.

The final in the women's singles, which is being played between Miss Alice Lowndes, the present state champion, and Miss Elizabeth Hutchinson, was not completed. Miss Lowndes won the first set, 6-2, and Miss Hutchinson won the second set by the same score. Darkness prevented further play for the day. This match will be completed this afternoon at 4 o'clock.

FLETCHER OUT WITH KNEE INJURY

BY MARCUS BRYANT.

Athens, Ga., September 20.—(Special.)—With the opening game of the season, in which the Bulldogs meet the Mercer Bears here next Saturday, only one week off, the injury "jinx" has once more put in his appearance in the red and black camp.

This time it was no "promising" player or second string man, but Captain John Fletcher himself.

Captain Fletcher suffered a rather serious injury to his knee when he was tackled by an ambitious freshman in the first full game of the practice season. The Bulldog leader was carried from the field by six of the players and was to undergo an x-ray examination Sunday to determine the extent of the damage. There is a chance that Fletcher will be out in time for the Mercer game but certainly not for several days. He was on crutches Saturday night.

Rats Put Up Fight.

The red and black varsity has a tough time with the first year men in the practice game, being held scoreless for the first quarter, but finally managing to roll up a total of 19 points in the last quarter.

The practice sessions during the next week will be given over mostly to smoothing out the rough spots and developing a strong aerial attack.

While the freshmen managed to hold the attack of the varsity at a standstill when near the goal line, the veterans gained in the middle of the field, the outstanding part of the varsity game was the stonewall defense displayed.

Saturday's scrimmage was the third in as many days and showed that a more definite shape has been assumed within the past few days of practice.

Thompson at End.

Along with Captain Fletcher was "Smack" Thompson on one of the wings opposing the freshmen. Jim Taylor and Carmichael played tackles, while Ike Joselove and "Jelly" Rogers were stationed at the guard positions. "Roose" Day held down the pivot position, with Bellis, Kain, Boland and Sherlock in the backfield.

"Buster" Kilpatrick, George Morton, Jake Butler and Tom Nelson composed the backfield of the other varsity eleven. While Smith, Forbes, Curran, Bell, Luckey and Mapp were used along with many others in the forward wall.

Mercer threw a scare in the Bulldog camp last year when the red and black was held to a 7-to-0 victory and with brighter prospects this year are pitted to give the Georgians a strong battle.

CRACKERS END '24 SEASON IN MOBILE

BY ROY WHITE.

Southern league baseball for 1924 gets its final curtain call this afternoon in four southern cities. The closing schedule for this season is Atlanta at Mobile, Little Rock at Memphis, Birmingham at New Orleans and Chattanooga at Nashville.

After today all that remains of Southern baseball this year is the Dixie series between Memphis and Fort Worth, winner of the Texas league pennant, which begins in Memphis on September 27.

The first two games of the Dixie series will be played in Memphis, to be followed by the third and fourth games in Fort Worth. In the event of a tie for the championship of the south the site of the fifth game will be decided by the toss of a coin.

The Atlanta Crackers fought hard to win the pennant but injuries, sickness, luck and whatever you may call it was on the heels of Manager Bert Niehoff following him around the circuit and during the latter part of June, despite those handicaps and hardships the patched up Crackers started a drive that cinched second place for them and put them in position to threaten the Chicks.

Staged Winning Streaks.

During the closing weeks of play the Crackers staged a winning streak that netted eight victories. They then dropped two in a row and hit another rampage that netted 17 straight victories. New Orleans stopped the long winning streak but immediately afterwards the Crackers started another victory march that was interrupted by Chattanooga last Sunday afternoon in the Tennessee city.

Memphis won the pennant with a well balanced club. The Chicks did not have a leading hitter nor were they leading in fielding. Carlyle, the best hitter on the Chick team, finished third in the league, behind two Atlanta sluggers. Memphis was far behind Atlanta in the total number of runs scored, but the Chick runs were scored when runs meant ball games. The Chicks had three good pitchers in Merz, McGrew and Kelly, and it was in the pitching staff that Johnny Dobbs worked the hardest to win the pennant.

As far as individual leaders are concerned, Atlanta led the league in hitting and in runs scored. Smith was leading hitter of the league with Burrus a close second. Krehmeyer leads the league in sacrifice hits; Paschal, before his departure to the major leagues, was leader in runs scored, and Dumont, Karr and McLaughlin were among the first six pitchers in the circuit.

Best Baseball City.

Atlanta was the best baseball town in the league for figures published last Sunday showed that the local turnstiles turned in more cash customers than any other city in the circuit with several thousand to spare.

The league has prospered, through good playing in every department, and the attendance has been much higher than ever before.

Jackets Show Up Well in Scrimmage

The 1924 Golden Tornado is off down the stretch to the actual opening of the football season, next Saturday against Oglethorpe, with announcement yesterday that henceforth all practices at Tech, except those one day a week, will be closed to everyone. No cards will be honored at the gates except on that one day, either Tuesday or Wednesday. The decision on the day will be announced early this week.

Announcement that Tech will begin secret practice Monday followed the best scrimmage this year. Coaches Alexander and Wood, pushing the candidates for regular places on the Jacket eleven this fall, gave the freshmen the small end of a battle that waged up and down Grant field, with varsity backfield men smashing the line and linemen taking the ball for gains on passes.

Big improvement during the last week was seen in the scrimmage yesterday, a show promised for three days last week. It was scheduled first for Thursday afternoon, but was postponed to Friday, and then postponed to Saturday.

Coach Alexander, after the scrimmage, did not let his enthusiasm carry him away. His only remark was that "they looked better than they did this time last Saturday." A satisfied smile, however, gave a hint that the development of the Tornado during the week just passed has been satisfactory from the standpoint of the coaches.

INTERFERENCE GOOD—STATON.

BY JOHN STATON.
Four Years End, Tech.

In the face of the humid weather which prevailed yesterday, the Tech 'varsity and freshman teams battled each other with considerable vigor. Since the initial scrimmage, held a week ago, the team has improved perceptibly in certain phases, particularly in interfering.

There were times yesterday when the crowd—there were about 1,000 present—would wildly applaud the efforts of one of the Tech backfield men. But always preceding those fine runs was a fine barrage of interference.

Tom Angley did credit unto himself yesterday by several nice gains in a broken field. Tom's favorite stunt was to slip off tackle behind his interference, then make a break for the clear just as he passed the line of scrimmage.

Smother Opposing Ends.

The best interfering of the afternoon was accomplished by the leading men who were designated to take out the opposing end. With practically no exceptions, the freshman end was literally smothered by two hard charging varsity backs. If the leaders in the Tech interference can keep up this good work all season, Tech is bound to get away for some sizable gains, inasmuch as the backfield this year will be composed of men who are well-heeled in the art of broken field running. Once past the defensive end, the runner stands an excellent opportunity of gaining at least three yards before being brought to earth.

Forward passes worked exceptionally well yesterday, but it must not be thought that this department of play has experienced a sudden rise to the heights of perfection. Most of the passes completed were by virtue of the fact that the freshman team failed to adequately rush the passer. Lack of experience let them stand around waiting for the pass to be thrown.

The importance of line play in forward passing cannot be emphasized too strongly. On offense, if the line holds well, the passer has an excellent opportunity of completing his throw. And conversely, if the defensive line rushes well, it is practically impossible to get a damaging pass completed. It goes without argument that the best way to break up forward passes is to kill them before they are thrown.

Needs Punch at Goal Line.

Tech has not yet developed a punch close to the goal line. When hovering near the center of the field, the Tech team was arsenic, but under the shadow of the goal posts, the same eleven men had difficulty in pushing the ball even a couple of yards for a marker. The difficulty is that the Tech's line has not yet learned how to work as a unit. In line-bucking, it is absolutely essential that the line open up a hole for the runner. Even Wycoff is unable to plow through a piled mass of struggling humans.

The Tech defense appears to be working smoothly for this stage of the season. It is a trifle more polished than the offense. Of course, against the freshmen team, which has had scant opportunity for developing a driving offense, the defensive play should not be taken too seriously. The real test will come in the Oglethorpe game a week hence.

There is no doubt that Tech will be able to meet Oglethorpe with her best foot forward. The defense is well organized. The offense will be whipped into shape during the coming week. The passing game has improved. There can be no doubt of that. All in all, the outlook is rather encouraging.

Breaks Own World Records

Springfield, Mass., September 20.—Sig Huaghal, world's champion dirt-track automobile driver, this afternoon bettered his three world's records made yesterday on the track at the Eastern States exposition and added one more to his string. In an exhibition five-mile event against time, the Norwegian was clocked in 1:56 for two miles, 2:56 for three miles, 3:55 3-5 for four and 4:55 3-4 for the fifth mile, all of which set new records.

Yesterday in the two-mile he made the distance in 1:56 4-5, the third mile in 2:56 4-5 and the fourth mile in 3:56 4-5. The former world's record for five miles, made by Huagdahl here two years ago, was 5:00 3-4.

Haugdahl Enters Southeastern Fair Auto Races

Hoary Indicates He Will Also Run at Lakewood Park; Horse Races Are Announced

Interest in the automobile racing program for the Southeastern fair early in October at Lakewood park took a jump yesterday with word from Sig Haugdahl, dirt track champion of Florida, that he will be here to pilot his streak in all events.

Just after word from Haugdahl was received, Fred Hoary, another nationally-known driver, notified fair officials that he probably will be in the run for the money at Lakewood.

Strong competition will be provided by this pair for entrants in the auto events.

Announcement was also made yesterday of the horse races for the fair this year. Three events are scheduled for Monday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, with Monday and Wednesday holding the feature races. Two events will be run Tuesday.

The big event Monday will be the free-for-all trot, with a purse of $400. The amount of all four purses of $500 each, scheduled for Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. Other races the opening day will be the 2:13 pace and the 2:20 pace.

On Tuesday there will be only the 2:15 trot and the 2:24 trot.

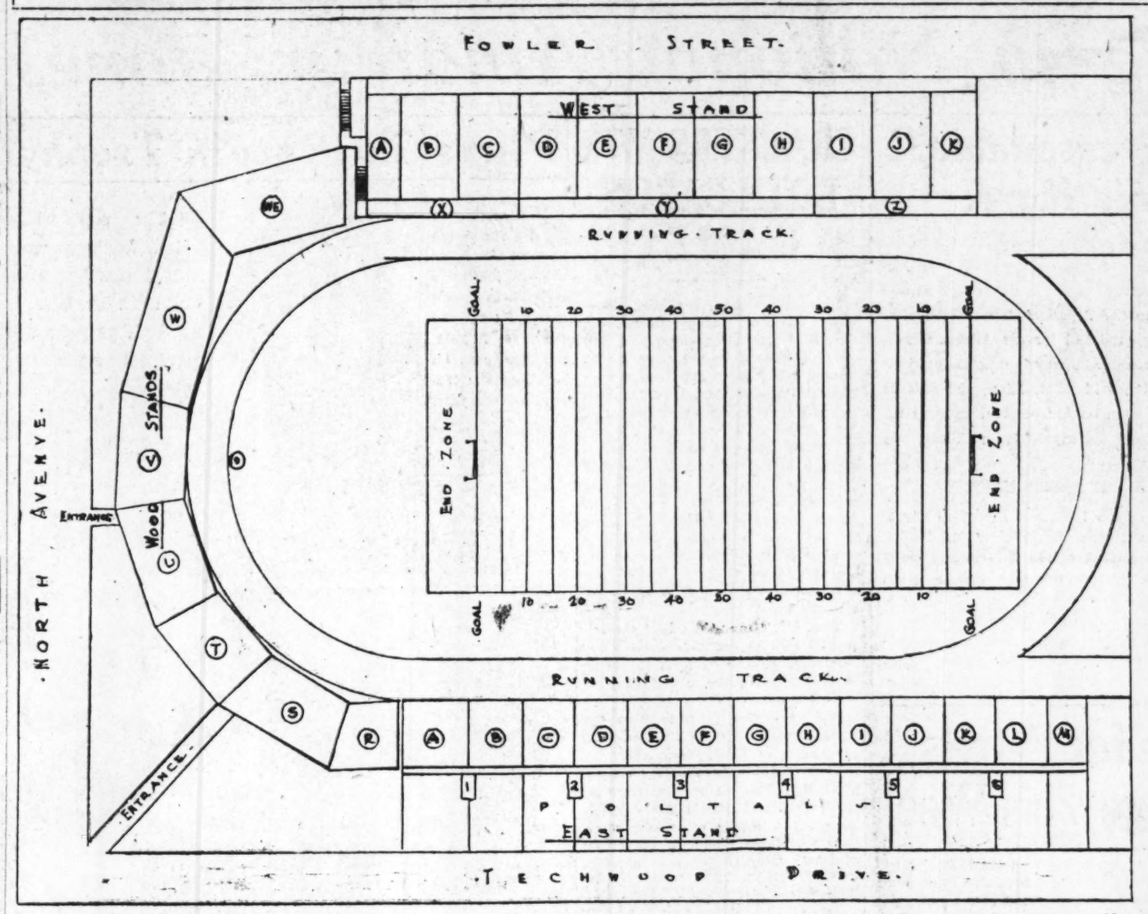

Wednesday will bring on the free-for-all pace with a 2:15 pace and a 2:11 trot.

The 2:11 and the 2:24 pacing events and a 2:18 trot are scheduled for Thursday.

The last day, Friday, will bring on the 2:20 trot, the 2:18 pace and the 2:13 trot.

A large number of entries for the horse races have already been received by Secretary R. M. Striplin, of the Southeastern Fair association, and a number of others are expected before the closing day, Friday, September 26. Records made after September 15 will be no bar to entries.

Grant Field, as Sections Are Arranged for '24 Season

Above is the plan of Grant field, with the full stands, including the wooden seats at the south end, as they will be offered next week with opening of the football season here. At the top are the old concrete stands, at the left are the wooden stands and at the bottom are the new concrete stands which give Grant Field the biggest seating capacity it has had so far. The new position of the playing field, moved north 10 yards, is shown in relation to the stands here.

Cinci Trims Phillies.

Philadelphia, September 20.—Cincinnati gave Philadelphia its second straight reverse today, winning 9 to 6. Fletcher used five pitchers to stop the visitors' slugging, but without avail. Mays was hit hard and often, but Philadelphia was unable to hit in the pinches and as a result had a dozen men left on base.

Pittsburg Stops Dazzy.

Brooklyn, N. Y., September 20.—Brooklyn dropped to third place and Dazzy Vance's string of successive victories was stopped at 15 when Pittsburg won today's game 5 to 4 in eleven innings. Speed alone won for the Pirates, two runners scoring from first base on singles by the succeeding batters. The winning run came in that way, when, with two out, in the eleventh, Traynor singled. On the hit and run play, Maranville followed with a Texas leaguer in short center, Traynor took advantage of Brown's weak arm and kept right on to the plate, beating the relay home by a great slide. Carey scored similarly in the fourth on a single which deflected from Mitchell's glove into short right.

Cooper's support was erratic, the Pirates making five errors, but three fast double plays, Wright to Maranville to Grimm, cut off the Dodgers at critical times. The final double killing came in the eleventh when the Dodgers had two men on bases with one out. Grimm completed the play by reaching far out for a one-handed catch saving Maranville an error and preventing the tying run.

High got four hits in five times at bat, while Wright led in fielding.

Split Twin Bill.

Boston, September 20.—Boston and St. Louis split even today in a double-header. John Cooney of the Braves, had slightly the better of them in the first game, which Boston won 1 to 0. With Shields, a rookie right-hander, from New Brunswick, pitching well in the last five innings, the second game was won by St. Louis 5 to 2.

Giants Lose Good One.

New York, September 20.—The New York Giants lost a hectic 12-inning game to Chicago today, 7 to 3, but kept their margin of a game and half in the pennant battle when Pittsburg upset Brooklyn for the second straight today and ousted the Robins from second place.

The Cubs clinched the game with a four-run rally in the twelfth. McGraw sent five hurlers to the mound in an attempt to check the Cubs, while Grover Alexander went the full route for the winners. The veteran would have won in nine innings had not Grantham let Young's grounder go through his legs in the ninth with two out, the error enabling O'Connell to score the tying run.

A single by Heathcote, Grantham's sacrifice and singles by Fitzgerald, Friberg, Hartnett and Cotter figured in the Cub's winning rally.

Frank Frisch injured a finger on his right hand while trying to score in the eleventh on Hartnett's wild throw to center field. He was nailed, however, and the Giants lost their best chance to win. Frisch had to retire and Kelly was sent to third, while Young was called from the outfield to cover second.

Loyola Wants Notre Dame

New Orleans, September 20.—Loyola university has offered Notre Dame a $10,000 guarantee and expenses for one week to play a football game in New Orleans in 1925, it was announced today. Loyola desires to meet Notre Dame the Saturday after the Notre Dame-Georgia Tech game in Atlanta.

WELCH IS LOW IN AD CLUB TOURNEY

John W. Welch, of the Georgia Railway and Power company, won the low gross qualifying prize in the golf tournament of the Advertising club, of Atlanta, over the Druid Hills course with a 95. Scores were unusually high because practically all entrants were playing this difficult course for the first time on their qualifying round.

The low net score produced a tie between Fonville McWhorter and Jere C. Beam, each of whom turned in a 99 with a 22 handicap for a net 77.

Match play will begin Monday and will continue for two weeks. The first round will be played the first three days of the week; the second round by Friday night; the third round the first three days of the following week, and the finals by Friday night of the second week.

Twenty-one players are entered and two flights have been filled. The defeated eight of the championship 16 will have a consolation flight made up for them, with play to begin on Thursday.

Pairings and handicaps are as follows:

Championship flight: John J. Welch (12) vs S. T. Mattingly (18); J. C. Beam (22) vs. Joseph Green (30); Cliff Wheatley (22) vs. W. A. Walker (18); William J. J. Chase (28) vs. Joseph Ness (18); Fonville McWhorter (22) vs. J. M. Beasley (20); L. C. Pettey (25) vs. Roy Booker (25); Phil Trimble (20) vs. Armond Carroll (16); A. T. Swanson (22) vs. Harry Johnson (18).

Second flight: Joseph Schlesinger (30) vs. George Rinley, Jr., (30); Allan Gottschaldt (30) vs. bye; S. S. Selig, Jr., (30) vs. bye; Kenneth Keyes (30) vs. bye.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

CHICAGO DIVIDES TWO.

Chicago, September 20.—Chicago and Philadelphia divided a double-header today, the Athletics winning the first game, 7 to 4, and the White Sox the second, 5 to 2. The visitors won the first by bunching their hits off Thurston and Chicago hit opportunely behind Harris' walks in the second game. The batting of Davis and Lamar and the fielding of the former were features.

Tigers Win in Ninth.

Detroit, September 20.—Detroit won another ball game from New York in the ninth today, 6 to 5. All the action took place in the final innings, New York tied the two-run lead of Detroit in the eighth. The Tigers made three runs in their half and New York came back with three runs in the first half of the ninth. Manush made his first of the game in the Tigers' half and scored the winning run a minute later.

Ty Cobb, veteran manager of the Tigers, made his 2004th hit of the season in the first inning, the hit scoring the first run. Babe Ruth went hitless throughout the game, striking out once. Meusel contributed a home run.

CRACKER POST SEASON GAME MONDAY

With the end of the Southern league season today, the Atlanta club will return to Spiller Field for two games this week—Monday against the city champions, the Georgia Railway & Power company nine, and Tuesday against the widely-heralded Tate, Ga., team.

Wednesday and Thursday they will appear against a combination of stars of the Marietta and Tate clubs on the Marietta diamond.

A game may be arranged for Friday, too, which will mark the final game of the Crackers' 1924 season. They will then depart for their respective homes.

Monday's game here will be in the nature of a benefit affair, with all the receipts going to the Crackers. Regular prices will prevail, and it will be a great opportunity for the fans to show their appreciation of the entire team's gallant fight for the Southern league pennant.

And, according to their opponents, the Crackers are in for a battle to win this contest. Either Ray Francis or Hollis McLaughlin will pitch, and the regular line-up of the club, with the exception of Wilbur Good, will be functioning. But the power company has a corking good club, as evinced by their victory in the amateur tournament, and they see hopes of a victory over the leaguers, which would be a fitting climax to their 1924 campaign.

Tuesday, Cy Hawkins and Goat Cochran will tow their powerful Tate club, semi-pro champs of the state, to Spiller Field for a skirmish with the professionals.

Cochran, a former Cincinnati pitcher, or D. C. Gober will draw the hurling assignment in all probability, and, no matter which of them labors from the hillock, the Crackers will be extended to the limit to win.

Or at least that is the dope.

Tate this year played 60 games and did not lose a series. Their strongest rivals were Marietta and Waycross, and in the series with both clubs Tate was triumphant.

Cochran himself won 16 and lost only three games, and one of those defeats was by a 1-to-0 score.

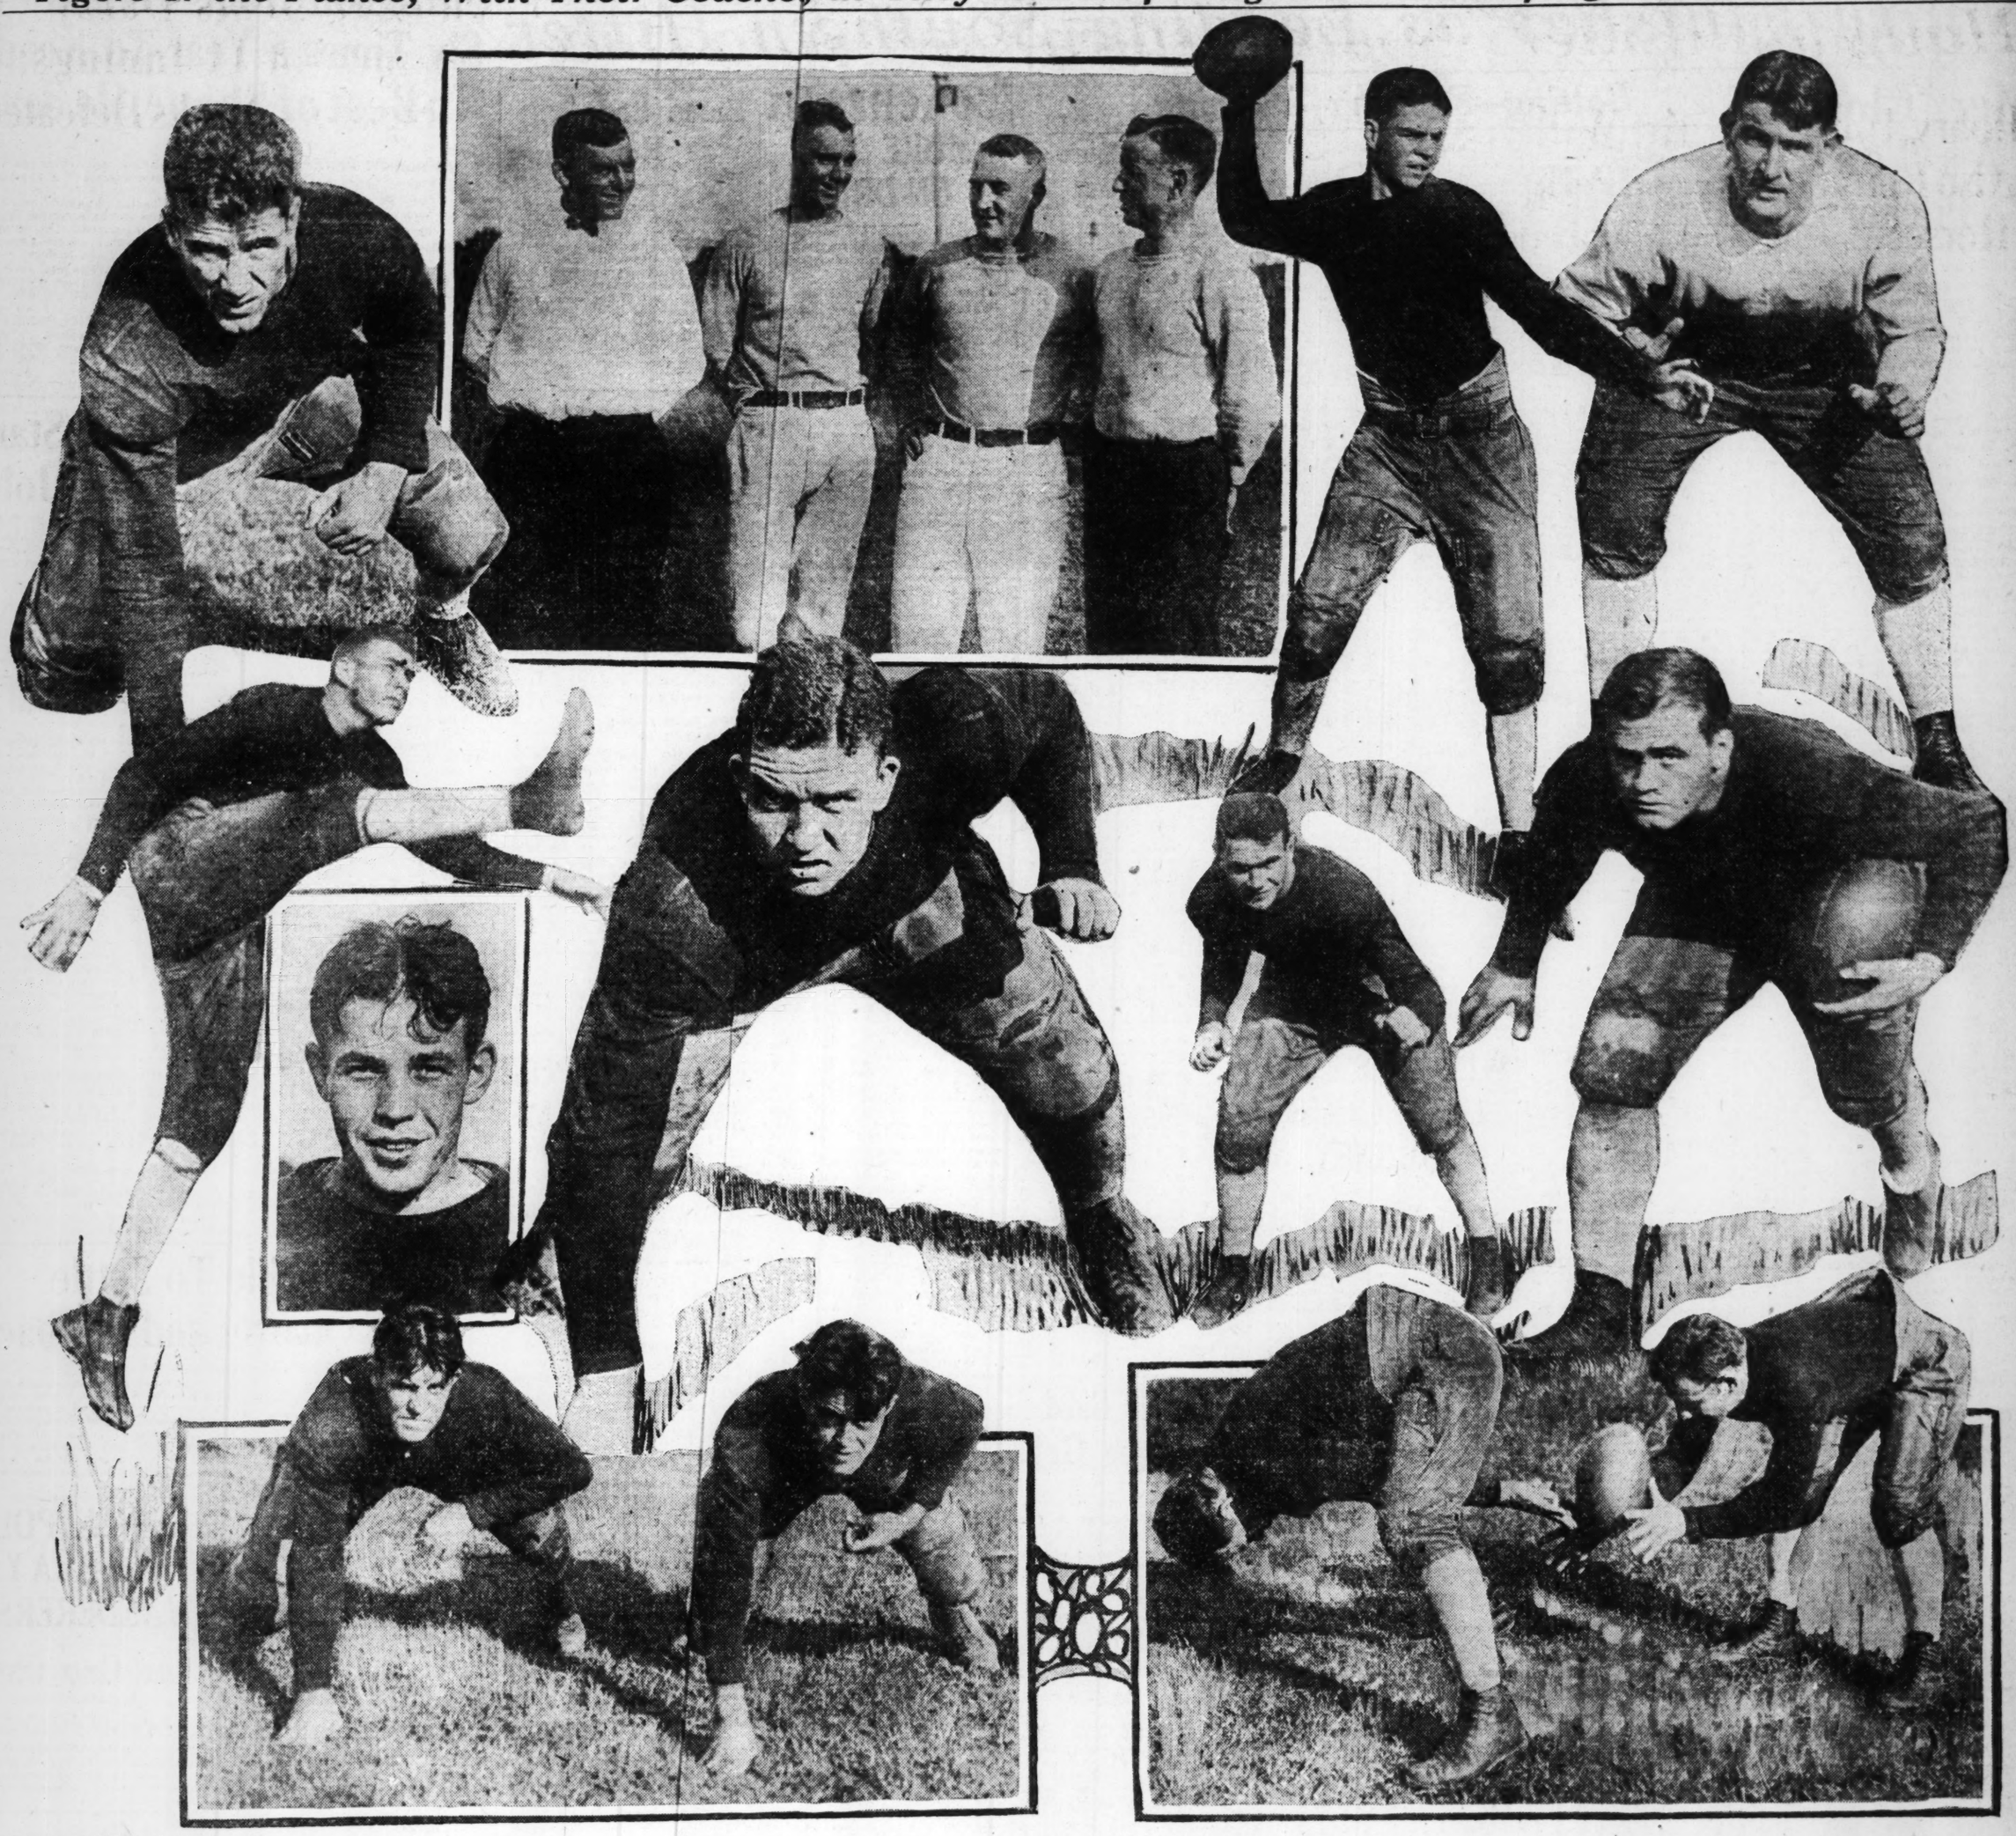

If he is right—which he generally is—the Atlantans will have to fight to the limit of their ability to win out.

Wednesday the scenery will shift to Marietta, where many hard-fought games have been played this year. It is the first opportunity of the fans there to see the Southern leaguers in action in their own town, and plans are being made for a great crowd.

The team that faces Atlanta there will be picked from the best men of the Tate and Marietta nines, including such stellar performers as Cochran, Red Stoner, Jeter Green, Cy Haykins, Jim Parks, Jay Partridge, Frank Simpson, Leonard Mumford, Lewis Hawkins, Buck Wheeler

AUBURN COACHES SHAPE FORMIDABLE GRID MACHINE

Tigers of the Planes, With Their Coache, as They Are Preparing for Fall Campaign With Tech at End

Photographs by Mathewson & Price.

Here are the hopes of Auburn for 1924 in pictures. At the top are, left to right: Bull McFadden, end; Coaches Pitts, Bunker, Cole and Hutsell; JoJo Harrison, famous passer of the Auburn Tigers, and Grisham, huge tackle, who has returned for the 1924 campaign. In the center row are, left to right: Pea Green, great kicker, who resembles the fast John Shirey in build; Captain Fats Lawrence, Minnie Brice, who will do guard duty next to Fats; Swede Sitz, out for the tackle job with Grisham, and Salter, who is virtually assured of his place at fullback. In the bottom row are, left to right: Hardboy Pruitt, speedy and fighting end of the Tiger squad, and Buck Spinks, also out for end, and Fats Lawrence snapping the ball to Dean Peterson, who is settled on as the one to call the Plainsmen's signals this fall.

Tigers Center Attention On Building Team To Beat Tech in Turkey Day Game

BY GEORGE CONGDON.

Auburn, Ala., September 20.—The Auburn Tiger is training as it never has trained before to trample Georgia Tech's Golden Tornado in the dust of defeat Thanksgiving. That's the first impression one receives when football is mentioned here this fall.

Going beyond the determination of the Plainsmen and their coaches to rout Tech, it is apparent that Auburn is going to be one of the greatest threats in the conference this year, not excluding Vanderbilt or Florida, which are rated as probably the two strongest elevens on southern gridirons this fall.

Auburn has a hard schedule with Clemson, V. P. I., Howard, Vanderbilt, Tulane, Georgia and Tech, but the whole energies of coaches and men are being concentrated on putting a squad in the field that will whip Tech. It's the uppermost thing in their minds, this Tech fray.

The first Auburn man I saw when I arrived was Fats Lawrence, the stocky center and captain of the Tigers this year. And his first remark about football for 1924 was:

"We're coming up to Atlanta Thanksgiving and beat Tech."

Not a word about the other games on the Auburn schedule—Tech is all the Auburnites are seeing right now.

The Tigers are slow in getting their real practice started. They have only had three scrimmages to date, but Coach "Boozer" Pitts is making scrimmages longer and harder than most coaches in the south are making them this year with teams getting away to practice early.

Coach Pitts can afford to make his scrimmages long and hard because he had one of the most perfectly conditioned squads on the football field this fall. Before the first scrimmage, which took place only a week ago, every man was in charge of Coach Wilbur Hutsell, athletic director and track coach, who put them through a stiff two weeks of conditioning.

"That's our idea down here of how to turn out a squad that will stand up in best form the entire season," Coach Hutsell said in going over his plan of perfect conditioning before real football practice with scrimmage. "There are a lot of coaches, Bezdek, at Penn State, for instance, who believe in hard football practice from the first day. Bezdek, I think, puts his men into a hard scrimmage the first day they are out.

"The plans of Bezdek and others who follow his method of practice and training may be all right, but when a squad goes through work to put it in the best of condition and then goes into practice we feel that it can be rounded into a footbal team with more defensive and offensive ability in a week or two than a squad that has had intermittent conditioning and constant signal running tackling and scrimmage."

Theory Borne Out.

The snap that the Tigers are showing on offense in scrimmage and the solid front they present to the second and third teams on defense so far is bearing out the theory of Coaches Hutsell and Pitts.

"Boozer" is devoting nearly all of his time to his backfield, while he has virtually turned his line over to Coach Herbert Bunker, a whale of a fellow—and tight-lipped as an Egyptian mummy—who came to Auburn this year from Missouri. Coach R. H. Cole, head baseball coach, is directing tackling practice.

The unusual amount of material on the field September 1 is probably the biggest factor promising Auburn a more successful season in 1924 than for three years. Auburn, because of this wealth of good material, will have a reserve nearly as strong as its varsity line-up.

The squad that probably will start for Auburn in the opening game a week from today against Birmingham Southern is:

Fats Lawrence, captain, center.
Minnie Brice and Bull McFadden, guards.
Red Harkins and Grisham, tackles.
Hardboy Pruitt and Batch Olinger or Buck Spinks, ends.
Dean Peterson, quarterback.
Pea Green and Buckshot Williams or JoJo Harrison, halfbacks.
Salter or Paul Turner, fullback.

This is the echo ation, with the shifting around of Olinger and Spinks at end, Williams and Harrison at half and Salter and Turner at fullback, that is getting the highest marks of Coach Pitts' report cards daily at Drake field. Harrison is a little the favorite over Buckshot Williams at halfback because of his great passing. When it comes to tearing through the line, Williams is better. Salter has a little the edge on Turner for fullback and Olinger and Spinks are racing it down the stretch for one of the flank places.

Line Averages 185 Pounds.

With Lawrence, who weighs around 185 pounds at center, as probably the greatest defensive player on the team, Auburn's line is the strongest in years. It will average 185 pounds, and these big boys get around with speed.

Mike Donahue "found" Fats Lawrence. Two years ago she was playing fullback in class games. Donahoe yanked him from the class line-up and put him in the line at center. That's where he has been performing since. His home is in Plantersville, Ala.

When Lawrence leaves school at the end of the present year, he will not, however, leave a place unfilled. Earl Lutz, Sidney Lanier High school star at Montgomery, Ala., last year; Abe Robinson, from Carrollton, Ga.; Fats McNeil, reserve last year, and Dunaing, another Carrollton boy, are looking good this year and one or two by next year should be able to fill Lawrence's shoes.

Brice and McFadden have virtually been selected for guards by Boozer Pitts out of half a dozen candidates for the places and candidates who provided some keen competition. Brice weighs 190 pounds and come from Charlotte, N. C. He was shifted this year to guard from tackle, which he played on last year's outfit. McFadden is a Montgomery man, who is just exactly what his nickname implies, a bull with a frame that ought to be a solid wall against offensive teams.

Self to Go in Games.

Jelly Self, a rugged 180-pounder from Birmingham, who is playing his second year at Auburn, probably will go into several of the games in place of McFadden, and Country Johnson, a stocky boy from Bessemer, Ala., is waiting for his chance to get into the lineup.

One of the biggest boosts to Auburn football hopes this year was the return of Grisham, a 195-pound tackle, who was one of the mainstays of the Tiger line in 1920, '21 and '22. Last year he left school to teach and coach the teams of Jackson County High school, and it is at a sacrifice that he comes back to Auburn this year.

Red Harkins, of Bessemer, playing his third year on the varsity, is one of the lightest linesmen. He weighs about 175 pounds, and carries the speed of double-greased lightning. Harkins was out last year part of the time with injuries, but his work in scrimmage this year indicates that there is nothing wrong with him now.

Grisham and Harkins are beating out two mighty good men for the tackle positions. One is Huck Huckabe, another Carrollton, Ga., man, who has shown well in all practices. The other is Swede Sitz, who is equally good at tackle or guard.

Pruitt Sure of Place.

Nobody is going to stop Hardboy Pruitt at end. This is his fourth and last year. He weighs about 175 pounds and comes from Pine Bluff, Ala. He made his name in last year's game with Georgia Tech. Buck Spinks, who may get the other end place and who is also from Pine Hill, is one of the best tacklers on the squad, but he is in a close race with Batch Olinger, brother of Rodney Olinger, four years a great end on the Auburn eleven.

Several other men look good for the end places, but they fail to come up to Pruitt, Olinger or Spinks. They are Pat Moulton, brother of the famous Slick Moulton; Joe Market, of LaGrange, Ga., and Baskin, of Carrollton, Ga., who played on the rat squad last year and suffered a broken leg.

Such are the prospects for the line.

Auburn's backfield presents every appearance of being a fast, ground-gaining machine. It hasn't the weight the line carries, but it has speed, passing ability and a man with a threatening kicking leg.

Dean Petersen is sure of his berth at quarter. This is his third and last year in Auburn football. He entered school from Chattanooga and weighs about 170 pounds. Feeney Crane, of Birmingham, is much the type of Petersen and may get in some of the games this fall. The oddest pair in the lot of quarter candidates, though, is Honeycutt, a slight 142-pound boy, and Hassler, quarter on the freshman team last year, who weighs only 135 pounds. Both ought to be seen in action this year.

Four Good Halves.

The halfback positions have the most prominent candidates for them in Pea Green, Buckshot Williams, JoJo Harrison and Ed Allen. Green, because of his great kicking, is sure of one of the places, while Harrison looks like the other man, with his ability to spiral the oval down the field for pass gains. Green's build reminds one of the great John Shirey. But there is Buckshot Williams, two years a varsity backfield man, who is sure to play in some of the games. Williams's specialty is cutting through the line. Allen, a Selma (Ala.) boy, who has earned his letters in basketball, is another contender for half.

There are really just two big guns out for the fullback position. Salter, 180-pounder, is the outstanding candidate for the place now, with Paul Turner, who scales about 190 pounds, running him a close second. Salter is being used at halfback in some of the practices, but the fullback position is where he shines.

Three other men are seeking work at full. They are Hagood, Brewton, star of last year's rat eleven, and L. Spinks, brother to Buck.

Great Reserve Strength.

With this bunch of assorted linesmen and backs, Auburn coaches probably will do more shifting during this season than they have in several previous campaigns. They have about the greatest reserve strength Auburn has ever boasted.

There are several letter men who probably will not be started in a single game, but who will be used during the latter parts of games. One of these is John Lewis Reese, fullback, who wears the "A" because of his years of service on the second-string outfit.

Auburn suffered when Mike Donahue moved over to L. S. U., but Coaches Hutsell, Pitts and Bunker are showing that they are equal to the task of turning out an eleven that looks good in practice at least. The beginning of the season ought to bear out the appearance of the eleven in scrimmage.

Coach Pitts played at Auburn from 1910 to 1913, made all-southern center and coached at Tech Hi in Atlanta before coming to Auburn to become assistant to Donahue.

Hutsell, who has conditioned the squad for the season's affairs of the gridiron came to Auburn in 1921 after starring on the cinder path at Missouri. He is head coach in track and basketball and director of athletics at Auburn now.

Coach Bunker, who is handling the line, is a four-letter man of Missouri and last year returned to Missouri to coach freshman teams. He succeeds Gob Wilson, who went to L. S. U. with Donahue.

Coach Cole, who is working with the backfield men with Coach Pitts, is on his second year at Auburn, having come here from Albion college.

So far nothing has been done with the freshman eleven for this year, but Coach Kirk Newell, great Auburn halfback, expects to have his men out the first of this week, to prepare for the six-game schedule the rats have arranged.

SIX COLLEGES OPEN GRID SEASON

With weather a bit warmer than that preferred for the sport, southern football opened today with teams from colleges in six states in competition.

Howard college won from Marion Military institute, both Alabama teams, 27 to 0.

Sewanee university, of Tennessee, took the Transylvania Kentuckians into camp by a similar score.

Virginia Military institute made the highest score of the day by winning from Wofford college, of South Carolina, 33 to 0.

Two North Carolina teams, Davidson and Elon, met today with the final result 14 to 0 in favor of Davidson.

A feature of this first day of football this season is that none of the losing teams scored a point.

DEMPSEY FEARS STALENESS FROM LACK OF FIGHTS

Smith Finishes as Leading Southern Hitter

Merz Closes As Best Pitcher

Atlanta lost its fight for the Southern league pennant when Memphis won the game necessary to clinch the flag during the past week, but the Crackers probably will wind up the season as the batting leader of the Dixie circuit. The heavy-hitting team assembled by Bert Niehoff has been keeping close to the .300 mark as a team in batting and making a notable record for runs scored. It has set the pace in the Southern for several weeks, but could not overcome the lead Memphis gained in early season play.

The comparatively weak hitting Mobile team has passed Birmingham in number of bases stolen, according to the latest averages compiled, which include games played September 18.

J. (Red) Smith, cf Atlanta, continued the batting leader of the league, with his teammate, Burrus, next him and Carlyle, of Memphis, in this place. Niehaus, of Chattanooga, has been a late bidder for the hitting honors, but will not be able to make it. Paschal, of Atlanta, had increased his runs scored total to 135, and Stewart, of Birmingham, had an even 60 bases stolen, according to the late averages.

Not including Frank Henry, of New Orleans, who had not yet pitched a hundred innings in the league, the leading pitcher of the Southern, by the latest count, was Merz, of Memphis, with his 19 wins and six defeats. Next him him in percentage among the all-season performers was his teammate McGrew. The next three in the list were Atlanta moundsmen, Dumont, Karr and McLaughlin.

National League.

Unless Rogers Hornsby takes a brace he is not going to set a new mark for modern major league batting. Averages for the National league that include games played September 18, show the slugger of the St. Louis Cardinals to have dropped to .420, which is the mark held jointlyly by Sisler and Cobb, of the American league, and Hornsby is slumping so fast since he returned to the game after his recent injury that it does not appear likely he will be much above the .400 mark when the season ends a week hence. There was a general slump among the National's heavy hitters during the week, indicating that the pitchers are bearing down for all they are worth in the closing days of the sensational pennant race. Ross Younge, of the Giants, proved one notable exception to the rule. A week ago he was hitting .347, while the latest set of averages give him a mark of .358.

The Giants maintained their team batting average of .302 for the week, with the Cardinals still running second to them, 11 points behind. Brooklyn, battling New York to a standstill for the pennant, runs third in hitting, just behind the Cards. In team fielding the four leading teams are still neck-and-neck, there being a four-club tie at .972 per cent, according to the latest figures.

When Dazzy Vance finished up a game for Brooklyn on September 18 it marked his 27th victory and his 15th straight and he had increased his strike-out record to 234. His teammate, Doak, advanced to a position among the five leading pitchers, Vde, of the Pirates, still is the leader in percentage of wins, with Vance next and Bentley, Nehf and Doak following in order. An odd pitching record is that of Maun, of the Giants, who is credited with being in 20 games, yet has a decision awarded him in but one. In the 20 games in which he appeared he had pitched all told but 25 innings.

Cincinnati is making a bid for greatest effectiveness of a pitching staff as shown by low number of runs allowed opponents. Pittsburg has held that honor, but the late averages show Cincinnati now having given but one more run than the Pirates to opposing teams so far this season.

American League.

Babe Ruth returned to undisputed possession of the batting honors in the American league the past week, displacing Stephenson, of Cleveland, who had temporarily wrested the top position from the Bambino. But it was because Stephenson had a slump and not that Ruth improved in his hitting. Averages compiled to include games of September 18 show Ruth hitting .383, a drop of two points, while Stephenson dropped 12. Fall and Collins, of the White Sox, did some notable hitting during the week. Falk passed Jamieson and Collins is right behind the Cleveland outfielder.

The Yankees as a team did not hit well during the week, but won their games by tight pitching, so that there is no great comfort to Washington in the fact that it passed the Yanks in team batting. Cleveland still leads, but dropped a point and fell from the .300 class as a hitting team.

Babe Ruth added one to his home-run collection during the week, while Eddie Collins increased his base thefts by one. A new name in the batting averages is that of McNeely, of Washington, this youngster having now been in more than 30 games, in which he has netted a batting average of .306.

Among American league pitchers, Walter Johnson, the league's "honor man," took the lead during the week in number of games won as well as percentage of victories, when he increased his total victories to 22, or one more than credited to Herb Pennock, of the Yankees. Thurston, of the White Sox, and Schaute, of Cleveland, each had won 20 games, according to the records which include games of September 18. Schaute, due to a recent injury, probably is out of the running for most games won this season. Johnson, on his part, hardly will be able to reach the mark of games won by his rival star in the National league, Dazzy Vance, of Brooklyn.

Texan Wins Golf Tourney

Hot Springs, Ark., September 20.—M. H. Badger, of Dallas, Texas, won the south-central amateur golf championship today by defeating Tom K. Martin, of Hot Springs, Ark., state champion, 4 and 2, in the 36-hole final round of the tournament played over the course of the Hot Springs Country club.

Pels Find Shaney Easy.

New Orleans, September 20.—New Orleans found Shaney easy today, knocking his offerings all over the lot, and downed Mobile 10 to 2. Dent was pounded almost as heavily by the Bears, but managed to keep the hits well scattered.

Hagen Adds National Professional to Title List

French Lick, Ind., September 20. Walter Hagen, once a golf caddy, now holder of the British open championship, won another major title for his large collection when he beat Jim Barnes, of New York Saturday in the final match of the national professional tournament. Hagen, known as the fashion-plate of the golf meadows, finished two up on Barnes in the deciding 36-hole round.

Hagen's last stroke finished a week's tournament in which Gene Sarazen, another graduate caddy-boy, had lost his last remaining championship and reverted to his old status as a mere buck private in the corps of professional golfers. Sarazen first won the professional title in 1922, the same year that he won the national open championship and made himself famous wherever golf is played. He lost the open title the next season to Bobby Jones, the Atlanta amateur, but managed to take the professional championship again that season.

Gene failed in his attempt to win back the open championship at Detroit last June, playing far behind Cyril Walker, the little English professional, who took the prize. However, Gene still held the professional top rank, and he ardently wished to keep it as he married within the last year and needed all the golf distinctions he could grasp so that he would be in demand for the big exhibitions during the southern winter season.

Hagen now possesses two of the greatest titles in golf—the British open and American professional championships, almost passed up golf when he was a boy. Walter was fairly well determined to be a professional athlete, but he played a better game of baseball than golf in those days and his immediate ambition was to be a bush league pitcher. However, some of his elders around the golf club at which he was carrying bags for 50 cents a round, saw the first glimmerings of star golf form in his awkward handling of the sticks, and persuaded him to remain in the game.

Long Trips on Gridiron Schedule of Tech High

BY GORDON KEITH.

The revised football schedule for Tech High school's grid machine, the team that has already won sportdom's applause by defeating the Oglethorpe scrub eleven, calls for 10 games, two of them with Atlanta schools, and three road trips, two of which are long journeys. The schedule:

September 27—Commerce High, in Athens.

October 4—Darlington in Atlanta.

October 11—Powder Springs in Atlanta.

October 18—Steele High, Dayton, Ohio.

October 25—Ensley High in Atlanta.

November 1—Richmond academy in Atlanta.

November 8—G. M. A. in Atlanta.

November 15—Riverside in Atlanta.

Thanksgiving—Little Rock High, Little Rock, Ark.

December 2—Boys' High in Atlanta.

The junior Tornado has one more week of preparation before taking the road for Athens where they will pry off the '24 lid with a game with Commerce High. The next two weeks the Smithies will take on two more lighter teams in Darlington and Powder Springs, both games to be played in Atlanta in preparation for their invasion of the north on the eighteenth.

Year before last Steele High was the proud champion of the United States, and Tech High is tackling one of the worthiest opponents to be found in the prep field.

Expect to Repeat.

The week after the team returns from the north, Ensley High, of Birmingham, will be played in Atlanta. The Smithies defeated Ensley handily enough in Birmingham last year, and expect to do it again.

On November 1 Tech High brings to Atlanta the Richmond Academy cadets from Augusta, and a dandy fight should result from this meeting. The two elevens fought to a scoreless tie in their last meeting two years ago.

The following week the G. M. A. cadets will furnish the opposition. Tech High defeated the College Park eleven by one point last year on Spiller's field.

On November 15 the Smithies will do battle with the Riverside cadets. The game will be played in Atlanta.

The next week, Thanksgiving, the Tech High squad again takes the long trail and rides out to Little Rock, Ark. to engage the Little Rock High school team in what should prove a fitting holiday battle for the Arkansas football fans.

The Tuesday after Thanksgiving, December 2, the prep season will come to that most dramatic of closes when Tech High plays its best of rivals and enemies, Boys' High.

Coaches on Job.

From the excellent showing made Wednesday, the Smithie coaching staff has not been wasting time. Coaches Tolbert, Alexander and Kopf have whipped into shape and almost perfected a formidable piece of machinery in the Tech High varsity, which lines up with Rush at center, Payne and Watkins at guards, Lautzenheiser and McConnell at tackles, Captain Holland and Davis on the flanks, and Thomason, Rosenblatt, Randolph and Mayhew in the backfield.

Several of last year's veterans failed to reenter school this fall. They had been counted on by the team, but the eleven would be hard to be improved upon, even with their addition to the squad. Besides the men who graduated and have passed on to college from the '23 team, McDavid and Porter, big linesmen and splendid guards, and Van Houten, quarterback and field general of proved ability, failed to don the purple and gold this fall.

Rush, the second string center of last year, is holding down the pivot position on this year's varsity in great style. Rush was good last year, except for an occasional rashness in his passing, and he is a demon on defense.

At the guards, Tech High has Payne and Watkins. Payne was one of the first string trio who worked at the guards last year, and Watkins was brought in from a flank position to work on the other side of the line. Watkins made his letter last year, but his chief job was holding down the second string team's left end.

Good Tackles.

Lautzenheiser and McConnell are taking care of the tackle berths in fine fashion, and the Smithies have little to fear from a weakness in this position. Lautzenheiser created something of a sensation from his playing at center last year, and the big boy makes an excellent tackle. McConnell weighs around 190 himself, and is playing his second year at tackle.

On the flanks Captain Holland is back caring for one of the extremities, and Luke Woodall's place is taken by a new man, Davis, from Commerce High. Davis weighs in around 165 and is a fast, hard-tackling end.

Backfield Air Tight.

In the backfield the loss of O'Neil, Breck and Van Houten is felt, but the immortal Stumpy and the plunging Randolph, together with Rosenblatt and Mayhew, second string men of last year who played enough to lose their greenness, fill in the holes. Rosenblatt is doing the punting, along with Thomason, and passing, besides calling the signals for the Smithie offense.

Tech High started scrimmaging Saturday, and although a scrimmage is not in order every afternoon as yet, charging, hitting the dummies, running down punts and stiff signal drills most certainly are. The Smithies have not resumed their familiar jump shift of two years ago, but are sticking to their straight formations and Notre Dame shifts of last year. So strenuous and thorough have been the signal drills that the varsity knows a lot more than the usual line plays and end runs, and the fast Smithie backfield, behind the smooth, hard-charging front wall, is able to pull several flashy shifts and trick plays already.

MISS COLLETT KEEPS OPEN TITLE

Hamilton, Ont., September 20.—Miss Glenna Collett, of Providence, R. I., successfully defended her Canadian woman's open golf championship title here, defeating Miss Ada Mackenzie of Hamilton, former titleholder, 9 and 8. Miss Mackenzie conceded the 28th hole.

Miss Collett's game was superb throughout. Incidental to defending her laurels, she set a new championship course record for women in the morning round, shooting the first 18 holes in 76. Miss Mackenzie played in ill luck almost from the first tee, and repeatedly drove into the rough and became involved in bunkers. This afternoon her game had improved and she held the champion steadily from further extensive gains, but she could not retrieve her morning losses.

Francis Ouimet played steady golf and if long putts had dropped for him he might have broken 70. He was straight from the tee, usually on the green in two and had putts on fourteen greens for birdies. As it was he took five over par for a 75.

Jesse Guilford, of Boston, needed to play the last four holes in even fours to get a 70, but slipped a bit from what otherwise was almost flawless sound and took 74.

An eight by Chick Evans on the 378-yard eleventh hole which has a narrow fairway and a plateau green guarded by water cost him his chances of breaking 75 and he took 78. It was this same hole that prevented Bobby Jones from equalling par. Chick drove into a trap and put two shots into the water, suffering two penalty strokes.

George Von Elm, of Los Angeles, did well to get a 75, having cut his right hand with a safety-razor a few days ago.

Rojas Calls Bout Off

Minneapolis, September 20.—The scheduled 10-round bout here next Friday night between Quintin Romero-Rojas, heavyweight champion of Chile, and Fred Fulton, of this city, has been cancelled by the South American because of a broken bone in his right hand, it was announced tonight. A telegram from Joe Woodman, manager of Rojas, stated that the Chilean suffered the injury knocking out Farmer Lodge at Memphis last Tuesday.

Black Medalist At Brookhaven

Charley Black, Jr., shooting a 77 over the Brookhaven course yesterday, was low medalist in the qualifying round of the Capital City club's championship tournament. Half a dozen other stars of the tournament were close on his heels for medal honors.

Clarence Knowles, defending his championship won last year, is also in the championship flight and is paired for the first round of match play with J. H. Taylor, Sr. Black will begin match play against Harvey Hill, Jr., winner of the boys' city golf championship a few weeks ago at Druid Hills.

All matches in the first round must be played by the evening of Wednesday, September 24.

Pairings are as follows:

Wins A. A. U. Steeplechase

New York, September 20.—Marvin Rick, of the New York Athletic club, member of this year's American Olympic team, and former Princeton star, today captured the national A. A. U. steeplechase, feature event of a special track and field meet under auspices of the New York A. C. at Travers island.

MORE SPEAKERS ARE GIVEN DATES

Chicago, September 20.—After a conference here today with John W. Davis, democratic presidential nominee, and Senator Pittman, chairman of the speakers' bureau; Urey Woodson, democratic national committeeman for Kentucky, tonight announced the democratic standard-bearer will swing into Kentucky on a speaking trip some time between the 10th and 15th of October.

Mr. Davis, according to Mr. Woodson, plans his Kentucky trip on his return from a second tour of the west. After speaking in West Virginia, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri and Kansas, Mr. Woodson said the democratic nominee on his return trip would speak at St. Louis and then probably at Evansville, Ind.

He probably will make his first Kentucky address at Henderson and then at Owensboro, making each talk from a special train. A night address is being planned for Louisville, Mr. Woodson said. Definite dates have not been determined.

BAKER, HEFLIN AND MRS. BROWN DATED.

Washington, September 20.—Speaking dates for Newton D. Baker, former secretary of war; former Governor Cox, of Ohio; Senator Heflin, of Alabama, and Mrs. Izetta Jewell Brown, of West Virginia, in the interest of the Davis-Bryan ticket, were announced tonight by the democratic national committee.

Mr. Baker will speak at Cleveland October 9, and elsewhere in Ohio on the two succeeding days, after which he will fill engagements in New York and other eastern states October 13, 14, 15 and 16. Former Governor Cox, the democratic candidate in 1920, will speak at noon, October 1, at Richmond, Ky., that night at Lexington, October 2 at Bardstown and the same night at Louisville. Senator Heflin will begin his tour September 24 at Knoxville, Tenn., going from there into Kentucky.

Mrs. Brown, who seconded the nomination of John W. Davis in Madison Square Garden, will campaign through Maryland, Delaware, New York, Ohio, Illinois, Kentucky and Tennessee, beginning with a radio address at Washington, September 29. She has engagements daily from that date, until October 16, when she is to speak at Chicago.

LA FOLLETTE ROUTE NOT DETERMINED.

Washington, September 20.—Consideration was given today by Senator Robert M. La Follette to his speaking itinerary for remainder of the campaign, but no definite engagements were made beyond the one he has to address the Steuben society in New York tomorrow.

Tentative routings will take the independent presidential candidate into New England, upstate New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, various sections of the middle west and northwest, and probably into Pacific coast states. It was said, however, that the senator had not settled in his own mind which territory he should invade first, and just what cities he should select for the delivery of his most important speeches.

Friends of Mr. La Follette declare today that his address Thursday night in New York showed that he is in physical shape, despite his illness last winter and spring, to do strenuous campaigning.

The senator will leave for New York tomorrow morning, arriving there an hour before the time set for his address in Yankee stadium to the Steuben society, made up of men and women of German ancestry.

WHEELER TOUR IN WEST CHANGED.

Chicago, September 20.—Managers for the La Follette-Wheeler ticket, after conference with Senator Wheeler, their vice presidential candidate, gave out tonight the complete itinerary for his western tour, covering the tentative announcements also to later dates. Traveling by private car, Senator Wheeler's party will leave Billings, October 1, for a night address. After other speeches in the west, he will return east, being at Wichita, October 18; Oklahoma city, October 19-20; Topeka, October 21; Kansas City, October 22-23, at St. Louis, October 24.

Meetings have been scheduled in the various cities for noon or night speeches by the candidate, as may suit his traveling time, while he will reach voters in other places en route by rear-platform talks. Between October 20 and election, Senator Wheeler is likely to be round through the south and southwest, but final determination has not been reached on the subje.

Richards Wins Tennis Match

Chicago, September 20.—Vincent Richards, Olympic champion opened the two-day program of tenn exhibition matches at Skokie Country club today with a straight set victory over Brian I. C. Norton, of St. Luis. The score was 6-4, 6-3, 6-0.

George Lott, Jr., nationl junior title-holder, defeated Frederk Kalms, Australian Davis cup player 7-5, 6-2. Paired with Alex Squair, veeran Chicago star, Lott trimmed Kalms and Wray Brown, of St. Louis Missouri Valley champion, 6-4, 6-3.

Kalms is the third Davis cup player to meet defeat at the hads of the youthful Lott this year.

Richards will face William Tilden, national champion tomorrow in the feature match.

Twin Bill On Today at Fort

Two games of baseball will be played at Fort McPherson this afternoon. The first will be played at 1:30 o'clock and the second one will start at 3:30 o'clock. One of the teams for the first game was undecided late Saturday afternoon. The Atlanta Paper company and the Commodore Feds will meet at 3:30 o'clock in the second game of the double bill.

The Atlanta Paper team has added Norris Thompson to its pitching staff and he will probably work this afternoon against the Feds with Conkle as a battery mate. The Feds' battery will probably be Manager Bishop or Lefty Sabens with Kasdiaz doing the receiving.

No-Hit Game For Larson

"Lefty" Larsen went into the hall of fame in semi-pro baseball around Atlanta yesterday when he pitched a no-hit no-run game for the Perrins Athletics against the Atlanta Paper company's team.

This game was the first of a series of games that the Athletics are playing to raise funds to place a headstone over the grave of a former fellow ball player named "Red" Reeves, who was a great favorite around Atlanta several years ago.

In the game yesterday it showed that the Athletics, who are considered among Atlanta's strongest semi-pro ball clubs, played rings around the Paper company's team in spite of the fact that this club was the pennant-winner in the Perrin league.

The batteries were: W. Wilke and Joe Conkle for the Atlanta Paper company. Larsen and "Tubby" Walton for Perrin's Athletics.

BRYAN IS SPEAKER AT FARM PICNIC

Aurora, Neb., September 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—Without naming any particular candidates, Governor Charles W. Bryan, democratic vice presidential candidate, ran the gamut of outstanding questions of the campaign in an extemporaneous address today to a large farmer audience.

He addressed a nonpartisan gathering of the Hamilton County Farmers' union, which held its ninth annual picnic on the county fair grounds and spoke to a man "who never had time for theories," but as one who was interested in applying business principles to government."

"I am a practical man," Governor Bryan told his audience.

Governor Bryan dwelt primarily on agriculture, but took occasion to pay a glorious tribute to the women of the country to laud the work of the farmers' union in wiping out the power of men to attack the building up of city machines, both state and national, for patronage purposes and to appeal upon the people to demand of each candidate that appeared before them to outline specifically his views on "progressive" issues.

He Defines "a Farmer."

Agriculture, the nominee declared, "is not assessed for the benefit of the privilege-seeking class, who have been paid in legislation for campaign contributions." Governor Bryan stressed that part of the democratic platform which advocates co-operative marketing and an export trading corporation that would eliminate artificial price fixing and permit the price abroad for the farm surplus products to determine his price at home.

A vice presidential nominee defined a farmer as "one who makes his money on the farm and spends it in the city," and an agriculturist in which class he placed himself for the last four years, "as one who makes his money in the city and spends it on the farm."

Discusses State Issues.

Governor Bryan was generously applauded during a summarization of things to the state in taxation and in the and gasoline bills.

Declaring he was as much interested now and next year in state matters as though he were going to be Nebraska's next chief executive, Governor Bryan made a few suggestions for legislation in the next assembly. They included the repeal of the title law, which he said had set up a duplicate form of government," and the repeal of that "un-American law known as the intangible tax law."

Avera to Meet Joe Matronga

Larry Avera, junior welterweight, sailing under the colors of the Billy Lotz management, will meet Joe Matronga, of New Orleans, in Jacksonville, Fla., September 23, next Tuesday evening, Lotz announced last night, following receipt of advices from Promoter Ketchel of Jacksonville that he had obtained Matronga.

Ketchel had trouble in signing a junior welterweight to meet Avera, according to Lotz. At first it was planned to get Jimmy Finley for the match, but he declined the offer. Next, Red Herring was sought and he couldn't make it for some reason or other.

Finally an attempt was made to get Pal Moran, New Orleans lightweight, but Ketchel couldn't sign him. Matronga was his last chance to get a good boy for Avera, and he signed.

Mayor Outlines Program Of Public Improvements

Mayor Walter A. Sims, candidate for reelection subject to the primary Wednesday, issued a statement Saturday outlinging the program of public improvements he plans to carry out if reelected and denying charges he said have been made against him by his opponent, former Mayor Key. The statement follows:

"I have endeavored to conduct my campaign on a high plane and without injecting any personalities and would not do so but for the fact that those who are supporting my opponent have seen fit to stoop to such small and personal political attacks.

"I notice where they charge that there is a Taylor-Sims political ring and that I am in this ring. In reply to this let me say that Walter Taylor is supporting me for the same reason that a lot of other people are supporting me, because he thinks that it is fair that I should have a second term. He is also supporting me for the same reason that he supported Mr. Key four years ago for a second term, but yet there was no charge at that time of a Taylor-Key combination.

"Mr. Key knows as well as he knows anything that there is no combination as has been alleged in his attacks. There is just as much truth in this statement as in the statement he left in writing and is now on file when he retired from office, that there was no deficit in the city treasury, and now he admits there was. There is just as much truth in his statement about this combination as there was in his statement when he ran for reelection that he would support an increase in the salary of the firemen of Atlanta, and after he was elected refused to do so.

Dry and Wet Charge.

"I also notice in this information which my opponent is distributing, that he claims to be dry and that I am wet. There is just about as much truth in this statement as there was in the statement of my opponent when he stated that he was the greatest mayor Atlanta had ever had. There is just about as much truth in this statement as there was in the statement that I was to blame for the explosion of the gas in the manhole in front of the Piedmont hotel the other day. There is just about as much truth in this statement as his statement that I was to blame for the babies dying in Atlanta when I have a letter from the physician in charge of the health department denying this statement, and stating there are just as many inspectors today in the health department and just as many automobiles as when Mr. Key was mayor, but I am informed there are less dairies to be inspected.

"My opponent also charges me with being controlled by the Georgia Railway & Power Co. I defy him to point his finger to one act of mine that has not been fair to the people when the power company's interest was involved. I admit that I have obtained for the people from the power company more cooperation and more expenditure of money in the 20 months of my administration than my opponent obtained in the entire four years of his administration. There has been less friction and less turmoil, for when I went in office several injunction suits were pending, which were holding up the pavement of different streets, and these suits were dismissed and streets paved.

Doesn't Favor Pay Cut.

"I am also informed that my opponent claims, and is having spread through his submarine methods of campaigning, the propaganda that I am in favor of cutting the school teachers' salaries or pay them only for 10 months. This is not true. I have never advocated it—do not now, and don't expect to hereafter.

"My opponent has not answered this question yet: How would he have financed the schools over the two crises of the past two years without increasing the water rate and without obtaining the loan which he has been attacking?

"When Mr. Key announced for mayor, he stated in the paper that he could not criticise the increase in water rates because of the purpose for which it was being used, namely, the support of the public school system, but on this as on other questions he has flopped, although his campaign manager was one of the authors of the ordinance increasing the water rate and steered it through council and was not only a member of the finance committee, but was also a member of the water committee.

"Under the law an emergency tax could not have been levied because it was prohibited by law and the legislature refused to even submit a bill permitting an emergency tax to be levied, so my opponent, when he advocates that he is for the public school system and attacks in the next breath the source of revenue that is supporting the school system, he is inconsistent.

Says Key Is Inconsistent.

"He is also inconsistent when he asks that he be elected in order to reorganize the police department and enforce the laws of the city, for he was mayor four years and for four successive years four different grand juries called his attention to the fact that the law was not being enforced, and he can not point his finger to one act of his which had for its object the enforcing of the law and the doing away with the gang of bunco artists and sharkers who were in our city and maintained headquarters here. How can he claim the support of the people on this ground when his record is the reverse to what he is advocating? He is inconsistent again.

"Many of the things my opponent has advocated are already being done. For instance, the present administration has already secured the right-of-way for the extension of Madison avenue into Forsyth street at Whitehall, and work on this great improvement will begin within the next few weeks. Additional space has been secured under the present administration for the enlargement of the auditorium in order to accommodate the conventions that will be brought to this city.

"The matter of the improvement of Courtland street is already receiving attention and the extension of Orme street is already on the program for the next two years. Also the widening and regrading of Luckie street is a part of the next two-year program. Peters street is to be widened and a part of the right-of-way has already been secured. The building of viaducts at Central avenue and Pryor street will be starred in the next year.

Economy in Government.

"When it comes to the matter of economy in government, I wish to call the attention of the taxpayers to the fact that the present administration is operating more efficiently than heretofore in all the departments of government and at much less expense than my opponent operated them during his administration of four years. For instance, the park department is being operated at more than $37,000 a year less than under my opponent's administration. The department of garage is being operated cheaper than my opponent operated it by more than $33,000 a year. The department of prisons is being operated cheaper by $10,000 a year. The department of city hall is being operated $2,400 a year cheaper than under the administration of my opponent. We are saving the taxpayers in the operation of the city auditorium more than $5,000 a year, and every other department of your city government is being operated at less expense than under my opponent's administration and you are getting better results.

"My opponent takes me to task because the department of mechanical engineering was abolished and says that the gas is not being tested. There is no truth in this statement, for Mr. Turner, the city electrician, is inspecting the gas daily and I believe that the people are getting a better grade of gas today than they did during the four years of my opponent's administration.

Reasons for Increases.

"The only departments in which an increase in expense has been made are the following: Public safety, which includes the police and fire departments; the health department, which includes the sanitary department, and the schools. These increases were necessary in order to protect the health, life and property of the people of Atlanta and in order to educate the children of our city.

"This campaign is drawing to a close, and I wish to ask the people of Atlanta to be just as fair to me as they were to my opponent when they gave him a second term, although his record of achievement had not been as good as the present administration. From the reports coming to me, I do not believe that the people are ready to make a change when they compare the different records, and that on next Wednesday the people of Atlanta will be as just and as fair to me as they were to him and give me an indorsement and a second term, and from all reports I do not believe that there will be a ward in the city that will not be found supporting the policies which I have advocated."

GAS IN WELL KILLS TWO GEORGIA MEN

Canton, Ga., September 20.—(Special.)—Francis Nations, 31, and Willis Sams, 22, members of two of the best-known families in Cherokee county, were asphyxiated while cleaning out a well at a farm house near Keithville, in this county, yesterday afternoon, it became known here today. Sams' brother, who went to the rescue of his comrades, narrowly escaped death when he was overcome by the gas at the bottom of the well.

Sams went into the well first, and when, after a few minutes, no response could be gotten from calls, Nations went down to see what the trouble was. He, too, was overcome with the gas. Sams' brother rushed off to get help, came back and was lowered into the well. Sams was dead when brought to the surface, and Nations died soon after. Sams' brother was resuscitated after being overcome in the rescue.

Both men were married and had two children.

Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

EMORY CREATES "DEAN OF MEN" TO AID STUDENTS

Emory University, Ga., September 20.—(Special.)—With the purpose of creating more personal relationship between the student body and the faculty of Emory, a new office has been created, to be known as the "dean of men." The man who has been chosen to fill this position is Professor Comer M. Woodward, an Emory alumnus and founder of Sparks college.

His position will be that of personal counsellor for the students and he will act as a medium between the students and the faculty. He will, by reason of the nature of his office, make himself vitally concerned in the many problems of student life on the campus.

A large part of the work, which will come under the charge of this office, has heretofore been handled by the dean of the College of Liberal Arts, and this, together with his numerous other duties, have made that chair one which entailed an extraordinary amount of work and responsibility. The burden of the dean, which office is now held by Professor G. C. White, will be lightened to a considerable extent by the new position.

The connections which Professor Woodward has had with various schools in different parts of the country make him especially suited for the duties, which he is to assume in his new office. After receiving his A. B. degree from Emory in 1900, he went to Wrightsville, where he taught in the schools of that city for two years. He later founded Sparks college, where he remained until 1907, when he went to Stamford, Texas. Here he joined the Northwestern Methodist conference, doing active work in the Texas ministry for several years.

From Stamford he went to Fort Worth, Texas, where he accepted a position on the faculty of the Texas State Woman's college. During the past several years he has been professor of sociology at the Southwestern Methodist university at Dallas, Texas.

TOOMBS PREPARES FOR FAIR OPENING ON OCTOBER 7

Lyons, Ga., September 20.—(Special.)—The fair grounds and buildings are being put in shape for the largest fair Toombs county has ever attempted to hold with assurances of five community exhibits and several individual exhibits. S. J. Henderson, president of the Fair association, reports that a new building is being erected for housing the large poultry exhibit expected.

The opening day of the fair, Tuesday, October 7, will witness a large float parade by the merchants of Lyons and Vidalia.

Friday of the week the county schools are expected to have a holliday and attend "Children's day" at the fair. Arrangements have been completed for one of the largest carnivals making this territory and a large display of fireworks will be shown at night.

TWELVE-YEAR-OLD BOY SAYS HE WAS KIDNAPED

Danville, Va., September 20.—Mack Briggs, aged 12, was being held today by the authorities at Wentworth, N. C., near here, for investigation of his story that he was "kidnaped" by a carnival company from his home in Greenville, S. C., two years ago. The boy was found exhausted on a road and said that he was trying to make his way to Greenville, though he expressed belief that his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Briggs, are now living in Florida. The boy is quoted as saying that he ran away from the organization at Richmond a few days ago. Efforts are being made to get in touch with the parents.

INDICT BENNETTS IN SKELETON CASE

Chattanooga, Tenn., September 20. As a sequel to the discovery of a skeleton in a grave under a basement of a house at 15 Bluff View, this city, several weeks ago, W. H. Bennett and wife, May Bennett, of Rome, Ga., were indicted by the grand jury today on charges of murder in connection with the disappearance of Miss Augusta Hoffman in February, 1916. The Bennetts are at liberty on a joint bond of $7,500 fixed following a preliminary trial.

Miss Hoffman, a modiste, employed at a local establishment, disappeared without trace while living at the home of Bennett, her nephew. Relatives living at distant points, unable to communicate with Miss Hoffman, appealed to the Bennetts for information, and, according to affidavits presented at the preliminary trial, were told that she had married and was living happily in a western city. Letters to the address given by the Bennetts were never delivered and after a period of years all efforts to locate the missing woman were abandoned by her kinsmen.

Miss Hoffman was formely employed at Knoxville, Tenn., and during the winding up of a receivership of a bank in that city, it was discovered that she had considerable money on deposit. Checks were mailed to the Bennett home here, the investigators found, and some of them were returned carrying a signature said to have been forged, while the last issued were never cashed.

Detectives and others who investigated the case following the discovery of the skeleton unearthed several articles in the grave, which were said to conform to those used by Miss Hoffman, and it was stated that a Knoxville occulist had identified lenses of eye-glasses found in the grave as those prepared for the missing modiste.

Following their arrest at Rome by Chattanooga officers, the Bennetts denied any knowledge of the skeleton, but on arrival here secured the office of Judge M. M. Allison, of general counsel of the Southern railroad, to take charge of their defense. Bennett is district freight agent of the Southern at Rome, and was given a leave of absence to prepare his case. Mrs. Bennett was arrested here in 1915 on the charge of counterfeiting, but the case was never brought to trial.

ROME IS SHOCKED BY INDICTMENTS.

Rome, Ga., September 20.—(Special.)—Press dispatches received here today from Chattanooga bearing information that W. H. Bennett and his wife, Mrs. Mae Bennett, have been indicted on charges of murder as the result of an investigation growing out of the "mystery skeleton" found beneath the residence formerly occupied by the Bennetts in Chattanooga, served to intensify the shock and interest that has existed here since the defendants were asked by Tennessee officers to explain the disappearance of Miss Augusta Hoffman, Bennett's aunt.

Many Rome friends of Bennett and his wife have assumed an attitude of "watchful waiting" in the affair. When arrests were made following discovery of the skeleton, scores of Romans volunteered their services in aiding the accused couple in any possible manner. However, Bennett and his wife made bond in Chattanooga without calling upon their Rome friends. Following his release under bond Bennett resumed his work here as district freight agent for a prominent railway company.

Both Bennett and his wife disclaimed any knowledge concerning the skeleton at the time of their arrest. They declared that Miss Hoffman left their home during 1915 and that she announced her intention of going to Knoxville to visit other relatives.

Some months later, the accused couple declared, they received postal cards and letters setting forth that Miss Hoffman had married.

Bennett has been prominent in business circles since he came to Rome with his family. Mrs. Bennett is of retiring disposition. The Bennetts have three sons, each holding a responsible position here.

A large radio broadcasting station will broadcast various courses of instruction from the educational studio at the University of Pittsburg this

SWEET POTATO FAMINE REPORTED IMMINENT

Lyerly, Ga., September 20.—(Special.)—Northeast Georgia is threatened with a sweet potato famine, according to reports received here, which indicate that no sweet potatoes are being offered on the local markets and farmers who are lucky enough to have a potato patch are reluctant to sell them. Green potatoes have been bringing as high as $4.20 per bushel, and only a few have been offered at that figure.

The scarcity of the crop is attributed to two causes the inability of growers to obtain plants in the spring, due to the seed potato supply being frozen by the severe cold weather last winter, and to the prolonged drought, which dwarfed growth. It is predicted that the crop will be the shortest in the history of Chattooga county.

NEWTON COUNTY FAIR TO OPEN ON TUESDAY

Covington, Ga., September 20.—(Special.)—The Newton county fair will open next Tuesday, and will continue through the week closing on Saturday. Grounds have been put in excellent condition and Secretary Henry Odum, says that indications are for the biggest exhibits and the largest number of contestants for the prizes in all departments that Newton county has had in many years.

Miss Mary Norman, home demonstration agent, and G. W. Robinson, county agent, have worked tirelessly to make the fair a success this fall.

In addition to all the local attractions and exhibits etc., Miller Brothers' shows will furnish amusements and free attractions.

There will be a band to furnish music and other features.

There will be good showings from the ladies' department, the agricultural and live stock exhibits.

GEORGIANS ARE NAMED ON KIWANIS COMMITTEE

Waycross, Ga., September 20.—(Special.)—Colonel H. D. Reed, president of the Waycross Kiwanis club, has been appointed to serve on the good-will and grievance committee of the international organization. Mr. Reed received word of his appointment this week from the international office.

Colonel Reed and W. T. Anderson, of Macon, were the only Georgians whose names appeared upon the list of committeemen.

MRS. SHARP OUTLINES ACTIVITIES OF ATLANTA WOMAN'S CLUB

Club President Outlines Activities of This Year

Mrs. Norman Sharp, president of the Atlanta Woman's cluub, outlines the activities for the coming year in the following article:

"As president of the Atlanta Woman's club it is my desire to have continued all splendid activities that are now going forward in our club program, and in addition to introduce many new and interesting activities during the coming year; to broaden and enlarge the present program along cultural, educational and philanthropic lines in accordance with the plan of the general federation.

"With this in view we are introducing through the educational department, language classes in French, Italian and Spanish. These classes are to be conducted by well-known professional educators. A text-book course in psychology will also be given. Through the literary department a course in short-story writing will fill a long-felt need.

For the benefit of young mothers, a carefully-prepared scientific course in motherhood training will be given under the direction of Mrs. Clifford Walker. Plans are also under way for a class in gymnasium work that will be of general interest and benefit to our club members.

Friendly Relations.

"Through the introduction of the committee on friendly relations, adopted in accordance with federation plans, we hope to materially enlarge the club's philanthropic work and usefulness. Through this committee the Atlanta Woman's club has already in service a representative on six of the city's charitable institutions, namely: The Atlanta Child's home, the Home for the Friendless, the Churches' Home for Girls, the Old Ladies' home, the Y. W. C. A. and the Anti-Tuberculosis hospital. As occasions arise the repreesntatives will be appointed on the friendly relations committee to cooperate with and assist in every way possible all charitable institutions needing aid from the Woman's club and through this plan the Atlanta Woman's club will be enabled during the coming year to render service and assistance to each charitable organization in our community. Believing, after careful study of the situation, that women can play a large and useful part in world peace, your president has added to the club's activities a department of international relations. Through the operation of this department definite and practical information will be placed before the cluub members as to how and in what way they can best unitedly act in this great movement.

"Much interest is being manifested by members of the Atlanta Woman's club, Junior division. All during the summer, Girl Scouts, Camp Fire Girls and the Tiny Bluebirds have enjoyed delightful and wholesome outings under the direction of club leaders. Occasional tea-dances for the juniors from fifteen to eighteen years of age are given in the beautiful club-banquet hall under the best chaperonage. During the winter, classes in basketry, jesso work and other interested handicraft classes will be provided for the younger members for the purpose of arousing in them an interest for rainy days and winter evenings. The Atlanta Woman's club may now be likened to a great university. The Atlanta Woman's cluu is also recognized as a delightful social center, where club members may entertain their friends at luncheon or pleasantly discuss their mutual interests at delightful afternoon teas.

Beautiful Music.

"Beautiful music, as usual, will be given at the regular semi-monthly meetings. Through the splendid cooperation of the officers of the club, the heads of departments, divisions and committees, the club has enjoyed a most pleasant and prosperous summer season. All plans for every department are worked out in detail and committees are now ready to function. The club exists to benefit women and to vitally assist in all good movements of general, public and civic interest. So, in order that a large number of women may enjoy the privileges and pleasures that membership affords, the dues of the Atlanta Woman's Club are kept at a most reasonable figure—being $15 per year or only 31 cents per week for individual members.

"The club can now accommodate between 150 and 200 additional members. The only requirement for membership in the Atlanta Woman's club is that the prospective member be well indorsed by three club members. Any woman desiring to become a member need feel no embarrassment in applying for application blanks, as it is the intention of the executive board of the club to extend the benefits of the club to all good women desiring membership. Through the cooperation and generous contributions of some of our representative citizens and official bodies your president has succeeded in securing sufficient material and funds to build a beautiful swimming pool, a replica of the pool that has proved so generally popular with members of the Piedmont Driving club.

"This pool will undoubtedly be a great pleasure to club members and a valuable club asset, and constituting the fourth unit in the club-building plan, it will make complete one of the finest club plants in the entire country.

"To those who have honored your president by having selected her as the club leader, she wishes to say, that to the Atlanta Woman's club she is giving her time, energy and best thought, and that it is proving indeed a labor of love."

Department Chairmen of Atlanta Woman's Club

SECOND MEETING IS SCHEDULED FOR MONDAY, SEPT. 22

The second meeting of the 1924-1925 administration of the Atlanta Woman's club will be held in the auditorium of the club Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Following the opening business of the season, an attractive program will be given. F. A. Wilson-Lawrenson, president of The Georgian Publishing company, will give his interesting illustrated lecture on Thibet and other countries of the Orient.

Mrs. W. O. Chears, director of music for the Woman's club, has provided a most beautiful musical program. Mrs. Norman Sharp, president, who will preside over the meeting, has asked Mrs. Chears to open the indoor music of the year with a group of vocal selections. Mrs. Chears possesses a charming voice and those who have heard her will anticipate with great pleasure hearing her Monday.

Mrs. Chears will be assisted in the program by Miss Pauline Landon, who will render a group of piano solos, and Miss Ruth Dabney Smith will be heard in a group of violin selections.

Mrs. Sharp is especially desirious that every member of the club, if possible, attend the first real open business meeting of the new season, in order that they may be made thoroughly acquainted with the plans of the year and may be able to select the phase of work to which they would most prefer to give their attention and services.

The first meeting, being an al fresco affair, was devoted entirely to entertainment, which proved very spectacular and beautiful as staged on the terrace of the club grounds.

PUBLIC WELFARE CHAIRMEN GIVE INTERESTING VIEWS

"In taking up the work of the public welfare department of the Atlanta Woman's club," said Mrs. E. D. McDonald, chairman, "it is my intention, with the cooperation of three most efficient divisional chairmen, to continue along lines of activity of the past year, to enlarge the work of the child welfare division and to keep in touch with immediate civic needs and improvements and to cooperate with other workers along lines of public health.

"Every member of the club interested in this line of activity is most cordially invited to join our department."

Mrs. Walter Scott Askew, of this department, says of child welfare: "I consider the child welfare work one of the most important branches of the club and should not be neglected, for well we know that the boys and girls of today are our men and women of tomorrow.

"September 30 I hope to have the pleasure of entertaining the entire child welfare committee and urge all clubwomen who have small children and are interested in this work to call me at Hemlock 7655-J and register so that I can get in touch with them.

"October 7 I want to have the largest benefit bridge that has ever been given at the Atlanta Woman's club and any one wishing reservation should please call me as soon as possible. We have a splendid body of women and must pull together for greater efficiency in the child welfare work."

Mrs. Wing Gives Reminiscences Of Atlanta Woman's Club

In consideration of the magnificent work going forward in the Atlanta Woman's club as the season of the thirtieth year advances, one would like to stop and consider what has gone before, and with this idea in mind, the press department of the club sought out one of the active members of some years' experience and with some persuasion, succeeded in obtaining some pleasant reminiscences of the club activities from the viewpoint of Mrs. Newton C. Wing, who has rendered invaluable services to the club, acting in the capacity of chairman of education in the past, leader of the large economics department for five years, member of the building committee, which had to do with the splendid new units of the club plant and now occupies the chairmanship of the civic drive committee, which links the club and city together in all emergencies, where the club is required to assist in any great financial movement.

Mrs. Wing says: "So fast and furious has been the pace—the progress so phenomenal, that we sometimes wonder if sufficient time is taken to inquire, particularly on the part of our new members, concerning the history of the past few years, of the Atlanta Woman's club.

"Although not among the veterans who, staunch in their belief of better things for women, founded in 1896 this splendid organization and later, in their Baker street home, fought the good fight for independence of thought and the furtherance of their high ideals, yet eight years on the executive board of the club have given me the priceless opportunity of witnessing and participating in an era of possibly the greatest growth and achievement known in the club life of this country.

"As the passage of time softens the distinct outlines of club achievement, I find that I identify with Mrs. McGovern's presidency, during the last of which I joined the club, the fight for the suffrage indorsement by the club, which seems inevitable, at this later date; but which served then to bring out strongly conflicting views of good women and true on both sides. The Red Cross war work also formed a most admirable part of this regime, which was carried on into the presidency of Mrs. McEachern, when, in addition to the regular war work, Red Cross and hostess work in the camps, our beautiful Christmas pageant was given in the city and at Camp Gordon, for soldiers who were shortly to set out for France, to carry that beautiful vision with them to death.

"Notwithstanding our war record, which was second to none, we 'carried on' with our civic obligations, Tallulah, child welfare, art, and whatever was necessary to further cement the foundations of our predecessor, and prepare the way for the club life of the present.

Transitional Period.

"The transitional period may be said to have started with Mrs. Irving Thomas, as president, for during the first of her administration, we secured a new club home, with the consequent enlargement of club facilities, mental, as well as physical. Although the committees, so-called, had up to this time approximated the present work of the club, there were no departments and, in most cases, only two or three women formed the working force of any committee. This number could be enlarged, of course, for special occasions, and although none had regular meeting times, a remarkable amount of work was nevertheless accomplished.

Home Economics.

"The first to departmentalize its work was the home economics, followed the next year by other committees, according to the general federation plan now adopted. The child welfare had been the strongest working force at the old club, but after the removal to Peachtree street, sister departments and committees strove for the glory of the club, in friendly rivalry, until at this date, fool-hardy would be the chronicler who ventured an opinion as the most important.

"The new club house, so pridefully occupied and gleefully exhibited, all too soon proved too small for our club meetings and teas. How well I remember that whoever came late to the meeting found nowhere to sit, unless a friend had been subsidized to 'hold a place.' The newspapers, hypnotized by our frantic energy, granted more and more space, till soon we had a 'club page' to tell of our city market—started on Peachtree and later moved to the city auditorium—the first art gallery in Atlanta (in our own clubhouse), the Smith-Hughes vocational home economics classes in 1919—the first for club women in the world, and now copied throughout this broad land—our child welfare work and our new literary department.

"The new auditorium—our auditorium! We caught our breaths and plunged madly into raising money to finance it, which many said was an impossibility.

"Mrs. Thomas, and Mrs. Boykin, who followed her as president, believed it possible, and behold it was done—at what cost in time and money could never be chronicled, but the love for our club that accompanied all the hard work, made it possible. In addition to many, many gifts and subscriptions, a club insurance plan was for the first time tried, and was successful.

"Presto change, and now a banquet hall to feed the inner man, and thus fill the awkward gap, physically as well as spiritually, that extended between the clubhouses and auditorium. Each committee, many individuals, and much outside aid made this dream possible, the fulfillment of which is a bond between the past and present, as we still are raising money.

"The cook-book, the work of the home economics department in 1921, dedicated to the club, and now in its second edition, is still being called the 'life-saver,' and is helping with the others.

"At the same time and apparently suffering not at all by the frantic effort to finance the building program, went on the regular work of the club, its citizenship department inaugurating study classes and patriotic programs, its junior work the pride of the club 'mothers,' its clubrooms filled constantly with women studying all kinds of work—civic, economic and artistic.

"The past year, under Mrs. Richardson's administration, saw no lessening of the financial strain till its close, when at last we could see our way clear to a future not so far distant, unclouded by the thought of money to be raised. What shall we do with it, fellow members? I believe we'll miss it.

"Reminiscences have no part in the future, but with three months already past with our charming new president, Mrs. Norman Sharp, we all are convinced that our beloved club is in safe hands, and that the history that is in the making will be equally glorious."

MRS. HINMAN WRITES ARTICLE ON FINE ARTS

Mrs. George B. Hinman, chairman of fine arts for the Atlanta Woman's club, says:

"The twentieth century is now assigning to the fine arts their true place in life. From the middle of the nineteenth century the whole trend of thought throughout the western world was materialistic. The advent of Darwin's 'Origin of Species' in 1859 taught the survival of the physical fittest. This meant that brute force must prevail. Deeper and deeper did this thought fasten itself upon the world until with a crash came the most terrible war that has ever been waged.

"The thinkers of today are pointout out that materialism leads to disaster. They are showing that the richest inheritance of mankind is a spiritual one rather than the physical one, which the followers of Darwin interpreted as his message.

"Recent prominent cases in court show plainly the faults in an education which trains the intellect only to the neglect of the soul.

'Guizot says 'music cultivates the soul.' This is true of all forms of the fine arts and shows us their place in a well-balanced education. The well-rounded education is neither wholly materialistic nor wholly idealistic, but a combination of the two. It is through the contemplation of the fine arts that the mind is lifted from the sordid aspects of life to the higher realms of thought and feeling.

"Of course the highest form of any art is creation, but not every student of music, painting or sculpture is expected to be a creator any more than any student of literature is expected to be an author. Both the creation and the appreciation of art is necessary to its existence. Thus the study which leads to the appreciation of the fine arts is a necessity in life and not a mere frill. Too long have they been considered a luxury, a prerogative of the favored few. It is now generally recognized that every human being is endowed with a sense of appreciation of the beautiful. But unless the fine arts are presented they cannot be understood, for as Leonard da Vinci says, 'Love is born of knowledge.' Can anyone love football or any other sport without some knowledge of it?

"The Germans, by determined effort, were able in two generations to turn the whole nation to militarism. We, by determined effort, can attain equally startling results in an opposite direction.

"Federation has taught us the value of cooperation. I feel very strongly that it is not what 'I' do or what 'you' do, or what 'they' do, but what 'we' do which will accomplish the results we desire. It is my earnest hope that we who are interested in fine arts may attain and help others to attain that knowledge of which Da Vinci says love is born."

MRS. TOM BROOKE OUTLINES PLANS OF JUNIORS

As chairman of the junior department, Mrs. Tom Brooke expresses her heartfelt gratitude to the president of the club for the wonderful interest she is taking in the department. "It is through her interest," said Mrs. Brooke, "and love of girls that we are enjoying the privileges of the club. We were overjoyed when we heard that she had secured the swimming pool for the club and that we are assured that the junior department may enjoy this pool when it is completed.

"It is not generally known that the membership of the junior department is open to any girl who is indorsed by two members of the club. There are four divisions to this department, the Blue Birds, for the very little girls up to 10 years of age; the Girl Scouts, for the older than 10 years; the Camp Fire Girls, for girls of senior high-school age, and the Original Thirteen club, which is a club for young ladies lately organized by Mrs. Sharp.

"The Blue Birds plan this fall to build and furnish a large doll house for the little patients at Battle Hill, along with their good times of hiking, outdoor cooking and nature stories.

"The Girl Scouts will, in addition to their usual scout program, have handicraft and will stress all things pertaining to the home, particularly music in the home. The Camp Fire Girls expect to do much in dramatics interior decorating and social entertaining, assist in some charity, and in the spring will supplement their usual outdoor activity with tournaments of various kinds.

"The Original Thirteen is a club for having a good time socially as well as for study, for charity and for general usefulness to the club"

HOME ECONOMICS PLANNING FOR GREAT RESULTS

Mrs. J. A. Carlisle, chairman of the home economics department of the Atlanta Woman's club, is most enthusiastic over the plans of the work in the department for the coming club year. The activities are so far reaching and the department is growing so rapidly that some phase of the work is being carried on all the time. Twice a month there is the regular meeting of the department, then in addition there are the vocational classes which are being instructed by some of the finest teachers in the state, and are held almost daily at the clubhouse. In addition to this there is a cook book department which is most interesting to all housewives, and is in constant demand by the women of the city.

Mrs. Carlisle is untiring in her efforts to put over big things in the interest of the club work, and large card parties, cooking schools, and all sorts of affairs are being held constantly under her direction. During the coming year a group of highly entertaining speakers have been asked to address the department, among them. Willis A. Sutton, who has returned recently from an extended trip abroad. Mrs. Dull, who is known by all the housewives of the city, and is considered an authority on all matters pertaining to the art of cooking, has been induced to tell some of her secrets at one of the semi-monthly meetings.

Mrs. T. G. Delph, who so wonderfully and efficiently held the chairmanship of the vocational classes during the past year, has been reappointed for the coming year. Already over 100 women of the city have enrolled for the classes, and the interest manifested is nothing short of marvelous. These classes include millinery, which is under the supervision of Mrs. Mae Bailey, who has proven herself one of the foremost artists in the state. Some of the hats made in the vocational classes during the past year were admired and complimented everywhere.

There are also classes in interior decorating, basketry, theory of interior decorating, and dressmaking, and interior decorations under the supervision of Miss Mary Olive Whitehead, who has won for herself an enviable reputation among the artists of the state. She needs no introduction now, and the fact that she will instruct the classes will insure a large attendance.

Mrs. George Roberts has recently been appointed by Mrs. Carlisle to pilot the work of the cook book department during the coming year. Mrs. Roberts is most anxious to have the cook book placed in as many homes as possible, and has outlined a most interesting plan for the year's work. Most interesting will be the big sale of the cook books at the Fair.

Several of the cook book advertisers have been cordial in their invitations to the department as a whole to visit and inspect the various planted, among them the coca-cola plant, and the trip to this magnificent is anticipated with a great deal of pleasure.

MRS. STRIPLIN WILL MAKE ENDEAVOR TO INTEREST HOMES

Mrs. R. M. Striplin, chairman of the department of American citizenship, will endeavor to bring before the department the interests of the home, developing as far as possible every woman, discussing various types and becoming informed on subjects relative to the departmental work. Prominent speakers will be called on to speak on definite subjects, such as the presidential election, and other topics. A. G. Helmer will be chairman of current events and will present to the class interesting facts on foreign affairs, war, politics and events of natoinal importance.

Mrs. R. S. Turman will have charge of an intensive study class, the plans of which are to be given at a later date. An allegiance dinner is being planned for the discussion of law enforcement. This affair will be similar to one recently held at Washington, D. C. Different organizations particularly interested in this subject will be invited to take part.

In conjunction with Mrs. W. F. Trenary's class of legislation, the bills that were passed this year will be brought to attention and those which will be centered upon for next year will be discussed later on in the year.

The division of Americanization will again be under the leadership of Mrs. J. D. Evans. She will continue her weekly home visiting, and the organization of neighborhood classes, also the presentation of plays to new citizens. Parties and picnics will be frequent and will prove a means for real understanding and friendship.

Mrs. W. P. Dunn will be in charge of motion pictures. She is planning to study the various pictures that will be presented here and will inform the club as to the opinion of the national committee. Good pictures will be presented here and will inform the club as to the opinion of the national committee. Good pictures will be presented from time to time at the club.

In the community service work Mrs Striplin expects to contribute the best the club can offer to help enlarge the work and to be a vital force in enlarging the community service of the city. Mrs. Striplin also extends a most cordial invitation to all the club women interested in what this department has to offer.

SCHOOL OF HEALTH ANNOUNCES CHANGES

Beginning Sunday the health school becomes a regular unity center and will meet every Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, rain or shine, in assembly room No. 2, Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, according to announcement Saturday.

Exercises will include musical program, healing, testimonials, lectures and free distribution of unity literature.

Imelda Octavia Shanklin, head of unity editorial department, will spend a week in Atlanta this winter, under auspices of the school, it is stated. Robert Bryan Harrison, director, will preside at all meetings.

MRS. SCANLING PLANS ACTIVITIES FOR YEAR'S WORK

Mrs. Fred Scanling, chairman of the applied education for the Atlanta Woman's club, will have an extremely active year, introducing many new divisions of educational work. Mrs. Scanling will be assisted by Mrs. J. O. Cheney in the department and hopes to put on a progressive program of rural education, under Mrs. Flora McD. Pitts, lecture courses, development in growing shrubbery and flowers, under Mrs. E. B. Crenshaw; planting of memorial trees and improvement of highway, under Mrs. V. H. Kreigshaber, and many other splendid achievements.

Among the new ventures of this department will be the courses in text book psychology and the various languages as follows: The French circle will meet for organization and registration on Tuesday afternoon, September 30. Beginners classes under Mrs. Enrico Leide and advance classes under Mrs. R. E. Douglas, and conversation classes will be formed then. The Beginners' class will meet Tuesday and Thursday mornings at 10 o'clock. The Conversation class will meet on Tuesday and Friday afternoons at 4 o'clock.

Once a month the Conversation class will have a tea after the class meeting, and as nothing but French will be spoken, this function promises to be of great interest to the members. Topics of current interest, literature, art, music, the drama and other subjects, will be discussed at these meetings and different members will be expected to prepare themselves by reading up on the matters to be discussed, and which will be decided upon in advance.

The price for the lessons will be five dollars per month for a course of three months, payable each month in advance.

The time has not been set for the advance French classes, but will be decided upon shortly. The language series will be under the supervision of Mrs. Scanling, head of the department of applied education. Mrs. E. M. Horine is chairman of the French circle.

PROGRAM PLANS OF HOSPITAL COMMITTEE WORK

The hospital committee of the Atlanta Woman's club gave their first program of the year Tuesday evening, September 16, at hospital No. 48, on Peachtree road.

Other than the boys who are inmates of the hospital, a large number of guests were present. Among these were Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Justi, chairman; Mr. and Mrs. William Fisch, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Johnson, Mrs. Alyce Taylor, Miss Mary Cayce, Mrs. M. O. Newman, Mrs. Hunter Smith, Miss Acree, Mrs. R. L. Harrison, Mrs. T. L. Oney, Mrs. Reed, Mrs. Chapman.

The first number on the program was an Egyptian dance, in costume, by a selected group of children from the Williams Street School playground. This was followed by a solo, Tosti's "Good-bye," sung by Ray Johnson, Jr., after which he entertained the audience with several verses of "It Ain't Gonna Rain No More." Next, Miss Katherine Mion presented a solo dance which was enjoyed by all. Miss Walton, accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Charles Justi, rendered several vocal selections, and then refreshments were served to the boys and guests by the little Egyptian dancers. The refreshments consisted of cake, candy and Mi-Grape punch, which was donated by the Mi-Grape company.

PRESS CHAIRMAN GIVES PRAISE TO ASSISTANTS

"The past year has been one of great activity upon the part of the press department of the Atlanta Woman's club, attended by a most gratifying spirit of cooperation upon the part of the great daily newspapers. Each of these papers has given freely of its space, both for news and pictures, and have furnished strongly written editorials in advocacy of various progressive movements fostered by our club. Too much cannot be said in praise of their cheerful helpfulness, and when it is remembered that this fine spirit of cooperation is extended to all organizations engaged in worthy undertakings, one readily may understand why Atlanta progresses with such magnificent strides," says Mrs. J. R. Hornady, chairman of press and publicity.

"The cooperation extended by the press is typical also of the spirit the press department has found in the club itself. All departments have manifested a splendid spirit of helpfulness, showing a marked appreciation of the value of putting before the public the full facts about all club activities.

"It is scarcely necessary to observe that publicity is fundamental to growth; that people must know before they can be expected to act, and a general realization of this fact no doubt has had much to do with the development of the cooperation this committee has encountered at every hand. To serve has been a pleasure to each member of the press department, as we feel sure it has been to those in other departments as they have gone about their work with so much energy and enthusiasm, and all this department asks is a continuation of the cooperation which has so distinguished the year just closing.

"Those associated with me in the press work have been Mrs. George Ripley, Mrs. George L. Turner and Mrs. J. B. McNelley, the four constituting the central press committee of the club. Working with these associates has been to me a very great pleasure. Recently Mrs. William L. Carmichael was added to the number, and, as an experienced club woman, will be of great assistance."

TEMPERATURE CHECKS MT. SHASTA LAVA FLOW

Sacramento, Cal., September 20.—Freezing temperatures at the base of Mount Shasta have checked the stupendous flow of ashes, mud and lava formation which poured down the sides of the mountain before a torrent of flood waters, imperiling the lumber town of McCloud, five miles distant.

The falls of Mud Creek canyon, which held the onrush after the weight of the rolling formation caved in fifteen acres on the side of the peak, became more rigid with the drop of the temperature.

27 Gateway Ports

will be visited. New York is the port of departure. Then Eastward, following springtime around the globe. In the Mediterranean country, Madeira, Gibraltar, Algiers, Monaco, Naples, Haifa, Port Said. East of Suez, Bombay, Colombo, Padang, Singapore, Batavia. In the Orient, Manila, Shanghai, Hongkong, Taku, Kobe, Yokohama. Home by way of Honolulu, Hilo, Victoria, B. C., Vancouver, B. C., San Francisco, Panama Canal, Havana,—to New York.

Variety will be the spice of the cruise. On shipboard,—deck-sports carnivals, balls and entertainments. On land,—luncheons and receptions at famous hotels, and explorations.

10 days for the cruise, 53 ays of which are devoted to ore explorations.

One of the five features extraordinary, is the overland trip Haifa to Jerusalem to Cairo, with sail up the Nile.

To show the voyagers around on their land explorations, the Canadian Pacific has arranged for best native guides and interpreters, fine motors and other facilities.

LaGrange, Ga., September 20.—Mrs. L. D. Allen was reelected to head the Parent-Teacher association of LaGrange high school at a well-attended meeting held Friday afternoon at the school building.

Other officers are Mrs. George Sargent, vice president; Mrs. G. T. Traylor, treasurer; Mrs. Virgil Stallings, secretary.

The following chairmen of standing committees were chosen: Ways and means, Mrs. T. C. Terrell; films, Mrs. Frank W. White; program, Mrs. M. T. McClendon; social, Mrs. Will Morgan.

Press chairman and house and grounds chairman are yet to be supplied.

Several plans for the year recommended by the executive board were adopted. A drive is to be made for 100 per cent membership by the 14 groups, each consisting of a teacher and a parent. Dues were reduced from 81 to 50 cents.

It was decided to honor the high school teachers with a night party the first Friday night in October when every educator, every parent having a child in the high school and every minister of the city will be invited to gather at the high school for a good old-fashioned time.

The association will offer three prizes of $5 in gold each to the pupil of each high school grade making the highest general average for the year's work.

Dr. Spencer Tunnell, pastor of the First Baptist church, addressed the association on "What the Parent-Teacher association Should Mean to the Parent, School and Teacher." A short program was rendered, which included a reading by Miss LaRose Wagner.

Mrs. Cofer Addresses Hope School P.-T. A.

The Parent-Teacher association of Hope school met Tuesday with a full attendance.

Mrs. Cofer, the new president, addressed her co-workers, urging a spirit of cooperation for the coming year, and in consequence found the new chairmen and committees responsive in their willingness to accept the duties assigned to them.

Mrs. Walter Bowman was made an honorary member of the association in appreciation of her past services, although her future interest will be with the Fulton High association.

Mrs. A. M. Smith, chairman of a committee for the furtherance of a county unit school system, gave a report of the county council meeting held in September.

Mrs. Mark Cauble was elected corresponding secretary to fill a vacancy in this office.

The fifth grade won the prize for having the largest percentage of mothers present.

Winona Park P.-T. A. Makes Plans.

The P.-T. A. of Winona Park school is planning great improvements for the school during the year. The president, Mrs. Henry Earthman, called a meeting of her executive board Wednesday morning and great enthusiasm was manifested in developing plans for making this the most successful in the history of the school. An orchestra has been organized under the direction of Mrs. Renold Clark. A class in expression will also be taught.

The following committees have been appointed: Ways and means, playground, social, sanitation, house, program, library, scrapbook and sewing.

A membership drive will be put on at once and 100 per cent is the goal for this association.

Emory P.-T. A. Holds Meeting.

The Emory grammar and junior high school P.-T. A. met Wednesday afternoon at the school building with a large number present. The new officers, Mrs. M. T. Benson and Mrs. T. R. Allen, were in their chairs as president and secretary. It was decided to serve luncheon to the teachers each time the P.-T. A. meets. Plans are already under way for an elaborate Hallowe'en party to be had at the school house. Dr. Rhodes, one of the school trustees, gave an interesting talk on the management of the school, after which the meeting adjourned to meet the first Wednesday in each month at 3 o'clock.

Marietta P.-T. A. Holds Meeting.

Marietta, Ga., September 20.—The first meeting of the Parent-Teacher club was held Tuesday afternoon at the Haynes Street school. The parents and teachers are sponsoring a cooking school to be held in October.

After the business of this meeting a musical program and an informal reception were given the faculty for the coming year.

200 Mothers Attend First Fall Meeting of W. A. Bass P.-T. A.

The first meeting of the W. A. Bass P.-T. A. was held Thursday afternoon, September 18, at 3:15 o'clock in the auditorium of the Moreland school, with an attendance of over 200 mothers. Mrs. Henry Bauer, who was elected president at the last meeting of the association in May, presided.

Other newly-elected officers present were: Mrs. Carl Karston, first vice president; Mrs. W. A. Kimball, second vice president; Mrs. W. D. Stayton, third vice president; Mrs. Ella Leonard, recording secretary; Mrs. A. J. Stitt, corresponding secretary; Mrs. George Roberts, treasurer; Mrs. Graham West, auditor.

Mrs. Bauer made a brief speech, welcoming the mothers. She pledged her own support and asked for the cooperation of all members in the work of the coming year.

J. H. Smith, principal of Bass Junior High, also spoke to the association and told of the successful organization of the schools. He stated attendance than any high school, junior or senior, in the city with a roll of over 1,600 students.

The constitution and by-laws were read by the first vice president, Mrs. Carl Karston, and were adopted by the association.

The first Wednesday of the month has been selected for the regular meeting day of the association. The executive board will hold its meeting on the last Wednesday of the month at 10:30 o'clock.

A novel plan of giving school pennants to the classes having 50 per cent of mothers present at the monthly meeting has been decided upon and it is hoped that many classes will secure pennants.

Mrs. Geo. Price, chairman of ways and means committee, explained that a mammoth paper sale campaign is to be carried on and asked that mothers aid by sending papers and magazines to the school every Monday morning.

Mrs. Kimball, of the better films committee, stated that a series of very interesting and instructive educational films were to be put on at the Palace Moving Picture theater, on Euclid avenue, early in October on Friday and Saturday afternoons and urged that parents have their children attend whenever possible.

Mrs. Housman, of the League of Women Voters and chairman of the Bass P.-T. A. program committee, introduced Mrs. R. L. Turman, of the League of Women Voters, speaker of the afternoon. Mrs. Turman gave a most interesting talk, urging women of the P.-T. A. to use their votes and influence towards the betterment of our schools.

Joseph E. Brown P.-T. A. Will Give Reception

The Joseph E. Brown Junior High Parent Teacher association will not hold its regular monthly meeting this month, but instead, will give a reception to the teachers on Monday night, September 29, so that parents and teachers may have an opportunity to meet each other and get acquainted.

A very special invitation is extended to all the new patrons of "Joe, Jr." to be on hand, and of course the old patrons of last year will be there, for they are expected to welcome the new ones into the association.

The Brown junior high has 45 teachers this year, 21 of whom are new, and 1,080 pupils, 400 of whom are new, and it is to welcome these teachers that the association is giving this reception.

Lee Street P.-T. A. Holds First Fall Meeting

The Lee Street Parent-Teacher association held their first fall meeting Thursday, September 18, in the auditorium of the school with a large attendance, Mrs. A. F. Black, president, presided, giving a gracious address of welcome to the new mothers of the association.

The officers for the year are Mrs. A. F. Black, president; Mrs. Andrew P. Stewart, vice president; Mrs. J. Bratton Davies, secretary, and Mrs. J. W. Long, treasurer.

A brief review of the work of the past year was given and much important business transacted.

Much is expected to be accomplished this year and the association asks the cooperation of every patron of the school.

Forrest Ave. P.-T. A. Outlines Activities for the Year

The first fall meeting of Forrest Avenue P.-T. A. was held Wednesday in the school auditorium with the president, Mrs. Rawiszer, in the chair. There were over 200 present.

The president graciously greeted the faculty, old and new members and friends into the association. In a very earnest manner she stressed the importance of every member giving their hearty cooperation in the work. In conclusion, Mrs. Rawiszer said, "Without the help of every member we cannot accomplish our goal and so the success of Forrest Avenue P.-T. A. depends on every individual doing their part."

Miss Kate King, principal, informally introduced the teachers to the association. All of last year's teachers are again on the faculty and three new ones who were all given a hearty welcome.

The roll call of the mothers by grade gave Miss Peacock's grade 1-2 a prize for the largest percentage present and Mrs. J. C. Anderson's grade 1-1 the prize for greatest number.

Miss Annie Parham won the draw prize.

Mrs. T. C. Bramlett, vice president and chairman of executive board reported $5 given to the Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs for the expenses of entertaining the state convention.

Mrs. Phil Cohen, grounds chairman, reported $73 from her committee turned over to treasurer from last year.

The officers of the association and last year's chairmen have fixed a dining room adjoining the kitchen, where the children will be served lunches.

Through kindness of Mrs. Cohen's committee, the walls were calsomined, tables painted and new cloths bought, also new curtains.

It was voted to retain membership in the state P.-T. A., State Federation of Women's Clubs, city federation and city P.-T. A. council.

This year the president has asked a different grade to be hostess to the association each month. The sixth grade will be hostess for the October meeting, Mrs. C. S. Morse, chairman, assisted by Mrs. J. F. Hawthorn, Mrs. O. R. Reynolds, Mrs. Barfield, Mrs. Morehead, Mrs. L. Moseley, Mrs. R. J. Jones.

Every Monday this committee will serve lunches to help pay expenses of entertainment.

The teachers' luncheon will be served every month by the kitchen committee. The chairmen for the year are: Membership, Miss King; house, Mrs. F. A. Boykin; kitchen, Mrs. Jim Watkins; grounds, Mrs. Phil Cohen; better films, Mrs. Arnold Frank; Americanization, Mrs. L. Moseley; press, Mrs. John Kerksis.

After adjournment a social hour was enjoyed and delightful refreshments were served in the new dining room.

Highland P.-T. A. Chairmen Announced by President

The first meeting of Highland Parent-Teacher association was held Wednesday afternoon with a large and enthusiastic attendance of mothers present. Mrs. Spurgeon King, the new president, presided. Other officers for the year who were elected in May are: First vice president, Mrs. K. B. Crawford; second vice president, Mrs. Frank Fair; recording secretary, Mrs. George Coates; treasurer, Mrs. B. B. Eleazer; corresponding secretary, Mrs. S. S. Newland.

Mrs. King announced the following chairmen for the various committees, who are to serve for the coming year: Social, Mrs. DeWitt King; yard, Mrs. E. B. Crawford; hospitality, Mrs. J. R. Patillo; teacher's lunches, Mrs. Cecil Crawford; membership, Mrs. C. A. Alexander; program, Mrs. R. D. Ison; better films, Mrs. B. H. Mobley; house, Mrs. W. K. Wyant; citizenship, Mrs. Hill Huffman; welfare, Mrs. L. K. Starr; pre-school age, Mrs. J. C. Malone; publicity, Mrs. C. E. Betts.

These committees are at work and a progressive program for Highland association is being planned for the year.

Mrs. Crawford, of the yard committee, reported that the wall had been replaced, this time with sufficient drainage. The yard has been terraced and gravel placed over the red mud, and the playground is now in splendid condition.

It was announced that a class of beginners in violin would be organized next week. For the nominal fee of 25 cents a lesson, any child has the privilege of taking lessons in class. These lessons are under the direction of the Morgan-Stephens School of Music.

Mrs. Whitaker, former chairman of the pre-school circle, reported that all children entering kindergarten this year had been given a thorough physical examination during the summer.

It was decided by the association to provide milk for sale each day at the children's lunch time. It was also decided to place on sale at the school lead pencils. These pencils are to be in the Highland colors, red and green, with Highland name, and are of good quality lead.

Miss Corrigan talked most interestingly to the mothers. She spoke of the importance of regular habits of study at home and of regular attendance at school. She reminded the mothers to have the children's clothes properly marked.

The enrollment of Highland school has so increased that four new teachers have been added to the faculty and it is necessary to erect another portable at once to relieve congestion in the sixth grade and in the kindergarten.

Miss Orr's room and Miss Thurmond's room won the prizes for having most mothers at the meeting.

Mrs. McCutcheon Entertains P.-T. A. Presidents' Club

Mrs. Howard McCutcheon entertained the members of the P.-T. A. Presidents' club at an elaborate luncheon Friday at the James L. Key school.

Mrs. McCutcheon is president of the club and presided over the luncheon in a most gracious manner, introducing Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of Atlanta public schools; Mrs. T. T. Stevens, president of the Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. Z. V. Peterson, president of the fifth district of the Parent-Teacher association, and Mrs. J. E. Andrews, who made brief, interesting talks. Mr. Sutton has recently returned from Europe and he spoke of school problems in the foreign countries, commending highly the schools of England, emphasizing the building of character in the children, and urging the Parent-Teacher associations to make this an important phase in their undertakings. Especially did Mr. Sutton stress the importance of character building of the pre-school age children.

Mrs. McCutcheon was assisted in entertaining by Miss L. M. Johnson, principal of the James L. Key school.

Unique features of the occasion were the favors on the luncheon table, made by the children of James L. Key school. The favors and other decorations of the table were in the school colors, purple and gold.

Covers were laid for the Presidents' club and several invited guests.

Covington P.-T. A. Gives Lemon Party.

Covington, Ga., September 20.—An interesting event of the week was the lemon party given on Friday evening, September 91, in the halls of the high school building, by the second-grade division of the Covington Parent-Teacher association, of which Mrs. S. D. Haynie is chairman.

Each guest was asked to bring a lemon and the fun began when the lemons were cut and the seed counted, as each seed was a contribution of one penny for the second grade tots and the holder of the lemon with the most seed won the valuable prize donated by H. E. Dunlap, of Rogers Grocery company.

The halls were made homelike and attractive with artistic decorations arranged by a decorative committee, of which Miss Ella McClendon has served as chairman.

The cooperation of the enthusiastic mothers of this division was in great evidence when one's attention was attracted to the booths from which delicious sandwiches, candies and cream were sold and ice-cold lemonade served free.

Mrs. A. S. Hopkins and Mrs. F. V. Hull presided at the lemonade booths and Mrs. Carl Dial delighted the guests by serving ice cream cones during the playing of many merry games.

Among the outstanding features of the entertainment was the winning of a cake, beautifully embossed with "P.-T. A., 2nd Grade." One hundred chances on the cake were sold by Misses Frances Graham, Sara Hill, Mary Elizabeth Felker, Anne Sue McCullers and Frances Odum.

Mrs. Carl Aenchbacker served as chairman of the cake committee and Mrs. A. S. Adams had charge of the cake booth, which deserves special mention of its decorations of gold and white, effectively carried out with golden-rod and crepe streamers. Mrs. B. B. Brooks was the experienced baker of the cake.

As the guests departed each declared that Miss Caroline Wooten, the popular second-grade teacher, made an ideal chairman of the entertainment committee.

Mrs. Andrews Gives Brief History of Presidents' Club

Mrs. J. E. Andrews, who organized the P.-T. A. Presidents' club, gives in the following article a brief history of the organization:

"The Presidents' club was organized in January of the year 1921.

"Behind the organization of this club was a realization of a need for closer fellowship and better understanding by all our school forces, and an earnest prayer to the all-wise Father for inspiration and direction in the effort to bring about and supply this need.

"True, here was a council of parent-teachers which met quarterly for reports of the various organizations in the city and which served as a clearing house, but which at that time did not furnish a central organization for mutual intercourse and understanding. The council did not function fully or freely or repeatedly enough to supply the need.

"So the Parent-Teacher Presidents' club was organized. It has no constitution or by-laws, or payment of dues or fines, but simply affords a time and place each month where all the presidents of the various Atlanta P.-T. A.'s may meet for pleasant social intercourse, to know each other better and for the mutual information and inspiration that is bound to come from such a gathering.

"From now on, the council of the P.-T. A. will hold its meetings on the same day with the Presidents' club, just preceding the luncheon at which the presidents gather, and we feel that a very forward step has been made by this plan, when five or six hours one day of each month will be set aside for the central work of the organization, as well as for pleasure. By this means only one day will be required in the month and we will still get through in time to be at home when the children return from school.

"Mrs. J. E. Andrews, of Ira Street school, was the first president of the Presidents' club, followed by Mrs. Charles Morris, of Greenwood school, then Mrs. David L. Wise, of Formwalt school, and Mrs. Howard C. McCutcheon, of James L. Key school, who is the present president."

Kirkwood P.-T. A. Makes Plans for Successful Year

Kirkwood P.-T. A. met September 17 with a large number of mothers present, Mrs. A. E. Wilson, president, presiding. Mrs. Wilson announced the lunch room, Mrs. Butler, chairman, and the better films, Mrs. Charles Fincher, chairman, will be a part of the ways and means this year. Mrs. Butler read the names of those who will serve one day each month in the lunch room. There are a few days yet to be filled and those wishing to help will please call Mrs. Butler, Decatur 0899-J.

Mrs. Albert Nix, president of the pre-school age study class, urged the mothers to join the circle, announcing the meeting for the second Wednesday in each month. There are no dues. The following members were appointed on the program committee, each lady to be responsible for the program the month assigned her, on the subject given: October, "Playground," Mrs. A. S. Wilson; November, "Health," Mrs. Butler; December, "Christmas," Mrs. Garland Embrey; January, "Spiritual and Moral," Mrs. H. G. Parks; February, "Library," Mrs. Wetmore; March, teachers to select their subject; April "Citizenship," Mrs. Horace Bowman; May, "Home Economics," Mrs. William Camp.

Mrs. Wilson asked for two mothers from each grade to volunteer as chairmen for the membership drive. It was inspiring to see how splendidly the mothers responded. It is this spirit of cooperation that has made Kirkwood P.-T. A. such a splendid organization. The drive will end with the October meeting, when the prizes will be announced.

It was announced that Mrs. Parks, the school nurse, would be at the school and examine every child during the next two weeks.

Mrs. Wilson gave notice to those interested that Mrs. Turner will be glad to get up a class in basket weaving. For further information phone Mrs. Wilson, Decatur 0435.

Mrs. H. G. Parks read from the Georgia bulletin, "Kirkwood sends in finest report of year."

It was voted that the association be responsible for a playground instructor for two hours each afternoon. Miss Bremer gave a splendid talk urging that the children's teeth be looked after so that the 100 per cent perfect teeth record Kirkwood school had made would be continued. This record should be kept, as Kirkwood school is the second school in the world to have accomplished this.

Mrs. Wilson read the poem, "Boost Your School." Miss Moore, low five one, and Miss Bond, low one two, captured the prizes for the most mothers present.

The new teachers were introduced and with the returned ones, were welcomed.

An enjoyable social hour was spent after the meeting. Mrs. Sig Hamilton and Mrs. William Camp serving punch.

Moses Formwalt P.-T. A. Appoints Committee Chairmen

The Parent-Teacher association of the Moses W. Formwalt school was held Wednesday afternoon, September 17, with Mrs. J. L. Rymski, president, presiding.

A very enthusiastic meeting was held and a large number of mothers were present.

The following committees were appointed: Citizenship, Mrs. J. E. Andrews; better films, Mrs. W. B. Lingo; sunshine, Mrs. Laura Harding; welcome, Mrs. Hensley; press, Mrs. L. M. Tribble and Mrs. J. C. Peek; refreshments, Mrs. J. T. Littlefield; ways and means, Mrs. W. T. Peek; Smith-Hughes, Mrs. T. B. Ashton; representative to Parent-Teacher council, Mrs. W. S. McLaughlin, Mrs. B. G. Otwell, Mrs. McGinty and Mrs. Stuart.

It has been the past custom of the association to award a prize to the grade having the most mothers present. This prize was won by the sixth grade, high school, Miss Dixon, teacher.

It was announced by the president that the lectures on "Health, Heart and Home" will be given at the school during the term.

This concluded the business program, after which refreshments were served and a delightful social hour was spent.

School Principal Addresses George W. Adair P.-T. A.

On Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock, George W. Adair P.-T. A. held the first meeting of the school year in the auditorium with Mrs. C. R. Haynes presiding.

The treasurer's report announced that the piano for the kindergarten had been paid for.

Miss Nolan, principal, gave a talk of appreciation for the cooperation and interest the community had shown in the school and its work and emphasized the fact that the purpose of the association is hearty cooperation and not mere money-making. She also urged the importance of mothers bringing their babies regularly to the baby clinic, thereby lessening physical defects and malnutrition, which later will aid the kindergarten in its efforts to enroll 100 per cent perfect children.

There were a number of mothers to enroll for the Smith-Hughes classes which begin next week. Courses in millinery, dressmaking and interior decorating will be offered. Certificates of credit will be given on the completion of each course.

Mrs. George Howsmon, president of the P.-T. A. council, was present and gave a number of interesting suggestions.

The count of mothers gave the attendance prize to Miss Elizabeth Mann's class, low 4.

Delicious punch and wafers were served, a social feature that has added the personal touch between parents, teachers and officers of the association.

Parent-Teacher Meetings

The Parent-Teacher association of State Street school will be held Friday, September 26, at 3 o'clock. Officers for the year will be installed and committees appointed. Patrons and friends cordially invited to be present.

The Home Park P.-T. A. will hold its first fall meeting Wednesday afternoon, September 24, at 2:30 o'clock.

The Davis Street School Parent-Teacher association will meet at the school Wednesday, September 24, at 2:30 o'clock. A full attendance is urged.

The Parent-Teacher association of W. F. Slaton school will hold its first fall meeting on Wednesday afternoon, September 24, at 2:30 o'clock in the school auditorium. It is especially desired that every patron, both new and old, be present. Since the school enrollment is much greater than it has been in the past years, it is anticipated that this year will be the most active and progressive in the history of the association.

The Parent-Teacher association of the Hoke Smith Junior High school will hold its regular monthly meeting Wednesday afternoon, September 24, at 3 o'clock, at the new Hoke Smith school, formerly the Hill Street Grammar school. A large attendance is urged, as this promises to be a very interesting meeting.

The College Park Pre-School circle will meet Tuesday afternoon, September 23, at 3 o'clock, at the home of the president, Mrs. B. H. Sullivan, 707 North Main street. There will be a very important business meeting, followed by an interesting program and a social hour. As this is the first meeting of the new year, it is hoped that all members and interested friends will be present.

Crew Street P.-T. A. will meet Thursday, September 25, at 2:30 o'clock, in the school auditorium. All patrons of the school are urged to attend.

The first fall meeting of the John T. Faith School Parent-Teacher association will be held on Thursday afternoon, September 25, at 3 o'clock. A very instructive as well as interesting program has been arranged, featuring the teachers and the course of study. All patrons and friends are urged to be present. Refreshments will be served.

The Parent-Teacher association of the Joel Chandler Harris school will meet Tuesday afternoon promptly at 2:30 o'clock. An attractive program has been arranged to follow the business meeting. Mrs. R. L. Turman, citizen chairman of the Atlanta Woman's club, will be the speaker for the occasion. The president, Mrs. A. D. Gregory, urges all new and old members of the association to attend.

ROME WOMAN WRITES POEM

The following poem was written by Mrs. Cordelia Pyle Wright, of Rome, Ga., who is a well-known educator in the state and extremely interested in Parent-Teacher work.

Dear Little Son of Mine.

Dear little son, with your eyes of blue,
Merry laugh and heart so true,
What have the fates in store for you,
Dear little son of mine?

Will your heart be true, and your soul still pure
As you strive through the coming years?
Can you bear the burdens, the blows, the tears,
Dear little son of mine?

In the battle of life will you win success,
Or failure, or sore defeat?
Will you gain your victory, or retreat,
Dear little son of mine?

Dear little son, strive not for wealth,
Nor greedy gain, nor empty fame;
Be thou content without an honored name—
Dear little son of mine.

For your riches can go as leaves from the tree,
And your fame may last but a day;
But faith, truth and love will abide alway,
Dear little son of mine.

Christian Council Holds Meeting

The September meeting of the Christian council was held Monday in Wesley Memorial. The world little reckons of the good this heroic body of humanitarian workers are endeavoring to do. Attention was called to the prevalence of juvenile crime and a committee, consisting of one from each demonstration, was appointed to investigate and submit recommendations to the council that would meet the needs of this call. One of the committee was Mrs. J. Houston Johnston, of All Saints' Episcopal church. The chairman of the committee on legislation reported the passage of the marriage license bill.

Funds are practically raised for the institute on social hygiene, beginning the week of November 17. Emphasis was laid upon the importance for preparations for the simultaneous campaign of evangelism which is planned for the period from March 22 to April 12, 1928. Mrs. F. H. Allen, representing the women's missionary societies of the Methodist churches, announced that they have arranged for weekly lectures on various phases of social hygiene at the First Methodist church from 10 to 11:30 a. m each Thursday during October and November.

Am I my brother's keeper? seem to be a question paramount in the minds of these earnest workers. There were 28 ministers and 39 laymen at this meeting.

Woman's Work Growing.

The twelve district secretaries in the north Georgia conference of the M. E. Church, South, have not been idle during the summer months. Many new auxiliaries in each district have been organized. Reports coming in indicate that every district will exceed its quota for 1924 in new organizations.

Miss Lilla Tuck, secretary of the Athens district, and Mrs. L. M. Awtry, secretary of the Marietta district, each have organized eleven new auxiliaries, ably assisted by Miss Bert Winter, of Bowersville, who was appointed at the annual conference in Griffin to assist the other secretaries in this work.

Mrs. Frank Atlee, secretary of the North Atlanta district, and Mrs. J. C. White, of the South Atlanta district, report many new organizations in their districts, as does Mrs. L. Moss, of the Dalton district. We hope for a full report later.

HARMLESS LAXATIVE
All Children Love Its Pleasant Taste

Mother!

Your Constipated Child Needs "California Fig Syrup"

Hurry Mother! Even a fretful, feverish, bilious or constipated child loves the pleasant taste of "California Fig Syrup." This gentle, harmless laxative never fails to sweeten the stomach and open the bowels. A teaspoonful today may prevent a sick child tomorrow. It doesn't cramp or overact. Contains no narcotics or soothing drugs.

Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.

FAT WOMAN TELLS WHAT SHE DID TO REDUCE

"For several years I weighed between 185 and 195 pounds and was daily putting on flesh, although I tried every reducing pill, cream and remedy advertised. I would probably weigh 300 pounds to-day if I had not been fortunate enough to meet a French woman, who gave me a secret way she had found to get thin. With it I lost 75 pounds in a remarkably short time and greatly improved my health. I am glad to have the opportunity to make public the simple, easy directions I followed. If you, too, are burdened with ugly rolls of fat, suffer from high blood pressure and dizziness, you can almost immediately be relieved by doing just what I did and at the same time make yourself look ten years younger."

DIRECTIONS TO GET THIN

Get from your druggist a box of Sangrina and use it as per directions. At the same time get some of Dr. Folts' Soap (most druggists have it or can order it from the Scientific Research Laboratories, New York City). Make a good lather with this soap, apply it night and morning on special parts you want to reduce, such as double chins, ankles, bust, hips, etc.; let it remain a few minutes, then wash off. This French beauty secret is extensively used in Paris and New York by fashionable women and actresses, and has been found remarkable to safely reduce in a very short time. It does not leave any wrinkles or flabby tissues, and of course is ABSOLUTELY HARMLESS. Try it and it will not be long before you will see a complete change in your figure. I know of many men and women who, in the very first week have lost from 5 to 6 inches in measurement and several pounds in weight with Sangrina and Dr. Folts' Soap combined. It is the easiest, safest and most economical way to reduce. After you have attained desired measurement, you do not need to continue with Sangrina, but keep a box of Dr. Folts' Soap handy, use it regularly once or twice a week, and even if you eat more than you should, you will not see any fat get on your figure. On sale at any of JACOBS' PHARMACIES, Cone's, Curtis' or Marshall & Pendergrast's Drug Stores.—(adv.)

Mrs. Francis Stewart Bequeathes $35,000 To Local Charities

The readers of this page of all denominations will be pleased to know that Mrs. Francis Stewart, of the First Baptist church, who recently died, left a bequest of $25,000 to the Georgia Baptist Orphans' home, and $10,000 to the Andreso Francis Stewart Good Will Center. The world is made better for this good woman having lived. Money invested in character will multiply dividends long after stocks, bonds, lands and houses have perished on the sands of time.

MRS. LEWIS.

Briefly Told

Baptist women of the Atlanta and other nearby associations will receive a warm welcome if they can make it convenient to attend the Fairburn W. M. U. annual meeting to be held on the evening of the 22d and the entire day of the 23d at the Union City Baptist church.

College Park cars from Atlanta will meet the bus which goes through Union City.

Miss Kathleen Mallory, general secretary of the W. M. U. of the S. B. C., will be present at the Western Association W. M. U., which meets at Senoia, September 25, and will make an address which every Baptist woman would rejoice to hear.

Miss Cora Anne Brown is rejoicing in the fact that the good women of the Second Baptist church have made it possible for the men to extend a cordial invitation to the Atlanta association to meet with their church at their annual meeting in October. It is all the more praiseworthy in the women of the Second Baptist, under the leadership of their president, Mrs. Hugh Rainey Fisher, because another church had previously invited the association, but found it necessary to recall their invitation.

Last week the sad news of the passing of Mrs. A. P. Stewart was recorded on this page, causing universal sorrow. Mrs. Stewart, who was for many years a loyal and liberal member of the First Baptist church of Atlanta, had from time to time made large gifts to the benevolencies fostered by her denomination. In death, as in life, Mrs. Stewart's good works will still "carry on." Her bequest of $10,000 to the Andrew and Frances Stewart Good Will center, which she founded, and the one of $25,000 to the Orphans' home at Hapeville, are but additional evidences of her interest in her Father's business, in which she made repeated investments.

On Monday afternoon, September 15, the Woman's Missionary society of Ponce de Leon Avenue Baptist church held its annual meeting, at which time the officers for the new year were elected. Mrs. Edwin C. Stewart read the report of the nominating committee, which was adopted as read. The following splendid group of women will serve their society for the coming year: President, Mrs. M. A. Sandifer; honorary president, Mrs. M. Ashby Jones; first vice president, Mrs. Judson Garner; second vice president, Mrs. Lillian W. Moore; corresponding secretary, Mrs. C. G. Lippold; recording secretary, Mrs. Laurence Hobart; treasurer, Mrs. W. F. Dykes; auditor, Mrs. George M. Niles; circle chairmen, Mrs. George Coates, Mrs. George Forrester, Mrs. Harold Cooledge, Mrs. George McKenzie, Mrs. John McCullough, Mrs. R. D. Webb, Mrs. C. Y. House, Mrs. W. A. Selman, Mrs. P. F. Duggan, Mrs. George M. Brown and Mrs. Carpenter Jones.

Mrs. T. B. Woodall, of Fairburn, has been named to fill the vacancy made by the resignation of Mrs. J. O. Persons, personal service chairman of the west central division. We regret very much the resignation of Mrs. Persons, who has made a splendid chairman for this department of our work, but feel very thankful and happy to have secured Mrs. Woodall, an efficient, capable woman, to fill the vacancy.

Hostess to W. M. U. Division

An unique and delightful Baptist W. M. U. gathering of the summer was the one assembled at the spacious, hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. Idus Robertson in Manchester, Ga., on September 9 and 10.

Mrs. Robertson officially represents the W. M. U. of Georgia as vice president of the west central division. In her enthusiasm for the work and for her coworkers she had been planning for weeks ahead to have a house-party and accordingly she had invited as her guests the W. M. U. officers in the 13 associations included in her division.

It was an occasion anticipated as one of social enjoyment, splendid Christian fellowship and free interchange of ideas and methods of work. Every detail was planned by the hostess in her own big-hearted, informal way, which assured an occasion of rare privilege.

Early on the morning appointed, automobiles and trains from the various directions brought to the Robertson home the welcome guests, bound together by the tie of mutual love and loyalty to the biggest and best of all humanity's interests.

It soon transpired that others besides the Robertson household were interested in this unusual gathering, for the guests were informed that the pastor, Rev. M. P. Jackson, of the Central Baptist church, his gracious wife and the members of the Woman's Missionary society were cooperating to the fullest in making the visit one long to be cherished.

After a bountiful luncheon cars were at the door, ready to take the guests to the beloved spot where a new and handsome church is almost ready for dedication—the pride of both pastor and people. One could not help being impressed with the wisdom and artistic skill of those who planned the erection of this beautiful house to the praise and glory of God.

Later on the whole company motored a distance of five miles to Warm Springs, a resort well known for beauty of scenery and health-giving waters. Here the well-appointed swimming pool, with its ever fresh and comfortably warm water, lent additional attraction.

Under the gorgeous trees, a table was spread—a veritable feast of good things, which the guests, with merry hearts, "wore away the hungry edge of appetite."

The next day there were two more automobile trips—one to perhaps the biggest and most beautiful peach farm in the country, between Manchester and Woodberry, and another to Chalybeate Springs, both spots being of legitimate pride to the citizens of Meriwether county.

The Robertsons of Manchester, the Central Baptist church, with its superb pastor and people, will linger long in the hearts of their truly fortunate guests.

At the close of a perfect visit, the parting guests thought sympathetically of the invited guests who found it necessary to send regrets.

Those of the happy number who partook of this wondrous Christian fellowship were: Mrs. E. R. Barrett and Mrs. F. O. Reese, of Newnan; Mrs. E. R. Hays, of Columbus; Miss Lucile Woodruff, of Woodberry; Mrs. T. B. Woodall and Mrs. Clinton Reese, of Fairburn; Mrs. Homer H. Cook, of Palmetto; Mrs. M. W. Reid and Mrs. J. W. Wills, of Atlanta.

Mrs. Idus Robertson, of Manchester, Ga., vice president west-central division W. M. U., who entertained division officers at her home September 9 and 10.

Christian Fellowship.

The Bible teaches men to be strong. Human hands and hearts are needed to live its teachings. The revelation that came through holy men of old must be completed by a revelation coming through men now living. Social intercourse is a means of grace as truly as is prayer and the church ordinances. Warmth is as essential as light in the growing of souls. The preacher may furnish the light but the bulk of the heat must come from the members. Every point of contact, or as Paul puts it, "every joint," is a channel of divine grace. It is at the point where Christian lives touch that there springs up the life by which the church is nourished and made efficient for her work. God's grace flows through social bonds. We are held in place by personal attachments. We save one another.

Interest Growing In Federated Page

Many letters from over this state and from some others nearby are being received by the editors of The Constitution's Federated Church page, all telling of interest in this page of church news.

During the past week one writer from Elberton, Ga., sent in an interesting communication, published elsewhere on this page. Another interested reader from Opelika, Ala., sends a card commending the page.

All of this goes to prove that the Federated Church Woman's page is being widely read.

BESSIE TIFT COLLEGE WILL OPEN WEDNESDAY

Forsyth, Ga., September 20.—(Special.)—Everything is in readiness for the formal opening of Bessie Tift college Wednesday. The largest attendance in the history of the college is expected. The faculty has been enlarged and is already here.

The new gymnasium and swimming pool are ready for use.

Water will be heated and the pool used the year around. This gives Bessie Tift athletic equipment equal to any school in the state.

Students will arrive by every train the first of the week.

WOMAN DROPS HER SUIT AGAINST KETCHUP KING

New York, September 20.—Mrs. Muriel Buell, who sued Jefferson Livingston, "ketchup king" and race horse owner, for $1750 a month for life, has dropped her suit.

Reports at the King's county courthouse, where Supreme Court Justice Faber signed an order of discontinuance, were that she took $10,000 in settlement. Mrs. Buell's lawyer denied these reports. He said Mrs Buell had to go to Los Angeles.

Mrs. Buell sued to enforce an agreement which, she declared, was in lieu of a settlement for breach of promise. Livingston denied Mrs. Buell's version of the agreement.

Life Service Band In Elberton.

The following interesting news items were sent in by Miss Adelaide V. Metcalf, who is corresponding secretary of the Emma Lester group of young people in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Elberton, Ga.

The Methodist church in Elberton is distinguished in that its young people are unusually well organized. There are two groups of young people each actively at work. The Life Service band, composed of 33 young people banded together for definite life service, has lightened the work of the pastor during the summer months by taking charge of the weekly prayer service. Miss Lula Lamback is chairman of the Life Service band, and presided at the last weekly prayer service, conducted by these young people, when the subject for discussion was "Winning Souls to Christ." There were several speakers for the evening, among them Messrs. Horace Smith and Richard Adams.

One of the finest things in which the Life Service band is interested is in going out on Sunday afternoons to country churches and holding services of special appeal to young people.

Emma Lester Group.

The Young People's Missionary society, known as the Emma Lester group, named in honor of a beloved missionary, is actively engaged in missionary work. Miss Mary Lizzie Wright is president, and Miss Nora Jones is the consecrated leader. At the first fall meeting recently, held at the home of Mrs. B. H. Kay, Miss Jones was presented a life membership in the Woman's Missionary society as a fitting tribute to the inspiration of Miss Jones' 20 years' devoted service to the cause of missions.

These young people have met their pledge to the Belle Bennett memorial, now being built at Grater Scarritt college, in Nashville, Tenn. They are interested in the study of the Bible and missions, and many of them are tithers. A very happy feature is the social life enjoyed by these earnest yet joyous young people who meet in the homes of the members and in this way have learned to know each other better. Three out of this group have volunteered for the ministry, two for work in Africa and eight others are preparing for missionary work. Surely Dr. L. W. Collins, the pastor of the church, has just cause to be very proud of these young people.

Floyd Prepares Many Features For County Fair

Rome, Ga., September 20.—One of the greatest attractions ever presented to the people of this vicinity is the Floyd County fair, which is to be held in this city beginning September 30 and lasting through October 4, in the opinion of Secretary Wyatt Foster and other fair officials. All plans have been practically completed.

One of the biggest features to be displayed will be the agricultural exhibit, despite the fact that drought has perhaps affected the crops in all parts of the state, and excessive rains have fallen recently. Each district will have part in this display, it is said, and all manner of products and live stock will be there for the hundreds to witness.

Another exhibit which will attract much attention is the manufacturer's exhibit, where all of the manufacturing plants in Floyd county will be represented. This is said to expect to exceed anything of the kind ever before attempted in this section.

Other features at the fair will be the exhibits of the Rome demonstration work under the direction of Miss Jessie Burton; corn, cotton and pigs' clubs and other various attractions.

In addition to this, there is scheduled to be a troop of the sixth cavalry from Fort Oglethorpe on the grounds, together with the sixth cavalry band, and besides music, United States soldiers will give exhibition drills, stunts, push ball, rescue races, tug-of-war and other athletic features. The Lindale band will also be a feature.

A day has been set aside for Homecoming Day," at which time a queen's parade will be staged, the selected queen will ride into the fair grounds in a beautifully decorated float surrounded by her attendants, all equally beautifully gowned. Many of the civic clubs will have floats in this big parade, which is to end with a Mardi Gras celebration that evening.

Several shows have been billed to provide the entertainment for the week, in addition to a gathering of old-time fiddlers, this event being staged under the supervision of the American Legion.

Miss Thirty-odd (wrathfully)—"That Jack Gayboy is too mean to live." Her friend—"What's he done now?" Miss Thirty-odd—"He proposed to me last night, and when I blushed and stammered that it was so sudden, the wretch burst out laughing and I was obliged to haughtily reject his proposal to save my self-respect."—Los Angeles Times.

State Missions Will Be Subject Of Prayer Week

All over this southland a week of prayer will be observed by the members of the Baptist denominations for our state missions, September 21-28. To us this means special week of prayer for our beloved Georgia; and such a reason of real sincere prayer will lift our hearts and minds to our God for the kingdom interest for our own people. We need this prayer, this hour, this day and this year more than ever before in the history of the world. A desperate need of the help of our God, and it will come if we ask in faith. At Ponce de Leon Avenue Baptist church on Monday, September 22, the family of the W. M. U. will pray among themselves. A special prayer service will be held at 3:30 in the Sunday school annex.

Tuesday, September 23, our beloved pastor and head of our church family, Dr. M. Ashby Jones, will lead us to higher and nobler activities for our Georgia. This service will also be held at 3:30 in same place.

Wednesday the children of our household, the Sunbeams, will present themselves unto God in a most beautiful and unique service, under the direction of Mrs. Harvey Hill and Mrs. Snow. To each of these services the public is most cordially invited.

On Monday in addition to the week of prayer service, the W. M. U. will be examined on the mission study from "Strength to Strength." The quiz to be conducted by Mrs. P. F. Duggan. Each of the ten circles to be responsible for one chapter, the book having been studied by the entire W. M. U. of the church.

MRS. LILLIAN MOORE,
Mission Director.

Dr. Fred Manget Brings Message

Dr. Fred Manget, medical missionary of Houchow, China, spoke before the missionary society of Trinity Methodist church on Monday afternoon.

He brought a wonderful message about the life and work among the Chinese women—of the Christian schools for them in all lines of work, and how they are responding to the teachings.

The Chinese women reign supreme in their home—training the children, attending to the family worship, making pilgrimages to monasteries, all are her work. She is intelligent, devout, domestic and with high moral standards; and the Christian Chinese girl, with her normal feet, athletic sports and schooling, compares favorably with girls of any nationality.

There are more congregations than churches or preachers, and the people are eager to learn. All denominations are working together for a universal church.

Some beautiful robes and pieces of fine handiwork were exhibited.

Dr. Belk conducted the devotional service and Mrs. Edwards, accompanied by Mrs. John Manget, sang a sacred solo.

Mrs. Garnett Quillian and her circle served tea during a pleasant social hour.

Social Service Institute Will Start Here October 2

Feeling the need of information along definite lines in doing social service work, the women of the different churches in the city have made plans for a Social Service institute to be held during the months of October and November at First Methodist church on Peachtree street and Porter place.

The first of these lectures will be given on Thursday, October 2, at 10 o'clock in the Sunday school room and the speaker of the morning will be Miss Ada Woolfolk, of the Family Welfare board.

On each Thursday morning lectures will be given on the different lines of social service work by the following speakers: Dr. Joseph Boudouin, Dr. J. P. Kennedy, Dr. Bernard M. Carey, J. B. Williams, Burr Blackburn; Miss Lottie Ramspeck, Miss Anna Dickinson, Miss Rhoda Kauffman and Mrs. L. S. Arrington.

This is a wonderful opportunity which the women have open to them to learn from the leaders of the different social service activities of the state and city the most intelligent and helpful way in which to better the conditions around us.

There will be no charges for the lectures, no examination held, or papers to be written at the close of the course.

A cordial invitation is extended to all women in all of the churches who are interested in the uplift and upbuilding of humanity, to attend these lectures.

Won't you church women and club women take advantage of this wonderful opportunity and give these speakers, who have so generously given of their time, a large and appreciative audience?

MRS. FRANK ATLEE,
Secretary North Atlanta District,
Woman's Missionary Society.

FRESHMEN AT TECH GET SMALLER CAPS

Freshmen at Georgia Tech this year are wearing a cap of gold ornamented with a white "F" as is usual, but much smaller than that usually desired by the first-year men. The cap is made so small that it fits a small head equally as well as a large one and, according to sophomore designers, is more in keeping with the dignity of a freshman. The freshman class is one of the largest in the history of the institution.

New Insurance Policy Against Appendicitis

Insurance Company Will Pay Operation

Due to the great prevalence of appendicitis, a London insurance company offers to insure people against the cost of the removal of the appendix. This takes away any anxiety regarding the expense of an appendicitis operation, but, of course, does not remove the worry.

A Treacherous Disease.

Appendicitis attacks at any moment even persons seemingly in good health. Usually, however, it is preceded by stomach or bowel trouble. When there is an uneasy feeling in the abdomen, appendicitis can be guarded against in the same way in which one guards against the spread of throat infection—because appendicitis is an infection in the intestines spreading to the appendix. In case of sore throat, further trouble may often be prevented by using an antiseptic wash or gargle to fight the germs and a laxative to carry off the poisons from the body. Just so, one can fight the intestinal germs and guard against appendicitis—but instead of an antiseptic for the throat, an INTESTINAL antiseptic is needed.

Intestinal Antiseptic.

There is now offered to the public a liquid preparation having the DOUBLE action of an intestinal antiseptic and a complete system cleanser. This preparation, known as Adlerika, acts as follows:

It tends to eliminate or destroy harmful germs and colon bacilli in the intestinal canal, thus guarding against appendicitis and other diseases having their start here.

It cleans out BOTH upper and lower bowel and removes foul matter which poisoned the system for months. It brings out all gases, thus immediately relieving pressure on the heart. It is astonishing the great amount of poisonous matter Adlerika draws from the intestinal canal—matter you never thought was in your system. Try it right after a natural movement and notice how much MORE foul matter it brings out which was poisoning you. In slight disorders, such as occasional constipation, sour stomach, gas on the stomach or sick headache, one spoonful Adlerika ALWAYS brings relief. A longer treatment, however, is necessary in cases of obstinate constipation and long standing stomach trouble, preferably under direction of your physician.

Reports from Physicians.

"I have found nothing in my 50 years' practice to excel Adlerika." (Signed) Dr. James Weaver.

"I congratulate you on the good effect from Adlerika since I prescribed it." (Signed) Dr. L. Langlois.

"I use Adlerika in all bowel cases. Some require only one dose." (Signed) Dr. F. M. P. (Name withheld by request).

"Adlerika is the best in my entire 37 years' experience." (Signed) Dr. G. Eggers.

"Cannot describe awful IMPURITIES eliminated from my system (by Adlerika). Feel better than for 20 years." (Signed) J. E. Puckett.

Adlerika is a big surprise to people who have used only ordinary bowel and stomach medicines, because of its quick, pleasant and COMPLETE action. It is sold by leading druggists everywhere.

Send for free book about appendicitis. Adlerika Co., Dept. AB, St. Paul, Minn.—(adv.)

If Your Clothes Could Talk

Ben Johnson said: "My clothes are as much a part of me as my hair."

Of course, clothes don't make the man or woman, but we do have an affection for them. They are a part of us. At least they certainly deserve fair treatment.

If your clothes could talk, the first thing they would say would be a request to always be sent to the Laundry.

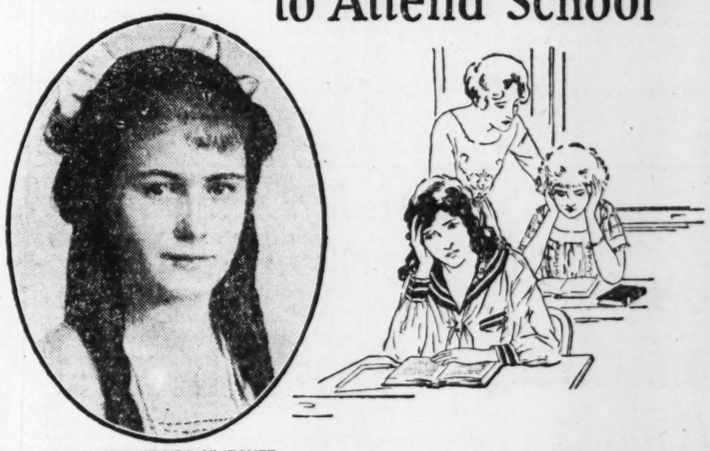

There they are treated with the utmost care, washed in a big revolving wheel that turns them over as gently as a leaf in the breeze, and then rinsed in crystal clear water time and time again.

And all the while they are in a big spotless, sunshiny plant, in the most ideal surroundings.

Contrast this with the average washwoman's hut, the dirty tubs, the wearing washboard, the destructive wringer—then decide to treat your clothes fairly. Send your family wash to your Laundry.

These Girls too Ill to Attend School

DAUGHTER OF MRS. VLIEGHER
NORTH BALTIMORE, OHIO

AT no age does a young girl need greater care than from the time she reaches the age of twelve years until womanhood is established. Many a woman has suffered years of misery because as a girl she has been allowed to sit around with wet feet, lift heavy articles, overwork and overstudy. In all such cases Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound should be given as it is especially adapted for such conditions. It is a root and herb medicine, contains nothing harmful and may be taken in perfect safety by any school girl.

This Mother's Letter and Daughter's Photograph of Interest to Every American Mother

NORTH BALTIMORE, OHIO.—"My fourteen-year-old daughter took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound every month for weakness. One of her classmates in school who had the same trouble told her about it. She said: 'My mother makes me take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.' So that day she came home and told me and we got some the next day. She took three bottles of it and never has to stay home from school now from sickness. She is strong and well. I am sure if any mother writes to me I will be glad to answer her letter."—Mrs. VLIEGHER, Box 61, North Baltimore, Ohio.

Another Mother Tells What It Did for Her Daughter

DANDRIDGE, TENN.—"My daughter was not able to go to school for almost a year because of pains in her side and other troubles girls often have. I was just studying one day what I could give her that would help her when I thought of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and decided I would get it for her. Since taking it she has gained to normal weight and goes to school all the time."—Mrs. GEORGE HINCHEY, Dandridge, Tenn.

THE CONSTITUTION'S REAL ESTATE REVIEW

CONDUCTED IN THE INTEREST OF THE DEVELOPMENT OF ATLANTA AND THE SOUTH

Seen From the Auction Block

BY THE AUCTIONEER

MAY RECOVERING FROM ILLNESS.

W. O. May, popular real estate man, with offices in the Austell building, is recovering from a spell of illness that detained him from his desk several days last week.

EVANS BELIEVES IN A. B. C. SYSTEM.

R. S. Evans, salesmanager of the J. M. Harrison Used Car company, which recently leased new quarters at at 125 to 131 Ivy street, making the largest used-car show rooms in the south, made a high commendatory statement last week regarding the efficiency of The Constitution classified advertisements system, which he termed a "regular go-getter" for business. "Results from ads placed in The Constitution by our house," said Mr. Harrison, "have been highly satisfactory in all instances. The system is attractive and it gets results because people look at the pages."

OLD LANDMARK DISAPPEARS.

The Atlanta Wrecking company is razing the walls of one of the last remaining landmarks of Atlanta at the corner of Garnett and Forsyth streets, where they are tearing away the old Lutheran church that has stood on that point for more than a half century.

This edifice bears the distinction of being perhaps the only church in Atlanta in which the German language has been used in sermons delivered to communicants.

This is one of many romantic landmarks that have been torn away to make room for modern business structures by the Atlanta Wrecking company.

HURT BUILDING PRESENTS HANDSOME APPEARANCE.

The wide expanse of the mammoth Hurt building presented on its north side gives not only an impression of the immense size of the great commercial structure but its handsome appearance has been greatly emphasized by the completion of the new portion of the building adjoining the original unit. Aside from being the largest commercial building in the south, the Hurt building is looked upon as one of the most beautifully designed of the American office structures. In other words, it is regarded as a real architectural triumph.

THANKSGIVING DINNER AT HENRY GRADY.

With construction going forward at a most rapid rate, and with every promise that the splendid Henry Grady hotel will be completed on schedule time, Cecil R. Cannon, of the Henry Grady Hotel company, is making preparations to open the magnificent hostelry on Thanksgiving day, serving to the guests, who will doubtless overflow the beautiful building on its opening day, a real Thanksgiving feast.

While nothing definite has yet been announced for the occasion, it is understood that many elaborate features will be included in the program for the formal opening of this, the largest and finest commercial hotel in the south.

CONSTITUTION ADS HAVE WIDE PULLING POWER.

Illustrative of the extended circulation of The Atlanta Constitution and the power to get results for its clients, the following story was related by H. J. Cranshaw, real estate agent, with offices in the Rhodes building: "Here is a letter," said Mr. Cranshaw, "from a man who saw an ad in the classified columns of The Constitution, which he read in Detroit, Mich. The ad described a small farm for sale near Atlanta. He is a native of Georgia and his love for home was touched by the advertisement to the extent that he sat down and wrote me asking that I give him prices and further particulars with reference to the parcel. Negotiations are now in progress which indicate very strongly that another native son will respond to the call of Atlanta and its leading daily and return to his old home.

"This is one of several instances in which Constitution classified ads have reached people hundreds of miles from Atlanta, bringing them into touch with people of this city," said Mr. Cranshaw.

LARRAMORE PLEASED WITH MARKET.

"Real estate activity in Atlanta continues," said J. S. Larramore, salesmanager for the L. W. Rogers Realty company, "and it looks as though we will have good business conditions in realty circles right up to cold weather."

Homes in Atlanta are in demand, according to Mr. Larramore, and vacant building lots are also selling well. Atlanta is a growing city and homes and home sites will be active as long as new people come to the city.

Mr. Larramore is looked upon as one of the outstanding figures in Atlanta real estate circles.

ST. SIMON'S AGENCY OPENED BY BUSH.

The R. M. Bush Realty company, with offices at 215 Healey building, announces the opening of an exclusive agency for a tract of 1,000 acres of attractive land on the new highway connecting St. Simon's Island with the mainland. A plan has been worked out, it was stated, to subdivide this tracts into building lots for sale.

THE MORRIS BROTHERS HANG UP FINE RECORD.

Selling five homes in one day is the splendid feat reported from the office of F. P. and George J. Morris, well known real estate men in the Candler building. This is one of the best sales records reported in Atlanta real estate for many months, and Messrs. Morris are receiving congratulations from their business associates.

MADDOX GIVES CONSTITUTION CREDIT FOR BIG SALES.

With four parcels of realty sold by him within the past month Paul Maddox, of the Dolvin Realty company, gives much credit for his success to the pulling power of the classified advertisements in the Atlanta Constitution. Every sale made, as recited above, it was stated, was initiated by ads printed in The Constitution, interested parties making inquiries after reading the classified ads placed in this newspaper by Mr. Maddox.

AMICK AND MADDOX VISIT CHATTANOOGA.

Paul Maddox and J. C. Amick, both of Dolvin Realty company, have returned from a visit to Chattanooga, where they went last week on business for their firm.

HARBIN LEADS THOMPSON SALES STAFF.

Mercer J. Harbin, of the John J. Thompson company, is reported as leading the sales staff of that popular real estate agency for September. Mr. Thompson is said to offer standing rewards for the top salesman each month, and this device is said to have stimulated much rivalry and increased business among the members of the staff.

OFFICE SPACE IN HURT BUILDING TAKEN RAPIDLY.

Notwithstanding the fact that the mammoth Hurt building is not quite complete, statements are made that office space in the structure is being rapidly absorbed by business and professional tenants. Some of the old leases have not expired, according to the announcement, but notwithstanding this fact tenants are taking no chances of being left out of the big building, and are therefore, negotiating in many instances for releases on their quarters.

The force required to carry on the tenant changes in the new buildings is practically as large as that required for the construction of the new wings, now almost complete, it was declared. Some idea of the great demand for space in the Hurt building may be gained by the statement that out of the large total of offices on the 18 floors of the building, only a small number are left untaken. In fact, it was said that only one entire floor, with a limited number of smaller suites on another floor, remains to be rented out of the 18 stories. The particular demand for space in the Hurt building, according to authorities, is for large areas, some tenants asking for as much as 22,000 square feet of space.

La Follette Ticket Will Be Discussed In Macon Meeting

A convention of voters of Georgia who are interested in the La Follette-Wheeler national ticket, has been called for September 29, in Macon, according to announcement made Saturday by C. W. McClure, chairman for Georgia.

The statement in full, follows:

To the thinking and progressive people of Georgia:

A state convention of the supporters of the La Follette-Wheeler ticket will be held at the Dempsey hotel in Macon at 10 o'clock, Monday, September 29.

Every person interested in wrenching from the Wall street interests, their control of the national government and returning it to the people to whom this government was constituted, is invited to be present and will be given a voice in the meeting.

A state executive committee will be named and electors selected to go on the ticket that will be voted at the election in November.

All southern states will get out tickets carrying the names of electors.

APARTMENTS BRING 10% MORE RENT THAN IN 1923

"We have heard and read so much recently about over-production of building and the assured lowering of rentals on apartments that it might be interesting to know of my own experience regarding this situation. Although I am not an owner of any large apartment houses at the present time, I have several small ones and found myself on September 1 with nine vacancies. I rented these nine apartments between the 1st and 5th of September at an increase of from 5 to 10 per cent over last year's rentals and all have leases ranging from two to three years."—Seward W. Ehrich.

KEY WILL MAKE TALK TO FIFTH WARD CLUB

Matters of importance which were deferred from the last meeting will be taken up at a called meeting of the Fifth Ward Civic club, which will be held at 7:30 o'clock Monday night in the auditorium of the English avenue school.

Following the business session of the club, former Mayor Key, candidate for mayor of Atlanta, will make a campaign speech on invitation of the club. His speech is scheduled for 8:30 o'clock.

Big Lease Made By Satterwhite Furniture Co.

New home of the Satterwhite Furniture Co., leased through the Calhoun agency. The new store is on Whitehall street.

Announcement has been made by the Calhoun company, well known real estate concern of Atlanta, that a long-term lease has been transacted by that firm with the Satterwhite Furniture company for the two-story brick business house at Peachtree street. The building, which is new and modern, is said to form a well-nigh ideal business structure, and the popular furniture house will take possession of its new quarters at once, according to the announcement.

The Satterwhite Furniture company, one of the largest houses of its kind in Atlanta, is under the management of J. L. Satterwhite, who is regarded as an outstanding figure in the local furniture world. The company has been in the Atlanta field for several years, handling a complete line of furniture and household furnishings. It is one of the largest retail furniture establishments, and is said to have a wide and increasing clientele.

J. L. Satterwhite, manager of the above company, has been in the Atlanta field for almost a quarter of a century, having served with several of the well known retail furniture houses of this city. He has many friends and business associates who wish him and his establishment much success in the new location.

Increased Cost Per Room Shown by Building Records

According to the records of the tenement house department, the cost of the tenement house erected in 1920 was $885.01 per room. In 1921 the records show the cost to the $1,371.22 per room, while in 1922 it was $1,193.90, and $1,182.93 in 1923. In 1915 the cost per room was only $511.61. The cost of labor, materials and land now renders the cost of construction of housing 150 per cent higher than in pre-war times. To this must be added from 10 per cent to 150 per cent increase in cost of maintenance charges, repairs, janitor service, fuel, etc., and last but not least an increase in the amount of taxes due to the necessarily increased assessed value of the property. This applies to some extent even to those benefited by the tax exemption law, since that law does not exempt the larger.

It is quite evident, therefore, that the cost of construction being considerably higher than in 1920, no material decrease is rents in the new buildings was likely to occur, and hence little direct benefit could accrue to the tenement dweller of moderate means.

In this connection it must be remembered that capital put into building enterprises expects a fair and reasonable return. Builders do not build for philanthropic purposes. Building is simply a business enterprise from which a profit is expected to be derived. Consequently, because of the increased cost of labor, materials and land, it would appear that the era of low rentals for improved housing facilities in new buildings erected at present and to be erected is past.

Gain of 27,000 Auto Tags Show In State in 1924

An increase of 27,000 license tags for automobiles this year over 1923 has been announced by officials of the secretary of state's office. Approximately 200,000 licenses have been issued to automobile owners in the state; 175,000 to passenger car owners and 24,000 to owners of motor trucks.

One hundred and seventy-three thousand seven hundred ninety-four tags were issued by the state department during the year 1923, which with the above statistics, show an increase of 26,794 licenses issued to date. Improved crop conditions and better roads are believed to be responsible for the great increase. In addition licenses have been issued to 1,011 motorcyclists.

Cartersville Names Atlanta Professor Public School Head

Cartersville, Ga., September 20.—(Special.)—Prof. W. E. Dendy, at present teacher of English at Tech High, Atlanta, has been elected superintendent of the Cartersville public schools, and will succeed Prof. H. B. Robertson, who goes to West Palm Beach, Fla., as Boy Scout executive for the Florida East Coast council.

The change will become effective October 1. Professor Dendy has had years of experience as an educator, and before going with Tech High was registrar at Oglethorpe university, and before that superintendent of the public schools at Monroe.

Superintendent Robertson has been in Cartersville almost two years, and has proven himself to be an efficient school administrator. He is universally popular, and upon the organization of the Rotary club here, last May, was elected as its first president.

Nation's Welfare Now Depends on Active Building

"That the industrial welfare of the country for the next few months is dependent on the continued activity of the construction industry, is the opinion of R. H. Wait, district engineer of the Portland Cement association, whose statement shows that activity in construction bears a close relation to general industrial conditions. He said:

"We are now approaching the season in which custom has long decreed that the builders must lay down their tools and wait for spring before resuming them. That habit of seasonal employment in the building industry is archaic, it savors of the past and it should be relegated to the junk shop with all other cumbersome and outworn methods. If building slows up this year there is bound to be slackening in many other lines of industry, resulting in unemployment and decrease of purchasing power of employees.

Seasonal Building.

"It is the custom and not climate that is mainly responsible for seasonal idleness in the construction industry. Contrary to public belief, bad weather is not the principal causes of variations in employment from month to month. Surveys compiled by this organization show that cities in the south and on the Pacific coast are affected about the same as those on the Canadian border.

"It is an accepted fact by authorities on building subjects that building operations in the most rigorous climate can be carried on through cold weather.

"To keep the concrete from freezing before it hardens the finished work should be covered with tarpaulin or stored to retain the heating. Under such conditions concrete building operations have been carried on as effectively in cold weather as at any other time, and when building operations are conducted through the winter the building is ready for occupancy or for sale in the spring, when the demand for property is at its peak."

Miss Persons Named As "Miss Monroe" For Fashion Revue

Forsyth, Ga., September 20.—(Special.)—Miss Anna Persons, of Forsyth, attractive young daughter of R. F. Persons, has been selected as "Miss Monroe" to represent Monroe county at the annual fall fashion show to be held in Griffin, September 25, and which is being sponsored by the Griffin Federation of Clubs and nine other clubs in this and adjoining counties.

The Griffin Federation of Clubs has extended an invitation to the people of all the counties represented to attend the fashion show and help make the occasion a great inter-county gathering.

MULE HITS FARMER

Thomas Planter's Nose Broken Clipping Animal.

Thomasville, Ga., September 20.—(Special.)—Hugh J. Moore, one of Thomas county's best-known farmers, is suffering from the result of an unusual and most painful accident. While clipping a mule at his home a few miles from Thomasville the animal suddenly jerked its head, striking Mr. Moore between the eyes and breaking every bone in his nose. One side of his face was also badly lacerated.

He was rushed at once to a local hospital, where medical aid was rendered. Doctors say that he will not suffer serious consequences.

Rents Increased 86 Per Ct. in U. S. In 10-Year Period

(New York Tribune-Herald.)

Rents for wage earners' houses have increased over 6 per cent in the period between July, 1923, and July, 1924, according to the National Industrial Conference board of New York. The board finds, after a survey of the rental situation in 178 cities that, compared with the rentals of ten years ago, rents are 86 per cent higher. This applies to accommodations of four and five unheated rooms with bath, such as are usually occupied by wage earners, and does not relate to more expensive houses and apartments.

Despite the fact that the increases in rents for the country as a whole in July, 1924, was 86 per cent higher than in 1914, the investigation by the board shows that there were sixty-nine cities which had a greater average increase than this, and five cities where rents were 150 per cent higher than in 1914. The cities in this latter group are Binghamton, N. Y.; Johnstown, Pa.; Los Angeles, Cal.; Richmond, Ind., and Scranton, Pa. Forty-four cities reported average rents as having increased 100 per cent, but less than 150 per cent since 1914.

Eastern Rentals Increased.

For the four months' period, March to July, 1924, no change in rents was reported from 93 cities. There were decreases in 51 cities and increases in 33. The greatest number of increases in average rents were reported from the eastern section of the country and the greatest number of decreases from the middle western section. In the east there were 19 cities where rents increased. The largest increase noted in this section was between 11 per cent and 20 per cent in Johnstown, Pa. Eighteen other cities reported increases of 10 per cent. Among these were Baltimore, Boston, Bridgeport, Buffalo, New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburg, Providence and Yonkers. Decreases averaging 10 per cent or less were reported from 10 cities.

In the middle west 23 cities reported decreases in rents and 8 other large cities an increase of 10 per cent or less. From the south the reports of changes in rents indicated that there were average decreases between March and July, 1924, in 11 cities, while 4 reported increases. In the far west only 2 cities reported increases in rent. They were San Francisco and Seattle, where rents increased 10 per cent or less.

Interesting Comparisons.

The survey made by the board brings out some interesting comparisons of rent increases in relations to the sizes of cities.

There were eight cities of 500,000 population or over where average rents increased not more than 10 per cent, two with 10 per cent or less decrease and two which reported no change. In cities where the population was between 250,000 and 500,000 six had an average decrease in rent of 10 per cent or less; only two had increased 10 per cent or less, and in five there was no change.

In the cities with a population of 100,000 to 250,000 there was one with an increase of 11 per cent to 20 per cent; four with increases of 10 per cent or less; twelve with decreases of 10 per cent or less and twenty-six where no change in average rents was indicated. In the cities with a population of 50,000 to 100,000 thirteen increases of 10 per cent or less were reported; two increases of 11 per cent to 20 per cent, but decreases in this group were 10 per cent or less in nineteen cities; 100 per cent to 20 per cent in two cities, while in thirty-two cities no change had taken place.

Among the forty-two cities with a population of less than 50,000 from which reports were received by the board, more than one-half recorded no change in rents during the period from March to July, 1924.

The service given in this apartment bears the Turman-Brown stamp, and the building is said to have proven popular with apartment patrons.

Atlanta Sends Delegation To Annual Safety Congress

"The Safety congress, to be held in Louisville, Kentucky, next week, will be the largest gathering of advocates of accident prevention in the history of the world," declared Shepard Bryan, president of the Atlanta Safety council, Saturday.

"Hotel accommodations have been at a premium for more than three weeks and some of the 4,000 delegates will be forced to live on special trains which will take them to Louisville."

Speakers of national and international prominence will relate the progress the past year in this work during the session.

Herbert Hoover and James J. Davis, cabinet member; Richard F. Grant, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States; Mrs. John Sherman, president general of the Federation of Womens Clubs; C. F. Kettering, vice president General Motors Research corporation; Dr. F. L. Hoffman, Babson institute; Dr. C. E. A. Winslow, of Yale, and Dr. Augustus Dyer, of Vanderbilt university, are on the programs of the many general and sectional meetings.

Every one of the 60 community safety councils have entered the contest for the silver cup offered to the council which sends the largest number of representatives to Louisville, Pittsburg, Milwaukee, Kansas City, St. Louis and Springfield, Mass., will make the trip in special trains.

To Study Accidents.

Every phase of accident prevention will be discussed, beginning with the general meeting Monday morning at which Richard Grant will take as his subject "Cooperation in Safety Among the Trade and Other Associations," and concluding Friday with a joint session of the education and public safety sections to plan the extension of demonstration, junior safety councils, cooperation of parent-teacher associations, etc.

The session on Wednesday will be devoted to city planning with Harold Bartholomew, city planning manager of St. Louis; Morris Knowles, chairman of the city planning committee, of Pittsburg, and others on the program.

The joint responsibility of pedestrians and motorists will be discussed by Ernest N. Smith, general manager of the American Automobile association.

The many industrial sections will have their own meetings every day during the congress and representatives of the automotive, cement, chemical, construction, ice, metals and mining, meat packing, textile and other industries will discuss their own problems. The taxicab association will hold a meeting in conjunction with the congress.

Atlanta Sends Group.

Atlanta will send an euthusiastic delegation determined to convince the world that Atlanta is the only city in which to hold the 1925 Safety congress. A delegation representing the railroads of the southeast will accompany the safety council representatives and every effort will be made to secure the next quarterly meeting of the safety section, American Railway association, for Atlanta. The party of Atlantans leave Sunday night via Louisville and Nashville road.

Among Atlantans who will go to Louisville are Judge Shepard Bryan, president; L. Helvin, A. L. Norris, A. L. Belle Isle, L. K. Starr, F. E. Shumate, L. H. Beck, S. R. Durham, W. J. Wroe, John E. Smith, F. H. Paxon, Coke Davis, Fred Gould, George Ripley, Jr., F. R. Yarbrough, H. W. Colsen, George S. Foster and John Russell.

It is expected also that representatives from Columbus, Macon, Albany, Bainbridge, Augusta and other Georgia cities will join the Atlanta delegation here.

METHODIST MINISTERS' CONVENTION FOR CITY

Five hundred ministers of the North Georgia conference of the Methodist Episcopal chrch south, will arrive in the city Tuesday and Wednesday, November 18 and 19, to hold their annual convention. Meetings will be held at Wesley Memorial church beginning Wednesday and continuing through to the following Monday. Bishop U. B. W. Darlington, of West Virginia, will preside.

Arrangements have been made with the management of the new Henry Grady hotel to accommodate the ministers while in the city. The convention has met in Atlanta every year for the past six years with the exception of one year when it met at St. John's church in Augusta.

OGLETHORPE REPORTS 149 NEW STUDENTS

Approximately 149 new students will begin scholastic work at Oglethorpe university Wednesday, it was announced Saturday by Frank Anderson, registrar of the institution.

Atlanta youths compose about 135 of the new students. Thirty-five coeds are listed in the new student body and it is predicted that this number will be increased largely by Wednesday, when the college opens.

Dr. Thornwell Jacobs, president of Oglethorpe, will deliver the annual opening address at 10 o'clock Saturday morning to members of the Freshman class. Immediately after the address a pep meeting of all students will be held in preparation for the Oglethorpe-Tech football game to be played at Grant field Saturday afternoon.

BELGIAN ARTIST TO APPEAR HERE IN ORGAN RECITAL

Charles M. Courboin, famous Belgian-American organist, formerly organist of Antwerp Cathedral, will give a recital here during the coming season, it was learned Saturday.

Monsieur Courboin will start on his first transcontinental recital tour in October, during which he will play over 80 recitals and travel nearly 20,000 miles.

At Dayton, Ohio, early in October, M. Courboin will play a special recital in honor of visiting notables to the International aviation meet at Wilbur Wright, field, at which time the eminent organist, himself an enthusiastic aviator, expects to take part in flying events.

The xact date of the recital to be given in Atlanta has not yet been set, but it is probable that it will be early in January and that it will be given on the great city organ at the auditorium.

Federal Officers Not To Investigate 'Liquor Records'

Complaints of several members of city council that unsigned statements, purporting to give "liquor records" of every candidate for city office in next Wednesday's primary, are being circulated, will not be investigated by postal inspectors, it was stated Saturday by Joe P. Johnson, in charge of the Atlanta district of postal inspectors.

Copies of the circular have been shown to inspectors in his offices, Mr. Johnson said, but he added that it was not in violation of the postal law, and that his department was not interested.

TAX RATE IS HIKED 25 CENTS IN DEKALB

Decatur, Ga., September 20.—(Special.)—An increase of 25 cents in the tax rate for DeKalb county has been made by County Commissioner L. T. Y. Nash, the rate for 1924 being $1.75 a $100, not including the state tax of 50 cents ont he $100.

The rate would have been in the neighborhood of $1.35, according to Mr. Nash, had it not been for the fact that the county has been held liable for 7 per cent interest on outstanding warrants amounting to $342,717.56, and dating back as far as 1913. The payment of this interest has made necessary the levying of four additional mills.

Property values in the county are listed at $23,393,950 for 1924, an increase of $260,000 over the 1923 returns.

An additional tax of one mill, which was requested by the DeKalb county school board to be used in general educational work, was refused by Mr. Nash on the grounds that he had no authority for making such a levy.

"The state has held that a county can levy a tax in addition to the state tax for purposes of carrying on agricultural and home economic work," Mr. Nash stated, "but as the county wanted the money for general educational purposes. I had no authority for making the levy."

SAVANNAH BOY, 10, KILLED WHEN AUTO HITS HIS BICYCLE

Savannah, Ga., September 20.—(Special.)—Lawrence Hanesworth, 10, messenger boy for a local drug store, was killed late last night in the residential parc of the city while on his bicycle making a delivery. He was hit by an automobile driven by E. W. Williams, who is under $1,000 bond. The lad is a son of a widow.

Official Figures Show Building Gains for South

Building records for the month just closed, as issued by the S. W. Straus Company, covering 320 cities of the United States, indicate an upward wave of construction in all parts of the country, with "unusual activity in the planning of new construction in the southern states."

Progress in the process of stabilization was emphasized by a gain of 3 per cent over August, 1923, and 5 per cent over July this year. In view of the fact that the month of August usually shows a decline from July the gain this year over the preceding month is particularly noteworthy and reveals a pertinent bearing on the building situation.

The total this August in the 320 cities and towns reporting permits issued and plans filed, according to S. W. Straus & Company's survey, was $269,925,579, as against $262,890,458 in August, 1923, and $255,932,397 in July this year.

Big Southern Gains.

Although the south continued to show unusual activity in the planning of new construction, with a gain of 43 per cent over August, 1923, and 15 per cent over this July, every region of the country showed an increase over July this year. The east gained 3 per cent over both August and July, and while the Pacific west was the only region to show a loss from August last year it had a gain of 16 per cent over this July. Reports from eighty-seven eastern cities show totals for August, 1924, of $110,648,364, compared with $107,626,745 in August, 1923, and $107,213,368 in July, 1924. In 105 central cities the totals were $88,401,456 for August, 1924, $88,309,456 in August, 1923, and $87,365,959 in July, 1924. In 53 southern cities the totals were $28,765,176 in August, 1924, compared with $20,794,781 in August, 1923, and $25,924,102 in July, 1923. In 75 western cities the totals were 041,110,601 for August, 1924, $46,160,076 in August, 1923, and $35,429,268 in July, 1924.

In the 25 leading cities selected on a basis of volume of permits the increase over August, 1923, was in keeping with the general stabalizing trend in the country at large, the total being $173,204,314, against $173,185,515, but the increase in these same cities this August was about 16 per cent over August, 1922. New York City showed a loss of 33 per cent from August, 1923. Among the larger cities showing gains are Miami, 482 per cent; Philadelphia, 179 per cent; Boston, 162 per cent; New Orleans, 126 per cent; Kansas City, 98 per cent; Buffalo, 74 per cent Milwaukee, 44 per cent; Cleveland 20 per cent and Chicago, 9 per cent.

400 STUDENTS BEGIN 1924-25 BRENAU TERM

Gainesville, Ga., September 20.—(Special.)—Over 400 students from 28 states have registered at Brenau college for the 48th term. One student is from the District of Columbia and another is enrolled from Mexico.

Georgia leads with nearly 100 students, Alabama is next with 39, closely followed by Florida with 36, Mississippi with 35, North Carolina with 30 and Louisiana with 20 students.

Among the other states represented are South Carolina, Tennessee, Kentucky, Pennsylvania, Virginia, Minnesota, West Virginia, Texas, Indiana, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Maryland, New York, Ohio, Arizona, Missouri, Illinois, New Jersey, Michigan, Kansas, Wisconsin and Colorado.

The term opened this week with the beginning of class work and the first of the fall festivities. Dr. Pearce, president, anticipates one of the best sessions in the history of the institution.

Seven students are from Atlanta. They are Misses Laura Baker, Viola Bass, Sarah Bridge, Violet Brown, Evelyn Carmichael, Ethel Telford and Elsie White.

HALLOWEEN GIRL, GEORGIA BRED COW, SETS FINE RECORD

Sandersville, Ga., September 20.—(Special.)—Hallowe'en Girl, No. 108,413, a registered Guernsey cow, bred and owned by Dr. Wm. Rawlings at Fern Crest Guernsey Farm at this place, is making a record that few other cows have ever equalled. During the month of August, according to official figures made known today by W. H. Howell, in charge of the herd, this cow produced 100.5 pounds of butter from 1,497 pounds of milk.

Hallowe'en Girl is four years old, and since she will reach her highest production at the age of about eight years she gives promise of much higher production as she matures.

This is one of many fine cows making records at Fern Crest, and is proof conclusive that Georgia farmers can increase their income by raising better cows, experts say.

Old Atlanta Guard, En Route to Camp, Stops at Cartersville

Cartersville, Ga., September 20.—(Special.)—Headed by James A. McCord, governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta, whose guests they will be on their annual visit to his Murray county plantation, a large number of members of the old guard, of Atlanta, spent some time in Cartersville Friday morning.

The guard makes an annual pilgrimage to Mr. McCord's country place, near Crandell, spending three days in the mountains and enjoying the hospitality of the genial host.

Included in the party stopping here were Colonel William Lawson Peel, T. R. Bennett, J. A. McCrary, B. M. Hall, W. L. Hancock, George Wright, Lee Hagan, H. C. Beerman, Charles E. DuPree, W. E. Hancock, Woodloe Yancey, Dr Hugh M. Lokey, J. C. Gavins, Peter F. Clarke, Joseph McCord, Jr., Robert H. Walker and Governor McCord.

The party will return to Atlanta late Sunday evening, it is announced.

Williams Leads Revival.

Cartersville, Ga., September 20.—(Special.)—Rev. Felton Williams, of Toccoa, is here, conducting a series of meetings at the Sam Jones Memorial Methodist church. He is assisting the pastor, Rev. W. H. Clark, and much interest is being manifested in the progress of the revival, which will continue through September 28.

225,000 BALLOTS CAST IN PRIMARY

With more than 225,000 ballots cast in the democratic primary on September 10, the number of votes this year is 13,000 in excess of the total cast in the state-wide primary of 1922, it was shown Saturday when the state auditing department completed its compilation of the official returns made to the state executive committee.

G. E. Maddox, chairman of the democratic state executive committee, who was in Atlanta Saturday looking into the consolidation of the vote in the recent primary, said that plans practically are complete for the democratic state convention to be held at the city auditorium in Macon, Wednesday, October 8.

In connection with Mr. Maddox's visit here from his home in Rome, it was stated in political circles that there is a disposition to make Mr. Maddox permanent chairman of the state convention again this year, and continue him as chairman of the state executive committee.

ADDIE ADE'S ADVENTURES

The Minute-a-Day Serial

CHAPTER 13.—"Seems to me I've heard something about the spring bein' the time for a young man's or a young woman's fancy slightly turnin' to thoughts of love," remarked Dad, as he walked into the sitting room one evening.

Addie was looking out the window toward the west, where the sky was still bright with the colors of sunset. "Don't be silly," said Addie, laughing and blushing at the same time.

"Me silly?" asked Dad. "Why, you know all that spring means to an old fellow like me is that it's gettin' time to think about plantin' and plowin', and seeds and all those things. Let's see, now, what Darrow's store is offerin' in the way of clover seed and cow peas," he went on, picking up the paper from the table.

"Humph—Darrow hasn't got any ad at all in the seed column. Maybe he isn't carryin' those things this year."

"Jim was telling me last night," put in Addie, turning from the window for a moment, "that his dad had bought some seed from that other man—what's his name—Billings?—and—"

"Here we are!" exclaimed Dad, running his finger on down the column, "bulbs, clover seed, cow peas, grass seed and so on—A. J. Billings, South Fourth street—that's the man for me—I'll stop there tomorrow when I'm in town, eh, Addie?"

But Addie was looking out the window again and her thoughts were far away.

Piedmont Road Home

ON this beautiful boulevard, between Peachtree Road and Roswell Road, on elevated lot that lies perfect, 125x800, covered with trees and shrubbery, we are offering a beautiful home at a price considerably below the market. Has large living room, dining room, kitchen, screened-in sun porch, two bedrooms, sleeping porch and bath downstairs, and two bedrooms, sleeping porch and bath upstairs. The place is also improved with double garage and servant room in yard. The lot on which this place is located is without a doubt the most beautiful in Atlanta, and being close to school and car line is exceptionally desirable. This is one of those rare places that can't be described in an ad, but will have to be seen to be appreciated. For appointment call Mr. Fraser.

St. Simons Island Subdivision

BUY LOTS now while this island resort development is in its infancy and reap large profits in the future.

LOTS 175x200 feet. Price $600, $100 cash, balance $15 per month.

Read Carefully The Following

THESE lots are shaded with large and beautiful live oak trees covered with crimson moss, and are known as the St. Clare subdivision as laid out in accordance with plans of the late Edwin P. Ansley.

THIS PROPERTY adjoins Long Island, the most attractive ocean front development on the island. Every lot is high and dry—and a corner. One hundred acres are reserved for a golf course.

BOULEVARDS as shown in the above plat are already cut through and are guaranteed as outlined.

THERE are approximately 1,200 lots in the subdivision, but only 41 are being offered at this price, which is done to liquidate a mortgage now on the property, after which time the lots will be held at a price of from $2,000 to $5,000 each.

THIS property is restricted and is going to be handled as a high-class Island subdivision, concerning which the original developer, the late Mr. Edwin P. Ansley said, "I consider this my best development."

EVERYBODY knows about the wonderful highway just completed connecting the island with the mainland at Brunswick.

Now See
Morningside

IN a suburban residential section the trav- elways have everything to do with the character and tone of the section. When you swing into Morningside you leave everything ordinary behind you and enter a realm where Nature has lingered long and lovingly over her work.

ON either side of Morningside's handsomely paved boulevards grand old trees, gentle rises and charming ravines flash by the motorist in a most enchanting panorama—there is not a rod of ordinary landscape in Morningside.

MORNINGSIDE DRIVE, liberally set to elms and crepe myrtles by the Atlanta Woman's club, to honor the memory of Woodrow Wilson, swings invitingly from Ansley Park to Druid Hills — destined to become the South's most peerless drive and one of America's handful of world-known scenic boulevards.

ROCK SPRINGS ROAD, Lanier Boulevard, Cumberland Road and Sherwood Road all offer homesites of matchless attractiveness and each site possesses some feature of individuality which marks it apart from all other sites, and it is the remarkable variety exhibited by Morningside's woods and dales that lends an ever-new note of out-door charm to the entire subdivision.

ALL IMPROVEMENTS ARE INSTALLED

ALL paving, curbing, sidewalks, sewer, gas and water mains, telephone and electric light trunk lines—all these improvements are at the point of completion. MORNINGSIDE is ready to move into, and surpassingly beautiful to live in. A home in Morningside, whether palatial or plain and cosy, will be a source of lifelong contentment and prideful joy.

MAKE AN EARLY VISIT TO ATLANTA'S EDEN

WE recommend an immediate visit to Morningside while there is still a wide range of homesites to choose from. We will welcome your command to us to take you out for a bracing tour of inspection at any time convenient to you. Morningside is all within the corporation limits of Atlanta. Highland Ave. electric lines serve passengers residing near the property's eastern approach, and Cross Town Express traverses Ansley Park to Morningside's western section.

AS AN INVESTMENT

MONEY invested in Morningside property will show earnings during the next few years far in excess of any earnings that can be expected thru any other channel of investment. Come with us to look over this superb subdivision and you will understand why Morningside is a good breeding ground for dollars.

Rich's Autumn Fashion Events

$76,440,240 Corn Crop

The indispensable grain, CORN, can be successfully grown in every county of the state! It is one of our best money crops.

Historical reports going back as far as 1866 show that no year had a corn crop that brought as much money as this year, with the exception of the years 1917, '18 and '19—and they were remarkable peak years.

59,256,000 bushels of corn (fully a FOURTH MORE than last year) were grown in Georgia this year, which will bring $76,440,240!

All of which gives us more reason to anticipate and believe in Georgia's permanent prosperity.

Printed above is one of the series of articles written on Georgia, and published in anticipation of a coming Rich event of much importance to Atlanta and all Georgia.

Fashion Event No. 15—New Winter

Fur Trimmed Coats

Adorned with Rich Furs (3 Sketched)

$39.75

—Advanced fall and winter models, youthfully smart—very slim and very straight! Impressive big fur collars of nutria, squirrel, moufflon, marmot and viatka squirrel. Women of keen business judgment will instinctively know that this is an Autumn Fashion event they cannot afford to neglect. The coats are all new—just in the store a few days. Fashioned of granite block, downywool, bolivia, aronzoda and velvatone, each coat lined with long-wearing silks. Let every woman who enjoys wearing newest, smartest things first, make it a point to see these tomorrow. $39.75.

—RICH'S, THIRD FLOOR

Fashion Event No. 16—New!

Distinctive Frocks

With All the Important Fashion Lines!

$34

—Shown for the first time, tomorrow! New York's NEW styles in frocks of character and distinction — they are beauitful! $34—but only because of the Fashion Events—otherwise they would be selling for dollars more! Afternoon and street dresses, designed for women who like the ultra in style. Many are exclusive one-of-a-kind models. One hundred and fifteen altogether—but if you want one of the clever foreign copies (pictured above) or a tunic, fur trimmed, you'll have to come early. Flat crepes, satins, failles and charmeens. Don't miss them!

—RICH'S, THIRD FLOOR

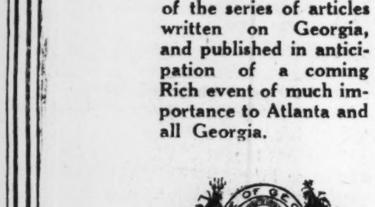

Bengaline, $2.95

Fashion's First Choice!

—And this is Bengaline as Fashion has approved it! A pronounced rib, and firm texture distinguish it. A very beautiful high lustre. It adapts itself wonderfully to the straightline dresses, suits and coats. 39 and 40-in. wide. $2.95, $4.90 and $6.95. All the wanted shades for autumn.

RICH'S, SECOND FLOOR

Blankets, $5.48

Wool-Mixed—and So Warm!

—Don't wait another day to store up blankets! You can't get too many for the cold days soon to come! These are good buys in mixed wool, 66x80 in. wide. Each weighs four pounds. Sateen bound. Four-inch block plaids in lavender, gold, rose, copen, tan and gray.

Cotton Comforts, $3.69

—They're warm, too! And the coverings you'll enjoy seeing in your bedroom. Covered with good quality silkaline and filled with cotton. Rose, pink, light blue, green. Neatly tacked.

—RICH'S, SECOND FLOOR

Underwear

New! Just Being Unpacked

—Loveliest of new silk underwear for women hardly out of its tissue wrappings! Gowns and teddies to match—all wonderfully made and finished. Lady Fair ribbon, rose bud and lace trimmed. Crepe-back satin fashions them. Teddies, $19.95. Gowns, $25 and $29.95.

—RICH'S, THIRD FLOOR

Teddies, $3.95

Lovely! Crepe de Chine

—Very exquisite teddies in crepe de chine, georgette and Pussy Willow taffeta. Daintily finished with hand embroidery and tucks and lace. Best of all, the teddies match gowns, equally attractively priced. Teddies, $3.95 to $9.95. Apricot, flesh, pale blue, orchid.

Dainty Silk Gowns to Match, $9.95 to $15.95

—RICH'S, THIRD FLOOR

Philippines, $1.59

Every Stitch Handmade!

— Tinted Philippines! Imagine! And such delicate, lovely colors, too. Apricot, orchid and flesh, besides white. Genuine Philippine hand embroidery and hand drawn work trimming. Eyelet and punch work embroidery on many. Sizes of gowns, 15, 16, 17, 18. Teddies, 36 to 42.

—RICH'S, THIRD FLOOR

Clever New

Knitted Suits

—This trim knitted costume is equally delightful for sports or street wear. In suit or dress it is sure to become the most practical and popular costume in the autumn wardrobe. All the new Fall shades—rust, green, tan, brown, navy, black and white and heather mixtures.

—The suit consists of skirt and jacquette or slipover blouse, trimmed with mohair collar.

—The Dress is straightline with roll collar and button trimmings.

Priced $15, $16.75, $19.75 to $35

—RICH'S, THIRD FLOOR

Miss Walker

To Be at Rich's

She's the Gossard demonstrator

—All week she'll be at Rich's to help YOU! Bring her your corset and brassiere problems. She will be glad to suggest what style corset, brassiere or corselette is best suited to your figure. Miss Walker is an expert.

—RICH'S, THIRD FLOOR

New Brocades

Velvets—Metal Cloths—Chiffons

—The Second Floor Daylight Silk Section is now showing the smartest Brocades for autumn afternoon frocks, dinner, and evening gowns and wraps. Brocaded velvet on chiffon and georgette. Brocaded metal cloth and metal de laine. And superb printed velvets—$5.95 to $35.

—RICH'S, SECOND FLOOR

Silk Hose, $1.11

Perfect—Full-Fashioned—14 Shades. A little heavier than chiffons. Quantity buying from a large Eastern mill is responsible for the low price. Lisle garter tops.

—RICH'S, STREET FLOOR

Shawls

Hand-Painted!—Heavy Silk

—The exotic coloring of these lovely shawls will fascinate the lover of beautiful silks. Heavy Crepe de Chine, richly hand-painted by Graves—in brightly hued flowers. Deep knotted silk fringed borders. Very fashionable for evening wear. Try them on—see how the folds of silk gracefully swathe the figure. $39.00 to $120.00.

—RICH'S, STREET FLOOR

Breakfast Set, 98c

Mrs. Bullouck To Be Entertained At Lovely Parties

Mrs. Edgar Bullock, of Columbus, Ga., who arrived last week to be the guest of Miss Elanor Gay at her home on Myrtle street, will be the recipient of many delightful social courtesies while here.

Mrs. Bullock will be pleasantly remembered as Miss Ida Brannon, of Talbotton, Ga., a frequent popular visito to Atlanta.

Miss Elanor Gay will entertain for her guest at a beautiful afternoon tea Tuesday.

On Wednesday Miss Sue Brown Sterne will compliment Mrs. Bullouck at a luncheon at her home on Westminster drive.

Miss Julia Memminger will be hostess at a bridge party on Saturday in honor of Mrs. Bullouck.

On Saturday, October 4, Miss Mary Reid will give a matinee party for Mrs. Bullouck.

A number of other parties are being planned for Mrs. Bullouck, the dates to be announced later.

Oliff—Youmans.

Savannah, Ga., September 20.—(Special.)—The marriage of Miss Annie Louise Oliff, daughter of Mrs. H. Oliff, of Savannah, to Claude McTeer Youmans was a social event of this evening, the ceremony being at Calvary Baptist temple.

Campfire Girls To Be Entertained By Mrs. Frank Mason

Mrs. Frank Mason, one of the board of directors of the Camp Fire Girls of Atlanta, will again open her summer home for the celebration of the birthday of the Atlanta Camp Fire Girls, and Saturday, September 25, all of the girls of the city are invited spend the day at Stone Mountain. Each year, the birthday pilgrimage is looked forward to and this year, with twice the number of girls, and many new leaders, the event is expected to bring joy, not only to the girls themselves, but to the members of the board and the council who are backing the movement.

The plans are as follows: Each guardian is to be responsible for the transportation of her own group—help will be given from headquarters only upon request. All of the leaders and girls are requested to be at the foot off the mountain at 12 o'clock. Each girl is to bring her own lunch, and the lunch is to include "weenies" and rolls for the roast. Miss Mary Lou Wilson has planned an unusual council fire, and Miss Helen Bagley is ready for the recreational part of the program.

All girls who will be ready for ranks may take them at this time, report must be made at headquarters before Saturday.

Attractive Member of Younger Set

Photograph by Stephenson.

Miss Jim Smith, attractive addition to Atlanta's younger set who, while residing with her sister, Mrs. J. Howard Kerlin, 7 Peachtree way, is now visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. O. E. Smith, of Warthen, Ga. Miss Smith will return to the city October 1.

Peachtree Hills Club Plans Barbecue.

One of the most enjoyable meetings of the recently organized Woman's club, of Peachtree Hills, was held Thursday at the home of Mrs. R. M. Freeman, Mrs. Flournoy presiding.

Plans for a barbecue to be given on September 26 were discussed and perfected, the proceeds to be used in beautifying the park by planting crepe myrtle and making other improvements.

After the business meeting a pleasant social hour followed, featured by a cake contest. The successful contestants, who were presented with beautifully-embossed cakes, were Mrs. Rose Wrigley, Mrs. McCoy and Miss Marie Henderson.

Oliver-Freeman Engagement Holds Social Interest

Cordial interest throughout several states centers today in the announcement of the engagement of Miss Virginia Bourke Oliver, daughter of Colonel and Mrs. Hugh Lawson Oliver, of Georgetown, S. C., to Loomin Oscar Freeman, Jr., of Atlanta, Ga., the wedding to take place on October 15 in St. John's Episcopal church, City Point, Va.

This marriage will join together two young people whose attractive personalities have won for them a very large circle of admiring and devoted friends, and two families long identified with the social, educational, religious and political life of South Carolina and Georgia.

Miss Oliver, the bride-elect, was a student at Cox college, where she became popular with teachers and the entire student body, taking a prominent part in all college activities.

On the paternal side she is descended from the Oliver and Hugh Lawson families of Georgia and the Landgrave Thomas Smith family of South Carolina, and on the maternal side from the Bourke and Jeannerette families of the Palmetto State. Her father has for many years been an influential factor in the business, religious and political affairs of his community and adopted state, contributing no little to her progress and well-being. From her mother, formerly Miss Etta White Bourke, of Georgetown, and today one of Carolina's loveliest and most cultured matrons, Miss Oliver inherits her extraordinary beauty and winsome charm of manner. Her great-uncle, Admiral James Harrison Oliver, retired, formerly chief of the naval intelligence bureau at Washington, and first governor of the Virgin Islands, resides on the James river at Shirley, Virginia.

Mr. Freeman is an honor graduate of the Georgia Military academy and the University of Georgia, where he was a popular member of the Sigma Nu fraternity. Since graduation he has been connected with the engineering department of the Southeastern Underwriters' Association of Atlanta, at present being their North Carolina engineer, with headquarters in Raleigh. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. L. O. Freeman, of College Park, Ga., widely known in educational and religious circles throughout the state. He is a nephew of Judge B. T. Castellow, of Cuthbert, Ga., solicitor general of the Pataula circuit, and one of the state's ablest lawyers. He is descended on the paternal side from the Freemans and VanLandinghams, and on his mother's side, who was formerly Miss Emmie Castellow, of Alabama, from the Castellows and Gays, of that state.

Among the attendants at the wedding will be Miss Mary Freeman, sister of the groom; Miss Agnes Shands, of Washington, D. C.; Miss Julia Pyatt, of Georgetown, S. C.; Hugh Lawson Oliver, Jr., brother of the bride; Allen M. Woodall, of Columbus; Saffold Minter, of Richmond, Va., and R. C. Potts, Beverley Randolph Carter and William Mosher, of City Point, Va.

Immediately following the ceremony the bride and groom will leave for a motor trip east. On their return they will make their home in Raleigh, N. C.

Gay and Congenial Parties Enjoyed at Ft. McPherson

Miss Juliet Haskel entertained at an elaborate salmagundi party at her home in Fort Pherson on Thursday evening when she complimented Miss Marie Williams, who leaves on Sunday morning, to make her home in Fort Barancas, Florida. Each table had a different game, and the entire evening was given over to the different contests.

Those invited were, besides the honor guest, Miss Giradeau, the guest of Major and Mrs. M. B. Clapham; Miss Isabelle Mathews, Miss Elizabeth Humphrey, Miss Gertrude Rowell, Miss Nell Kendrick, Miss Jean Kendrick, Miss Georgia Papper, Miss Marion Darrah, Miss Elizabeth Gaines, and Lieut. William Saffarrans, Lieut. George Bruner, Lieut. George C. Carrington, Lieut. W. L. Isaacs, Lieut. Percy Hunt, Lieut. L. V. H Durfee, Lieut. Jesse Trawick, Lieut. C. E. Henry, Capt. Bird Little and Moore Pearson, Troy McWhorter, Ralph King, Midshipman J. H. Carrigotn and Lieutenant and Mrs. George Bruner.

Mrs. Monte J. Hickok was hostess at a beautiful bridge-tea at her quarters in Fort McPherson on Thursday afternoon when she complimented Mrs. Theodore M. Chase.

The rooms were artistically decorated with quantities of crimson zinnias and ferns, the tea table was covered with handsome imported cloth of handmade Pinia elaborately embroidered. The centerpiece was a lovely silver basket filled with the crimson flowers, and silver candlesticks held unshaded crimson candles.

Mrs. Hickok received her guests wearing a gown of blue velvet trimmed with fur, and Mrs. Chase wore cut velvet gown over a blue charmeuse slip.

Those invited were Mrs. David C. Shanks, Mrs. William Malloy, of Long Beach, Cal.; Mrs. William H. Johnston, Mrs. Robert Peck, Mrs. Charles F. Humphrey, Jr., Mrs. D. W. Ryther, Mrs. William H. Paterson, Mrs. Melville S. Jarvis, Mrs. W. A. Webber, Mrs. A. E. Williams, Mrs. Edwards, Mrs. Lawrence O. Mathews, Mrs. E. W. Leard, Mrs. S. W. Hulse, Mrs Grover C. Graham, Mrs. Otto Trunk, Mrs. John C. Woodland, Mrs. Richard Cox, Mrs. George E. Bruner, Mrs. Kelton Lyon Papper, Mrs. Gilbert Marshall, Mrs. Charles C. Quigley, Miss Elida N. Raffensperger, Mrs. Mary Priest, Mrs. Martin C. Shallenberger. Major Chase has reported for duty with the R. O. T. C. unit at the Technological school.

Mrs. George E. Bruner entertained at an informal tea Wednesday, honoring her cousin, Miss Ruth Lyon Clinton, of Tulsa, Okla., who spent a few days in Fort McPherson en route to Randolph-Macon College for Women, in Lynchburg, Va. The guests included all the army debutantes of the Fourth corps area.

Miss Isabelle Mathews entertained at her home on Wednesday afternoon at a delightful bridge-tea, honoring Miss Marie Williams, who leaves soon to make her home in Fort Barancas, Florida, and also Miss Ruth Lyon Clinton, of Tulsa, Okla. Twelve guests were invited to meet these charming girls.

Col. Edgar T. Conley, Mrs. Conley and Mary Conley have arrived at Fort McPherson to take station. Thomas Conley accompanied his parents, but has returned to Alexandria, Va., to attend the Episcopal High school, where he has only one more year to finish, after which he will be among those army boys who will attend West Point. Colonel Conley will be the adjutant for the Fourth corps area under Maj. Gen. David C. Shanks.

Midshipman J. H. Carrington is the guest of his brother, Lieut. George C. Carrington, at the bachelors' mess.

Captain and Mrs. Donovan F. Yeuell and their two boys left this week for Columbus, Ga., where Captain Youell will attend the military school at Fort Benning. They were also accompanied by Captain Yeuell's mother, Mrs. Donovan F. Youel, Sr.

Miss Hallie Coffin left this week to spend two weeks in New York visiting relatives and friends. Later she will return by way of Charleston, S. C., and will be accompanied by her mother.

Brig. Gen. William H. Johnston spent a few days in Wilmington, N. C., where he went to make the address at the national defense day exercises. He was accompanied by Mrs. Johnston.

Lieut. Col. W. H. Patterson spent the day in Greenville, S. C., where he delivered the address of the day at the exercises on national defense day.

Mrs. William J. Kendirck, accompanied by Miss Nell Kendrick, motored to Columbus, Ga., where they spent one day with Major and Mrs. Robert S. Lytle.

Lieutenant and Mrs. Boyd Inman left Fort McPherson, Ga., to motor through Michigan for the next two months.

An Important Announcement

Tomorrow we open our doors to the Atlanta public — it is not our formal opening (that will be announced later), but we will be prepared to show Furniture and House Furnishings tomorrow and all the week.

This store was designed and stocked with the sole idea in view of completely meeting the demands of housekeepers of every walk of life—more than 23 years' close study of the retail furniture business in Atlanta has taught us exactly what the people want in the way of Furniture and House Furnishings. There's furniture of medium grade, also of the better and more expensive grades. Among the better grades will be the Grand Rapids products.

We are out of the high-rent district; also out of the auto-parking district; you may park in front of our store on either of the Peachtrees—with no time limit.

Every article in this store is brand new—no old or shopworn stuff to pick over. Low prices and easy terms will prevail throughout the store.

Come and stroll thru the store and see what we have assembled for you —you won't have to buy a thing unless you want to.

TRIO OF BEAUTIFUL BRIDES

The group includes three beautiful young brides whose marriages were interesting events of the past week. Upper left is Mrs. Herman Heyman, formerly Miss Josephine Joel, whose marriage took place Tuesday evening at 8:30 o'clock, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Franklin Joel, on West Fourteenth street. Upper right is Mrs. Clyde Lanier King., Jr., who before her marriage Wednesday evening was Miss Frances Poole. The wedding of Miss Poole and Mr. King was a brilliant social event, taking place at 9 o'clock in the evening at "Ovidia," the handsome home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Ovid Poole, on Cascade road. The lower photograph is Mrs. Thomas Gibbs Fowler, formerly Miss Anita Louise Hill. The marriage of Miss Hill and Dr. Fowler was a lovely event of Friday evening, taking place at the home of the bride in Inman Park. Photographs of Mrs. Heyman and Mrs. King were made by McCrary & Company, and of Mrs. Fowler by Winn.

Magnificent Calhoun Estate Rivals Beauty of Italian Palace

BY BESSIE S. STAFFORD.

Tryguevesson, the maginificent estate of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Calhoun, on Pace's Ferry road, takes its name from the Welsh ancestors on the paternal side of its lovely chatelaine. This Italian villa is conceded to be the architectural triumph of Neil Reid, prominent Atlantan, of Hentz, Reid & Adler. Photographs of the charming exteriors and interiors appear in today's gravure pictorial section of The Constitution.

The imposing gates, topped with stone urns of artistic design, guarding the entrance on Pace's Ferry road, introduce the residential style of architecture, which follows the Baroque period, and is one of the finest examples of the 17th century, recalling the splendor of so many of Italy's famous estates.

A broad, winding roadway, over a quarter of a mile in length, leads through picturesquely serene and rolling grounds, which are as yet in their infancy of beauty. The exterior of the villa is plaster, painted after the motif of all Italian houses, bringing out tones of rose and buff, with the window shutters painted in blue-green. Its variegated roof is tiled in rose, brown, tan and green. The house stands on a commanding elevation, with a terrace and garden facade on the south, while every window on the north looks out upon fountains at play and a mass of color provided by the contrast in the two formal gardens. All of the floors are of terrazzo, waxed to a very high finish.

The stately entrance hall has its walls treated in lemon yellow, and the limestone stairway is offset by hand-carved rail and wrought-iron balustrade. Curtains of white taffetas hang at the window on the landing. Above the long walnut sofa, leather upholstered, hangs a wonderful grisaille, a painting in monochrome by Allyn Cox, son of the celebrated Kenyon Cox, done at his studio in Florence. This mythological painting brings out deep tones of green rather than the conventional gray. Great stone floor vases, holding pine tops, gathered from the forests at the rear of the estate, which touches Howard Mill road, flank either side of the sofa, and hanging above two marble-topped consoles are exquisite antique mirrors, framed in blue and gold. The light comes from a very old star-shaped lantern which is suspended from the center of the hall.

Italian Dignity and Elegance.

Italian dignity and elegance are suggested in the library. A paneled modern ceiling decorated in mulberry, gold and brown, is unusually handsome and effective. Casement doors leading out on the terrace, which in turn lead down by circular stairway to the parterre are hung with heavy gold satin brocatelle curtains over one hundred and fifty years old, which were imported from Italy. Entrance to this room from the hall is gained through beautiful old Florentine doors hand-painted in landscape and floral scenes and set in frames of black and gold, having been selected in Europe by Mr. Reid for the library of Mr. and Mrs. Calhoun's home. Against the buff-colored walls are finely wrought bronze and crystal sidelights, placed between the casement doors and on either side of the carved stone mantle, while over the mantle hangs a pretty old Italian portrait of a lady, gowned in mulberry velvet. Two stately high-backed chairs, gracing either side of the hearth, are upholstered in gold satin brocaded in mulberry, taking their tones from those in the portrait. Showing to wonderful advantage on the east and west walls of this room are fine old seascape and landscape paintings, hung between walnut bookcases. A massive chest and table of walnut blend harmoniously with a davenport and chairs upholstered in solid green velour. Every lamp shade is of putty-colored gauze outlined in mulberry.

Marble steps lead from the hallway into the drawing room, which presents the influence and charm of the north Italian school. This delightful interior is furnished with unusual splendor adapted from the Venetian. Exquisite paintings by Cox, representing entrancing scenes of Venice, are set into the shell pink plastered walls. Two gorgeous Venetian glass chandeliers, blown in delicate flower-like petals, and dainty fragile chairs, correspond with ornaments on the pair of graceful marble-topped gold console tables underneath the paintings. Assembled in the room are small and deep-cushioned chairs upholstered with yellow brocade, introducing a stripe and floral design, together with a rare table or two of real seventeenth century origin. Above the tables are priceless mirrors framed in gold, and rusted iron andirons adorn the hearth. White taffeta curtains loop back from the windows, giving characteristic atmosphere.

The informality of the western summer porch gives it a decidedly "to be lived in" feeling. Attractive red, green and orange reed furniture, wrought-iron table, wooden lamp bases, topped with parchment shades bordered in green, correspond with the many comfortable linen pillows, striped with narrow rows of red, black, orange and green linen. The floor is brick-tiled, and is covered with a black and putty tiled rug. A brilliant arrangement of flowers from the gardens of Tryggvesson, produces a colorful effect, and casement doors open out in the north and south terraces.

Spacious Dining Room.

The spacious dining room to the right of the great hall is elegant in its simplicity. Dark rich brocaded draperies in tones of crimson hang at the casement windows. Practically all of the walnut furniture used is antique, save the octagonal table, with its superbly carved claw feet, designed by the architects. A buffet and serving table, choice pieces of Italian workmanship, are perfect as to their design and finish, and an admirable decorative note is obtained in the bas relief of Michael Angelo, Italy's famed sculptor, painter and architect. Completely filling the space between the buffet and ceiling is a very valuable oil paintings. In the center of the well-balanced room hangs a large blown glass chandelier, and red leather chairs set in hand-carved walnut frames are starred in gilt.

To the right is the breakfast room, the woodwork painted in red, and its walls papered in exotic birds and trees. Lacquered furniture carries out the pleasing color of Italian red.

The boudoirs at Tryggvesson, on the second floor, are distinctly characteristic of the members of this interesting family. Each one achieves an air of restfulness and cheerfulness emphasized in the furnishings and draperies. A modern laundry is equipped on the third floor and a playroom is attractively furnished, where the three pretty little girls of the household, Misses Louise, Katherine and Nancy Calhoun, can entertain their friends.

Altogether, the house is done in a most refined manner, expressing the artistic taste and hospitality of the hostess of Tryggvesson.

Social Gaieties At the Biltmore.

A continuous round of gay social activities at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel will make this popular place of entertainment the gathering-place of fashionable Atlanta society during the fall and winter season. Details of the plans of the Biltmore management for the enjoyment of social leaders will be divulged in a formal announcement one week hence, it is stated.

A series of weekly dinner-dances, at which the Debutantes' club will be the center of attraction; a supplementary series of special gala events on holiday occasions, such as Hallowe'en, Thanksgiving and Christmas; and a continuation of the highly-popular semi-weekly tea-dances and the weekly Sunday concert-dinner will be included in the Biltmore social schedule, it is intimated.

Details of the preparations which are now under way will be disclosed in ample time for reservations to be made for the first of the weekly dinner-dances, which will no doubt be inaugurated early in October and given on Wednesday night.

If the dinner-dances are given on Wednesday night, it is understood the mid-week tea-dances will be given on Tuesday afternoons instead of Wednesday, as heretofore. Meanwhile, however, the present Wednesday-Saturday schedule is being followed.

This week's program at the Biltmore will be begun Sunday evening with the weekly concert-dinner. Enrico Leide has arranged the following program for his augmented orchestra: Overture, La Dame Blanche, Boieldieu; Ballet, Faust, Gounod; The Lost Chord, Sullivan; A Day in Venice, Nevin; Melody in F, Rubinstein; Waltz, Strauss; Selections, Tales of Hoffman, Offenbach; Overture, Pique Dame, Suppe; Sextette from Lucia di Lammermoor, Donizetti; March, Sousa.

Brides and Debutantes In Whirl of Events

Debs, sub-debs and brides occupy all society's attention these glorious early autumn days and around them swirls a succession of formal and informal events, breath-taking in their rapid succession, heart-catching when they take away from Atlanta so beloved and charming a young girl as Miss Gladys Byrd to live in "little old Manhattan." Parties are scheduled to follow each other so closely that debs and sub-debs will feel almost as if in mid-season and the wedding of Miss Byrd will form the apex of society's calendar for the early fall.

Many Lovely Parties To Honor Miss Perry.

Miss Maggie Perry, the lovely daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Perry, whose marriage to Phillip A. Ammons will be an interesting social event of Wednesday, October 1, has been and will continue to be honored at many charming social affairs.

Miss Mary Jane McGinnis complimented Miss Perry at a bridge party at her home on Ponce de Leon avenue Friday afternoon.

The house was artistically decorated with lovely early fall flowers.

Following the bridge game, tea was served, at which a group of intimate friends joined the bridge players.

Monday afternoon Miss Anne Foote will honor Miss Perry at a bridge party, followed by tea, at the Atlanta Woman's club.

Her guests will include the wedding party and a few intimate friends.

Miss Perry will be complimented at bridge on Tuesday afternoon by Miss Louise Dent, at her home on Myrtle street, those invited to be only the members of the wedding party.

Mrs. F. D. Burge will honor Miss Perry on Wednesday afternoon at her home on West Peachtree with a kitchen shower.

On Wednesday evening Mr. and Mrs. Ernest W. Ramspeck will entertain the Perry-Ammons wedding party at a buffet supper at their home on Ridge Crest road.

Miss Martha Boykin will compliment Miss Perry at a bridge party Thursday afternoon at her home on Ponce de Leon avenue. Her guests will number 16.

Miss Perry will be honor guest at a bridge party Friday afternoon given by Miss Julia McCullough at her home on Ponce de Leon avenue, which will include the members of the wedding party and a few intimate friends.

Saturday night Miss Elizabeth Peeples will entertain the members of the Perry-Ammons wedding party at her home on West Fifteenth street.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Perry will entertain the wedding party, following the rehearsal at a buffet supper at their home on Eighth street, Tuesday evening, September 30.

Miss Eleanor Spence To Wed Mr. Le Grand.

The announcement today of the engagement of Miss Eleanor Frances Spence, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Cleland Spence, and Rufus Little Le Grand, holds special interest to numberless friends throughout this state and North Carolina.

The wedding is to take place Wednesday, November 19, Rev. W. W. Memminger officiating.

Miss Spence, who is a young girl possessed of unusual personal charm, is the daughter of George Cleland Spence and the late Mrs. Annie Stewart Rogers Spence. She is a granddaughter of John Taylor Rogers, of Atlanta, on her maternal side.

Mr. Spence is a prominent attorney, and on her paternal side Miss Spence is a granddaughter of Mrs. Nathaniel Cleland, of this city.

Miss Spence graduated from Washington seminary and has spent most of her time since then visiting her aunt, Mrs. William McKoy Bellamy, in Wilmington, N. C.

Miss Spence is a sister of Mary Ann Spence and George C. Spence, Jr; a niece of Mr. and Mrs. William Stewart Witham, and a cousin of Dr. and Mrs. R. T. Dorsey and Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Witham, Jr.

Mr. Le Grand is a son of Mr. and Mrs. George Spencer Le Grand, of Wilmington, N. C. Mrs. Le Grand was formerly Miss Johnnie Quince, of Wilmington. Mr. Le Grand was auditor of the Atlantic Coast Line railway before retiring two years ago.

Mr. Le Grand attended school at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, N. C., and was a member of the S. A. E. fraternity. He is now in business with the Wilmington Savings and Trust company.

He is a prominent young man in business as well as social circles and is a member of the Cape Fear Country club, Carolina Yacht club, L'Ariosa German club, Inter Se Cotilion club and the Riverside club.

Dr. and Mrs. Wilmer To Be Honored.

The St. Luke's Guild and Woman's auxiliary will entertain the members of St. Luke's Episcopal church at a large reception on September 19, from 7 to 9 in the evening, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Marshall Slaton, on Peachtree road.

Dr. and Mrs. Cary B. Wilmer will be the honor guests of the occasion. Dr. Wilmer has served as rector of the St. Luke for a number of years, but recently accepted a professorship at the University of Sewanee, at Sewanee, Tenn. Dr. and Mrs. Wilmer will leave at an early date for their new home.

Dinner-Dance At Driving Club.

The regular week-end dinner-dance at the Piedmont Driving club assembled a number of members and their friends.

Warner's Seven Aces rendered an appropriate musical program and dinner was served at 8 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Marion Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Slicer, and Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Witham formed a congenial party dining together.

Mr. and Mrs. Hunter Muse and Mr. Whitaker, of New York, dined together.

Others having reservations included Richard Courts, John Grant, Jr., and Jackson Dick.

Byrd-Shield Wedding Plans.

The marriage of Miss Gladys Evelyn Byrd and Lansing Shield, of New York, will be of interest to a wide circle of friends, and will take place Wednesday evening at 6:30 o'clock at the Ponce de Leon Avenue Baptist church. The ceremony will be performed by Dr. M. Ashby Jones, in the presence of a small group of friends and relatives. On account of illness in Mr. Shield's immediate family no invitations have been issued.

Miss Josephine Williford, a debutante of last winter, who was presented to society in the national capital by her aunt, Mrs. Pembroke Thoms, will act as maid of honor. The best man will be Frederick Hull Shield, Jr., of New York, brother of the groom to be.

Little Miss Helen Artley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Allan Artley, will act as flower girl, and the ushers will include Henry Lyon, uncle of the bride-elect; Esmonde Brady, Eugene Haynes and Howard Sawtell.

Charles P. Byrd will give his daughter in marriage. Preceding the ceremony a program of music will be rendered by the organist, J. C. Beckman.

The church ceremony will be followed by a wedding supper, given by Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Byrd at the Piedmont Driving club, at which immediate relatives and a few out-of-town guests will be entertained.

Mr. and Mrs. DeGive Will Give Dinner.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry L. de Give will entertain at dinner Thursday evening, September 25, in compliment to their niece, Miss Edna Mason Horine, whose marriage to Morgan Van Valkenburg will be an interesting event of early October.

Many Entertained At Tea-Dance.

Miss Verdery Rosenbusch was hostess in compliment to Miss Edna Mason Horine and Morgan Van Valkenburg at the Biltmore tea-dance Saturday afternoon. The guests included Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Horine, Captain and Mrs. George French, Mr. and Mrs. George Rosenbusch, Miss Margaret Vaughan, Miss Henrietta Mikell, Mrs. O. A. Eiserhardt, Donald McIver, Charles Boynton, O. J. Southwell and George Gelie.

Debutantes To Be Honored.

Miss Pauline de Give will entertain at a dinner-dance at the Piedmont Driving club Saturday evening, September 27, the occasion to compliment two charming debutantes, Miss Callie Orme and Miss Harriett Sheddon, and invited to meet them will be a group of the social contingent among the unmarried set.

Miss Ramsey Honors Miss Mary Harrison.

Miss Ruth Ramsey was hostess at a miscellaneous shower Saturday afternoon at her home on Greenwood avenue in honor of Miss Mary Harrison, whose marriage to Barry Gillespie will be an interesting event of September 24.

Early fall flowers were used as decorations throughout the living room and dining room.

After several attractive contests, little Miss Mildred Hatcher, dressed as a miniature bride, presented the gifts.

The guests included thirty friends of the bride-elect.

Miss Ramsey was assisted in entertaining by Mrs. V. F. Hatcher.

"FOLLOWING SLEEP AROUND THE WORLD"

How folks sleep

"In Quaint Japan" is one of an interesting series of stories about sleep in different parts of the world. Some of the other subjects are, "In Flowery Persia," "In Icy Eskimoland," "In Snow-clad Russia," "In Drowsy China." They will appear regularly in this newspaper on Sundays. Watch for them.

In quaint Japan—

In contrast to the exquisite little garden of chrysanthemums, iris, and azaleas that surround it, milady's boudoir is simplicity itself. For there are no beds—only the bright colored mats and wadded coverlets, and the little wooden pillow which does not disturb the complicated feminine coiffure. And when Madam has arisen, and breakfast is served, the same cleanly mats that serve for her bedstead serve for seats, with perhaps a cushion added. And always it is the same—from Emperor's Palace to little tradesmen's cottages.

* * * * *

For the placid, gentle days of the Japanese, this form of sleep supplies sufficient rest. But think, in modern America, of facing a strenuous day after a night's sleep on the floor.

Science has taught us the value of sound, restful, refreshing sleep as the source of energy and health.

At your favorite furniture store you can buy all of the essentials of restful sleep—Blue Ribbon Beds, Mattresses, and Springs.

Blue Ribbon Beds of Steel in a score of exquisite designs in natural wood finishes and Ivory and white, Blue Ribbon Springs built with the resilient, restful Blue Ribbon coils, and Blue Ribbon Mattresses made with layer upon layer of fleecy white cotton. Use the three together. They are perfectly balanced units that make sleep more restful.

Mrs. Rice Presides At Fall Opening of Daughters of 1812

Georgia society, U. S. Daughters of 1812, held its first fall meeting Friday afternoon, September 19, at 3:30 o'clock at the Atlanta Woman's club. Mrs. Lucius W. McConnell was the hostess. She was assisted in receiving the guests before the formal meeting by Mrs. Willis M. Timmons, Mrs. Hughes Roberts and Mrs. Gordon Mitchell. The spacious rooms where the members assembled were decorated with baskets and vases of lovely fall garden flowers.

The state president, Mrs. Charles F. Rice, presided. The meeting opened with the singing of "America," followed by repeating in unison the American creed. The reports of the registrar and treasurer showed new members being welcomed and the society in a splendid financial condition. The loyalty of each member toward the ideals and aspirations of our state and national societies is shown by the growth of membership in Georgia.

The program for the afternoon was opened by a talk by Mrs. Christian Clarke on the "Battle of Plattsburg." In her paper she spoke of the battle of Plattsburg, fought from September 6 to 11, 1814, also of the centennial that was celebrated in 1914 at Plattsburg on Lake Champlain, commemorating this event. The chapter recited in unison the preamble of the constitution.

After a few introductory remarks by the state president regarding the constitution, Mrs. Rice presented Mrs. Brownell, who read a masterly article by Harry F. Atwood, president of the American Bar association, on "The Meaning of Constitution Week."

Mrs. Christian Clarke presented to the chapter a picture of the one battle fought during the war of 1812 in Virginia at Craney Island, where Major James Faulkner and a few men, with seven cannon, repulsed the British in their attempt to reach Norfolk, June 22, 1813.

Dr. Loveridge To Give Lecture Sunday.

Dr. Blanche Grosbec Loveridge will be heard in a lecture on "What All the World's A-Seeking," at the Biltmore hotel Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

"All of us, high and low, rich and poor, weak and strong, are engaged in a life conquest," states Dr. Loveridge, "and when once our goal is recognized and understood all daily complexities arising in home life or in business activities become daily opportunities for the larger and more effective realization of God's greater abundance."

The public is invited to hear the lecture and the musical program immediately preceding, which will be conducted by Miss Goldie Pugh, violinist.

FOR A BETTER HOME
in Apartment, Cottage or Mansion

The "Better Atlanta Homes" Store Is Your Ally

To us there is something more in selling furniture than merely making sales. The real joy and pleasure comes in helping to make homes happier and more beautiful. You will always find us on the job when the question of better homes comes up. You will also find our stocks in readiness to supply the correct suites or occasional pieces that your home may require. The third thing you will find here is that our prices are lower than elsewhere and terms just a little more convenient. Whether you wish to furnish an apartment, cottage or mansion—don't forget Mather Brothers.

A Special Pricing of Windsors

Styles Include Fiddle-Back and Comb-Back

It has been said that no home furnishing is quite complete without something Colonial. It is equally true that nothing adds quite so much to the beauty of the furnishings as the faithful Windsor chair and rocker.

We have selected a number of lovely patterns, including the comb-back, the fiddle-back and plain Windsor, some with rush seats, whose values are up to $37.50, and offering

Your Choice $26.75 This Week

Living Room Suites par excellence

The living room speaks a silent greeting to your guests. How cordial or how impressive this greeting is depends on the correctness of the living room furnishings. It need not mean that great expense is involved. Moderately-priced, correctly selected suites and other furnishings are more desirable for the proper effect than the most elaborate and expensive if carelessly selected.

It is our pleasure to show you the things that will be best suited for your home, at the same time keeping within the price you set as nearly as possible. You will find in our selection suites as low as $99. Others to $650. And the range between you will find very comprehensive.

We invite you to use the very liberal terms of payment available, and no extra charge will be made for the privilege.

Note: Several new patterns have just arrived. Ask to see them.

The Dining Room Suite

The dining room! The seat of hospitality! The pride of every home-loving housewife!

Unless you see the beautiful suites in our display and note the extraordinarily low prices, you cannot appreciate what this store really means to you. We have been careful in selecting the patterns and careful in buying, all of which is to your advantage.

Period design suites are here in walnut combination, including ten pieces, as low as $149.50. Others in walnut and mahogany and the popular new French walnut finish.

We can furnish your dining room at less than you anticipate.

17 Beautiful Bedroom Suites Offered in a Special Sale

This is BEDROOM WEEK at Mather Brothers'! Seventeen suites will be offered this week at prices better than Sale Prices. Every suite is a quality suite, and the latest accepted style design. We want to reduce our stock in preparation for a coming event, and to do it quickly these suites must bear the loss in profit.

Y. W. C. A. Gymnastics To Begin Oct. 14; Directed by Miss Adams

The Young Women's Christian association requests that prospective members of the Y. W. C. A. gymnasium make note of the class schedule and different locations where classes will be conducted for the regular gymnastic work that begins October 14. Miss Lucy Marvin Adams will again be health director.

The fact that classes will meet in different locations is caused by the removal of administrative headquarters of the association from the fourth floor of the Peachtree arcade to their own property at 19-21 West Baker street, where the association plans the immediate construction of two permanent units to their two-story frame building, a modern gymnasium 50x70 feet, and a swimming pool 30x60 feet. The work of the two units will not be completed before January 1, 1925. Until that time the regular gymnasium schedule will be followed by classes being conducted, according to the following regulations:

Beginning October 6 registration for all classes will be made at 19-21 West Baker street. All work begins on October 14 except the leaders' training course, which will begin November 1, and the business girls' gymnasium class on October 23. A term is from October to May. All classes meet twice a week, except the leaders' class and the children's dancing classes.

Tuesday's schedule, October 14, from 10 to 11 o'clock, the Matrons' Swedish gymnastic work will meet regularly at Eggleston hall. The fee for the term is $10.

Reducing Classes.

The reducing class will meet from 11 to 12 o'clock on the same day. This class for seven months is given at a charge of $25 for the course in connection with which each reducer is given the diet list that she should follow, a booklet of exercise instructions and doctor's health examination. A guarantee is given by Miss Adams that if her instructions are followed a class member will reduce one and a half pounds a week.

From 3 to 3:45 on Tuesdays the children's beginners' dancing class will meet at Eggleston hall. From 4 to 5 the children's advanced dancing class will meet at Eggleston hall. The fee for each class for a term is $5.

On October 23 the business girls will have their first class meeting at the Jewish Alliance, 90 Capitol avenue. The fee is $7 for the term. This class will meet every Monday and Thursday evening. From 6 to 7 at the same place, the Y. W. C. A. basketball team will meet.

Friday's schedule for matrons and reducers is the same as Tuesday's.

Saturday, November 1, the class in athletic training for leaders will meet for the first time. The fee is $7 for a term. This course is planned for leaders of girls in groups or organizations. The course includes plays for indoors, for out of doors, quiet and active games, rules for hiking, camping, evening entertainments, talks by the leaders of Atlanta who are doing a work with girls; also talks on how to develop team work among girls.

Health Examination.

Dr. Theodore Toepel will again be health examining physician for all gymnasium classes, this service being free to all pupils. The examination will be made of the heart, lungs, blood pressure, height and weight. Dr. Toepel discusses with each class member her past physical history, and if her physical condition at the time of her examination is satisfactory she is given a card of admission to the gymnasium; if her condition is not satisfactory Dr. Toepel advises her to consult her physician. Each class member is advised by the examining physician as to the extent of physical exercise in which she may indulge.

It is stated by the Y. W. C. A. office that their Baker street lot is 50x168 feet, and the plan is to convert the frame building into offices, club rooms, etc., for the general work of administration. Upon the completion of the gymnasium and swimming pool all gymnastic work will be conducted at 19-21 West Baker street.

Don't Squeeze Blackheads--Dissolve Them

Squeezing and pinching out blackheads make the pores large and cause irritation. Blackheads are caused by accumulations of dust and dirt and secretions from the skin and there is only one safe and sure way and one that never fails to get rid of them—a simple way, too—that is to dissolve them. Just get from any drug store about two ounces of calonite powder—sprinkle a little on a hot, wet cloth—rub over the blackheads briskly for a few seconds—wash off and you'll be surprised to see that every blackhead has disappeared, and the skin will be left soft and the pores in their natural condition.—(adv.)

A Sure Way To End Dandruff

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.—(adv.)

I Am Clean

One reason for my beauty

By Edna Wallace Hopper

This is to the millions of women who wish to know how I have kept my youth and beauty after 35 years as a stage star. And how at a grandmother's age I manage to look like a girl.

Edna Wallace Hopper
Photo 1923

One thing is this: I never use soap and water on my face. Soap removes just the surface dirt, and that has nothing to do with the skin.

Lucie Lantelme, the famous Parisian beauty, told me how she kept her skin so absolutely clean. Then I went to her experts and secured the same method.

Since then the method has come into world-wide use, but only through beauty experts. The results were so marvelous that all of them charged high prices for the product. Some charged $3, some $5, for the formula, so only the few know how much it can do.

Now I am placing this formula at every woman's call. I have named it my Facial Youth. It contains no animal, no vegetable fats, so the skin cannot absorb it. It simply penetrates the pores to the depths, then departs. All the grime, all the dead skin and clogging matter comes out with it.

Wash your face in the best way you know, then apply my Facial Youth. You will be amazed at the extra grime and clogging matter which comes out with it.

This is the first step in fine complexions—an absolutely clean skin. This method is the only way to get it. Once you know what it means you will never go without it.

I have placed this formula with all druggists, all toilet counters. The price is 75c despite the fact that others charge ten times as much.

You need my Facial Youth. It is impossible, they tell me, to look your best without it. It is the only facial cleanser which really cleans.

Write me for my Beauty Book and I'll send with it something else to please you. Edna Wallace Hopper, 353 Lake Shore Drive, Chicago.

Young Matrons' Class Holds Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the Young Matrons' class of the Martha Brown Memorial church was held at the home of the class teacher, Mrs. Leo Sudderth, on Ormewood avenue, recently.

Mrs. Putnam, the class president, presided over the meeting, and after having the various reports read, including the reports of the secretary and treasurer, she made a splendid talk regarding the Mothers' union, of which the class recently became a member.

It was unanimously voted that the class arrange for a chicken supper to be served on the lawn of the church Thursday evening, the proceeds of which were to go into the class treasury.

After all business was attended to the remainder of the evening was given to the social chairman, who had planned a very interesting contest which was enjoyed by all present. The hostess served a very delicious salad course.

Missionary Society Held Meeting.

The Baptist Woman's Missionary society held an interesting meeting in the Sunday school rooms of the church Monday evening. In the absence of the president, Mrs. J. A. Crumbley presided, and the following officers were elected:

President, Mrs. D. H. McWilliams; first vice president, Mrs. F. D. Clare; second vice president, Miss Sara Snow; recording secretary, Mrs. Moncrief; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Clinkscales; treasurer, Mrs. S. C. Wooten; pianist, Mrs. L. L. Wells; Sunbeam leader, Mrs. M. O. Hemperley.

Mrs. Clinkscales, president W. C. T. U., made a short talk in behalf of that organization and enlisted several new members.

Mrs. L. L. Wells, industrial chairman, reported the purchase of a lot of china and cutlery for the church kitchen, and said a gas stove is to be installed soon.

Miss Hardy Gives Lovely Evening Party.

Miss Louise Hardy entertained on Monday evening in lovely compliment to Miss Mary Susie Allen, the guest of Miss Margaret Conley.

The color scheme of pink and green was artistically used in the decorations of the home.

The guests included Miss Mary Susie Allen, Miss Margaret Conley, Miss Louise Casey, Miss Margaret Couch, Miss Louella Leonard, Miss Agnes Conley, Miss Elsie Brooks, Miss Alice Hunter, Miss Thelma Doyle, Miss Bena Archer, Miss Emily Archer, Miss Edith Hardy, Miss Marian Anderson, Northen Boone, Clyde Casy, Lemar Brooks, Edgar Good, Paul Matthiessen, Ray Hendry, Thomas Allen, Curtis Enfield, Walter Braydon, Cecil Hester, Denvil Jones, Willard Smith, Marvin Thames, Parker Webb, and Mr. and Mrs. L. F. Hardy, Jr.

Officers Elected by New Antioch W. M. U.

Chattahoochee, Ga., September 17. The W. M. U. of New Antioch Baptist church held its regular meeting on September 11, Mrs. J. H. Knott, the president, presiding. The devotional was led by Mrs. A. C. Haynie.

It being the regular time for the election of officers, the following were elected: Mrs. A. C. Haynie, president; Mrs. Maud Graham, vice president; Mrs. H. E. Mainier, secretary; Mrs. T. A. Traylor, treasurer. Mrs. O. E. Bryant was elected as chairman of Circle No. 1, with Mrs. W. A. Flippin as co-chairman and Mrs. J. M. Sammons, secretary-treasurer; of Circle No. 2, Mrs. J. H. Dooley was elected chairman, Mrs. C. E. Pitts co-chairman, and Miss Miriam Duncan secretary-treasurer; of Circle No. 4, Mrs. A. C. Folds was elected chairman, Miss Zemma Redd co-chairman, and Mrs. W. R. Price, secretary-treasurer.

Ladies' Altar Society To Give Benefit.

The Ladies' Altar society will give a benefit bridge at the Atlanta Woman's club Thursday afternoon, September 25. Beautiful prizes will be given. Tickets are 50 cents, $2 a table.

The following ladies will sponsor the party and tickets can be secured by phoning Mrs. S. P. Stringfellow, Mrs. E. W. More, Mrs. J. P. Allen, Mrs P A Aicklen, Mrs P. T. Hanley, Mrs. H. F. Luckett, Miss Ann Londergan, Mrs. Mae McAlpin, Mrs. Alice O'Donnell, Mrs. W. D. Williamson and Mrs. Henry Kuhrt.

Unusual interest has been manifested in this party and a large number of tables is already reserved.

Woman's Missionary Society Meeting.

The Lutheran Woman's Missionary society held its regular monthly meeting in the attractive primary room of the Church of the Redeemer on Wednesday, September 17.

A brief business meeting and election of officers was held.

The elected officers for the coming year are:

Mrs. William Trautwein, president; Mrs. W. B. Correll, vice president; Mrs. E. A. Wright, recording secretary; Mrs. William Hughes, statistics secretary; Mrs. W. B. Ahlgren, treasurer.

At the conclusion of the business session a very interesting program was enjoyed and delightful refreshments were served.

Calgary, Alberta.—A carload of live poultry, the first to be shipped from Alberta to the United States market, left Viking recently for New York. The shipment, arranged for by a buyer from the United States, is in the nature of an experiment. It included 3,450 birds from the districts of Camrose, New Norway, Ryley and Viking, Alberta.

Grady Hospital Auxiliary Plans Expansion Program

Photograph by Thurston Hatcher.

Mrs. Frank C. Pogue, president of the Grady Hospital Auxiliary, who plans with the assistance of the members of the auxiliary an expansion program.

A home for convalescents, in which patients released from Grady hospital may stay under careful attention and pleasant surroundings until entirely strong and well, is planned as the first step in the expansion program of the Grady hospital auxiliary, of which Mrs. Frank Carter Pogue is president.

This home will supplement the work now being done by the auxiliary and will be an added touch to the care given patients at Grady. "Patients recovering, but not entirely well, often can be helped back to complete strength after they leave the hospital to make way for emergency cases," said Mrs. Pogue, Saturday, "and it is the desire of the auxiliary to provide a means for this."

Auxiliary Activities.

The Grady hospital auxiliary, which has been functioning for several years, has carried on many activities at the local hospital—furnishing flowers to cheer the patients, holding religious services on Sundays and preparing all the many bandages which are used there.

They are also endeavoring to secure the services of a social worker for the hospital to broaden the personal work now done by the members of the auxiliary themselves. The home for convalescents and the social worker are primary steps in an ambitious program of expansion.

Officers of the auxiliary are Mrs. Pogue, president; Mrs. J. E. Paullin, first vice president; Mrs. Spencer Atkinson, second vice president; Mrs. John Moody, third vice president; Mrs. C. C. Whitaker, secretary, and Mrs. B. R. Wofford, treasurer.

Monthly Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the auxiliary will be held in the reception room of the nurses' home at Grady hospital Tuesday morning, September 23, at 11 o'clock.

An interesting address will be delivered by Dr. Benjamin Steedly, who is in charge of the Steiner Cancer Clinic of Atlanta. The magnificent new building recently completed will be devoted to the treatment of cancer and allied diseases. Dr. Steedly is recognized as one of the most eminent cancer specialists in America and his address will be most interesting and instructive.

The Tuesday Flower committee, of which Miss Maurice Gruber is chairman, visits Grady every Tuesday and places flowers in the wards, which are enjoyed by the patients and nurses. Any one wishing may bring flowers to this meeting and they will be distributed among the patients.

Members of the auxiliary are urged to be present and a cordial invitation is extended to all persons interested in the Grady hospital, which should mean every person in Atlanta, to come to this meeting and also join the organization.

Awards Announced In Essay Contest.

Mrs. A. M. Duggan of Hawkinsville, state chairman of the historical essay contest, announces the awards for this year's contest as follows:

The state medal was won by Miss Gussie Lamar Dunbar, of Atlanta.

Second place, Miss Evelyn Sanders, of Madison.

Third place, J. T. Adkins, Jr., Americus.

A copy of Miss Rutherford's book, "The South in History and in Literature," was offered to the student writing the best essay in each district. The winners of these books follow:

In the first district: Mrs. Charles Ansley, of Americus, chairman; Miss Gussie Lamar Dunbar, of Atlanta. Second district, Miss Kate Latham, Savannah, chairman; Miss Irene Bowers, of Conyers. Third district, Mrs. Ethel DuPree Pierce, Hawkinsville, chairman: Bennie F. Kurtz, LaGrange. Fourth district, Mrs. C. D. Shelnutt, of Sandersville, chairman; Miss Lula Voyles, Maysville. Fifth district, Miss Sara G. Stokes, of Augusta, chairman; Miss Elizabeth Oliver, Augusta.

Mrs. Duggan declares: "The interest manifested by the boys and girls is most gratifying. I am exceedingly anxious to have all the chapters in the state send me full report of number of essays written and number of prizes given."

Mrs. Duggan urges essay chairmen who have not already done so, to write her at once, reporting on these two points.

Ruth Draper Will Inaugurate Drama League Entertainments

Ruth Draper, highly finished artiste and possibly the most noted monologist in the world, will be presented to the Atlanta public by the Drama league of this city, Tuesday evening, October 2, in the auditorium of the Atlanta Woman's club.

Last year, when Miss Draper appeared in this city, she was not as well known to the southern people, though she drew a record-breaking audience, but this year, after so many of the cultured people of this community have witnessed her marked ability and remarkable gift as an impersonator, few will miss the opportunity of enjoying her beautiful art as a reader. While Miss Draper impersonates her characters, the stage is almost physically peopled with those others with whom her characters are engaged. In her sketches she gives not only the characters she means to express, but their surrounding atmosphere and in some cases even their past. The whole is a wonderfully effective and beautiful performance.

Mrs. Edgar Neely, president of the drama league, felt last year when the league brought Miss Draper to Atlanta, that it was unfair to those unable to attend at that time never to be given an opportunity to hear such a rare artiste as she, so with the numerous requests and the recommendation of the members of the league Mrs. Neely and the board of managers thought it a fitting thing to have Ruth Draper open the drama league season in her wonderful original character sketches.

The executive board of the drama league wishes it understood that the league is not an organization where members are only accepted through invitation, it is a civic organization which aspires to be of the greatest benefit to the community by providing the best there is in drama and placing before the lovers of drama the highest type of this favored art.

The Atlanta Junior league will share in the proceeds of the Ruth Draper recitals and will assist in every way in making this entertainment a pronounced success. Membership cards for the drama league may be obtained by calling at Cable Piano company, beginning Monday and through Thursday of the coming week, after which time tickets will be placed on sale there for the Ruth Draper entertainment.

Mrs. Neely will be assisted during the coming season with a very interested and energetic board of managers who are especially anxious to make this one of the most successful years of good drama and local dramatic work. Following is the personnel of the officers and board: Mrs. John M. Slaton, first vice president; Mrs. J. E. Somerfield, second vice president; Mrs. Merrill Hutchinson, third vice president; Mrs. Marvin Perry, secretary; Mrs. Sinclair Jacobs, assistant secretary; Robert Moore, treasurer. Members of the board: Mrs. Dudley Cowles, Mrs. E. P. McBurney, Mrs. J. P. Billups, Cyril B. Smith, Mrs. Frank M. Inman, Miss Frances Gooch, Mrs. John R. Hornady, Mrs. W. D. Welborn, Mrs. Bolling Jones, Miss Cleveland Zahner, Mrs. Albert Thornton, Jr., Mrs. Edward H. Barnes; ex-officio members of the board are: Mrs. Emma Garrett Boyd, Mrs. W. C. Jarnagin, Rev. W. W. Memminger, Mrs. W. C. Spiker; honorary members are: Mrs. Clifford Walker, Miss Carolyn Cobb, Mrs. Armand Carroll.

The standing committees as appointed by the president, Mrs. Neely, are: Mrs. Robert F. Moore, chairman of guaranty fund committee; Mrs. John R. Hornady, chairman of press and publicity; program committee, Mrs. J. B. Somerfield, Mrs. Albert Thornton, Jr., Mrs. Louis Moss.

Mrs. Reeves Honored At Matinee Luncheon.

Mrs. Roy Almand entertained at a beautifully appointed luncheon at her home on Park drive Thursday as a compliment to Mrs. Pearl Frances Machen, of Washington, D. C., the guest of Mrs. Walton Reeves.

Following luncheon the guests attended the matinee at the Atlanta theater.

The house was beautifully decorated with bright fall flowers. A pink and white color scheme was carried out in the table decorations. A large cut-glass basket filled with gladioli formed the centerpiece. With this was used unshaded pink candles and pink nut baskets tied with pink and blue satin ribbon.

Invited to meet Mrs. Machen were Mrs. Carl Owens and Mrs. W. R. Simpson. The other guests included Mrs. Reeves and the small son of the host.

A number of social affairs have been tendered Mrs. Machen during her visit in Atlanta.

Druid Hills Club Studies Music.

The Druid Hills Junior Music club holds its regular meeting Wednesday afternoon in the studio of the senior director, Miss Alee Robinson, 126 Clifton road.

New business activities were discussed. A musical program will be given at the Scottish Rite hospital today.

A rummage sale will be held Saturday, September 27. Anyone who would be interested in donating rummage, phone Miss Clara Gilstrap, Decatur 1733-W.

Membership in the club is open to anyone under 18 years of age who is interested in music. After November 1, $5.00 will be charged to all new applicants and also after January 1 a musical examination will have to be passed before membership will be granted.

Lebanon Chapter O. E. S. Put on Star Ceremony.

Officers of Lebanon chapter, No. 105, O. E. S., visited LaGrange recently as the guests of Miriam chapter of LaGrange, being entertained at luncheon and afterward putting on a very beautiful "Emblematic Star Ceremony," arranged and staged by Mrs. A. J. Jansen.

Among the officers and members of the chapter who visited LaGrange were Mr. and Mrs. D. Garrett, Mr. and Mrs. DeWitt Hooker, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Jansen, Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Vary, Mrs. J. Jenkins, Mrs. O. B. Garner, Jr., Mrs. L. D. Layton, Mrs. Henry Norton, Mrs. Annie Haynes, Mrs. Geo. Simons, Mrs. Gilbert Smith, Mrs. A. D. Hall, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Some of the grand officers present included: Grand worthy patron, A. D. Echols; grand chaplain, Mrs. Rapp, and grand treasurer, Mrs. Bulloch.

Social Life In Marietta.

The hostesses at the Marietta Golf club tea on Saturday were Mrs. Charlie Brosen, Mrs. Leslie Blair, Mrs. Arthur Crowe, Misses Julia and Emma Katherine Anderson.

Mrs. M. D. Hodges entertained about 25 guests at bridge.

Mrs. Malcolm Whittock entertained for Miss Martha Wall, of Augusta, and Miss Julia Abbott entertained at bridge for some of the high school set.

Mrs. D. W. Blair gave a "42" party on Tuesday for Mrs. Fred Mangel, of China, and Mrs. Seth Gunter, of Texas. Mrs. S. H. Hall entertained for these visitors on Monday afternoon.

The school set have been delightfully entertained this week. Among those giving parties were Miss Claudia Keith, little Helen Everett and Tom Perkinson.

Mrs. Hunter Morrisette and Miss Sadie Sibley will entertain for Miss Cora Brown next week.

Among the college set that leave this week are Miss Lucille Allen, who goes to Bessie Tift college, and Miss Elizabeth Holmes, who leaves Saturday to continue her study of piano with Walter Chapman in New York.

An Appeal for the Completion Of Ella F. White Endowment Fund.

Georgia clubwomen have obligated themselves to raise $25,000 for the Ella F. White endowment fund. The manner in which this obligation is to be met was by paying 25 cents per capita each year for three years.

Many of the old clubs, but not all of them, have already met this obligation.

Now, the most important point to be stressed is that this fund must be completed, and the state chairman, Mrs. Z. I. Fitzpatrick, and her board of trustees, are earnestly pressing forward to complete the amount in time for the fall report to be made at the November convention to be held in Atlanta.

The entrance of new clubs into the federation in regard to this memorial fund was discussed at a recent executive board meeting. It was decided that there would be no exemption made towards them in meeting this obligation.

It ought to be a source of great pride and pleasure for the new clubs joining the federation to support the Ella F. White endowment fund, because the principle of this fund which is invested in interest-bearing securities, is to be the means of financing the Georgia federation in its every department.

Aside from the facts stated above, it is to be a memorial to a sainted past president, Mrs. Ella F. White, whose loyal service and active duties toward the federation probably hastened her death several years ago.

Up to the present time, the state chairman has on hand $6,000, and she is far from the goal.

Therefore, it will be only through concerted and prompt effort on the part of every clubwoman that the realization of this memorial can be achieved.

In meeting the obligation, some of the clubs sent in their per capita allotment in one check.

This is an excellent suggestion, and might be followed up by the clubs which may have overlooked this important branch of club work. All checks can be sent to Mrs. Fitzpatrick at Madison.

"Woman's place is in the home, and the most powerful protection to the home is the ballot."—Mrs. Edward Franklin White.

Dear District Presidents:

The state convention is not far away and we are making every effort to get our state headquarters in Atlanta properly functioning before that event. In order to do this, we need in this office the name and officers' names of every club in the federation. Will you, therefore, please send immediately to Miss Leona Westbrook, state headquarters, Georgia Federation of Woman's Clubs, chamber of commerce building, Atlanta, a complete list of the clubs in your district and the names and addresses of the officers of each club, the meeting dates, whether or not the club owns its own clubhouse, and such other information as is necessary for a headquarters office to have.

Please give this matter your prompt attention and comply with this request, and oblige.

Yours very truly,
Ella Forecare Brantley,
(Mrs. A. P. Brantley),
President, Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs.

Mrs. Oscar Peeples, president of the seventh district, requests all clubs to comply with Mrs. Brantley's request by sending names at once to her at Cartersville.

Miss Emma Crabb, recording secretary, has been seriously sick for some time, and is now recuperating at a private sanitarium.

Mrs. Peeples has received courteous replies from the following editors in the district assuring her of their hearty cooperation in giving publicity to club news throughout the year:

R. H. Claggett, Rome News-Tribune; Otis A. Brumby, Cobb County Times; E. R. Russell, Cedartown Standard; T. H. Parker, Dallas New Era; J. H. Espy, Summerville News; T. S. Shope, North Georgia Citizen; Albert C. Sweat, Calhoun Times; E. P. Hall, Walker County Messenger; J. Roy McGinty, Chatsworth Times; M. L. Fleetwood, Cartersville Tribune-News. She feels sure that other papers, when requested, will be equally courteous to the women of the district.

The Rome Women's club held its first fall meeting Wednesday afternoon, September 3, when important business was transacted, and a report of the biennial given by Mrs. Felton Jones, the club's delegate to Los Angeles.

Mrs. Lee Langley, of the Rome club, was awarded first prize for a story, "Tables of Flesh," published in the Sunday American.

Benefit Tea Held at the Cabin.

The Indian cemetery committee of the Calhoun Woman's club, with Mrs. H. C. Brogdon as the efficient chairman, was hostess to the benefit tea at the cabin Tuesday afternoon. The reception rooms and veranda were unusually attractive in their decoration of marigold and goldenglow, effectively arranged in old-fashioned crocks and vases throughout the rooms. The color motif of shades of yellow was also carried out in the tally cards, bonbons and tempting salad course served at the individual card tables.

The second Thursday in August was observed by the Calhoun Woman's club as "Grandmothers' Day," this being the annual custom since the club's foundation. Brilliant old-time flowers decorated the log cabin and the cherished guests who were seated in a semi-circle. The program was under direction of Mrs. Phil Reeves with music by the Quarles sisters from Chatsworth. Club colors were carried out in sprigs of Prince's feathers on each plate, attesting the royal occasion which it was. During the business session meeting with the city authorities and urging the need of changing conditions around the source of the city's water supply was advocated. A source of much regret was the resignation of Miss Idalette Hillhouse, who for the past ten years has served so admirably as matron and librarian at the cabin. Miss Hill house goes for an extended visit to relatives in another state. Mrs W. L. Hines voiced the club's appreciation of Miss Hillhouse's faithful attendance and presented her with a gift of silver as sterling as her own good qualities. Miss Naomi White was elected as new matron.

MRS. JOHN ERWIN, Pres.
MRS. B. M. HARLAN,
Press Chairman.

Mrs. M. E. Judd, president of the Dalton Woman's club and state chairman of transportation, sent greetings to the seventh district, on the eve of her departure for China, where she will make a lengthy visit and assist in planning the grounds about a large American college in Shanghai.

It is to be hoped that Mrs. Judd will not run into danger during the revolution which has broken out in that section of the late "celestial empire."

An important meeting of the Marietta Woman's club was held in the lecture room of the Y. W. C. A. Tuesday, August 20, for the purpose of electing officers for the coming two years, and making plans for the annual meeting in September.

The Cherokee club of Cartersville, begins its twenty-ninth year September 9, under auspicious circumstances, and with a long record of achievements behind it. The first board meeting will be held September 23rd in the club room, at which the program will be announced and handbooks for the year delivered to members.

The Sans Souci club, Adairsville, has kept its free public library open all during the summer, but regular monthly meetings have been suspended out of respect to members who have suffered bereavement. Regular work will be resumed September 18. This club owns its club house, one of the prettiest in the state, and has done splendid work especially in its library, which contains 1,200 volumes and is patronized by hundreds of citizens, young and old.

The Civic Club of Lafayette recently put on the very creditable performance of "Miss Politix," which added a considerable sum to its bank account. Mrs. C. C. Gilbert is the efficient president.

The History Club of Kingston has its annual program ready to be published in the Tribune-News, the local paper, and this given to the public, as well as club members.

Owing to sickness and bereavement, the Woman's club, of Adairsville, has done no active work for several months, but expects to resume meetings in the near future.

Sketches of Mrs. W. F. Collar, of Austell, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Charles B. McGarity, vice president, of Dallas, and Mrs. B. F. Lowther, treasurer of the seventh district, have appeared on the club page of The Atlanta Constitution.

Announcement of the purchase of the Robert Loveman home by the Dalton Woman's club has also appeared on the club page.

A pleasant greeting has been received from Mrs. T. H. Ellington (Maria Bucchultz), of Jacksonville, Fla., for seven years the seventh's most efficient secretary, whose wedding during the state convention in Savannah gave this district the honor of supplying the only bride, so far, of any in the state. Mrs. Ellington was an active member of the Lesche club, of Dalton.

Eighth District Executive Board Features Tallulah

Athens, Ga., September 20.—The Eighth District Federation of Women's Clubs was well represented at a meeting of the executive board on Friday at the Athens Woman's club. Luncheon followed the morning session, in the dining room of the clubhouse, Mrs. Walter Hodges, of Hartwell, its president, being hostess.

Greater Tallulah.

The main topic of the meeting was Greater Tallulah and the part the Eighth district is to take in carrying out its pledge to raise the $20,000 from the state of Georgia, Atlanta having pledged the same amount. Mrs. Hodges spoke of the pride the district felt in its opportunity to assist in raising funds for this noble institution now, to perpetuate its beneficent influence on behalf of the hundreds of children and young people who are later to come to its doors for admittance, and that the citizens of the district can in no way further to a greater or more far-reaching extent this mission in life than to remember the large number of Georgia youth who are dependent only on this school for an education and a knowledge of some trade, and make a contribution during this intensive campaign.

Mrs. John K. Ottley, of Atlanta, president of the board of trustees of the Tallulah Falls school, and Mrs. Z. I. Fitzpatrick, state chairman of the building fund of the extension drive and advisory chairman to the board of trustees, were present and gave many suggestions as to ways and means of reaching the district's quota. They told of the progress of the work throughout the state and the joy the opportunity to give was giving the people of Georgia, including the citizens of Tallulah, who have been most responsive.

Miss Sarah Hunter Moss, of Athens, member of the board of trustees and state chairman of crafts, who spends much of her time at her summer home in Tallulah and knows of the needs of the school, keeps in touch with its marvelous progress, and is in sympathy with every phase of the work, made an interesting talk and greatly encouraged the women in their respective plans.

As the Tallulah Falls school was conceived by an Athens woman, the late beloved Mrs. Mary Ann Lipscomb, the Eighth district feels a pardonable pride in the school and is anxious to build and equip a crafts house there, this matter to be brought to the attention of the Eighth district convention in Hartwell in the spring.

Mrs. S. V. Sanford, second state vice president and chairman of state institutions, delighted the women with a brief outline of the program which she as chairman has planned for the state convention in Atlanta in November. She is so careful and clever in the selection of its attractions that only the most gifted and ingenious men and women are ever chosen to appear on the program, and this year will, if possible, excel in its list of distinguished personages. The central thought of the program is "Georgia."

Mrs. Joseph Vason, of Madison, and Mrs. J. W. Gholston, of Comer, who have had in charge the publishing of the 1924-25 year book for the Eighth district, were applauded when they presented the finished books, bound in heavy white paper, printed in green, the federation colors, and tied with a neat green silk cord. Mrs. R. J. Ayers, of Comer, publisher, was given a rising vote of thanks for extra effort put forth in connection with preparing copy, etc.

The resolutions committee expressed regret over the absence of Mrs. H. B. Ritchie, president of the Athens club and chairman of nominations of the district, and Mrs. A. S. Parker, chairman of junior club memberships, their absence occasioned by illness.

Thanks were extended the officers of the Athens club for the courtesy of the building; and Mrs. Lena Felker Lewis, of Monroe, past district president, speaking for the district, thanked Mrs. Hodges for her charming compliment to the members of the executive board of the Eighth District Federation of Women's Club.

It was decided that the Eighth district meet in a club institute in Athens at the University of Georgia the last week of June, 1925.

The slogan of the meeting and the entire district for the year is "Every Club Organize and Federate Another Club," this being the inspiration of Mrs. Joseph Vason, of Madison.

There are 36 clubs in the district and another in the making, already for its first meeting, it was announced.

Members Present.

The following members of the executive board were present: Mrs. Hodges, president; Mrs. Joseph Vason, of Madison; Mrs. J. W. Gholston, of Comer; Mrs. A. C. Skelton, of Hartwell; Mrs. K. S. Anderson, of Madison; Mrs. George A. Barron, Lexington; Mrs. Lena Felker Lewis, Monroe; Mrs. W. D. Tutt, Elberton; Mrs. Don T. Barnes, Canon; Miss Estelle Colcough, Penfield; Mrs. Lamar Rucker, Athens; Mrs. J. H. Rucker, Athens; Mrs. Mell Blanchard, Crawford; Mrs. Albert Foster, Madison; Mrs. C. M. Bolton, Winterville; Mrs. Eugene W. Carroll, Athens; Mrs. A. C. Kelley, Monroe; Mrs. Walter Armistead, Crawford; Mrs. James L. Teasley, Hartwell; Mrs. A. M. Wilkins, Comer; Mrs. Parke Skelton, Hartwell; Mrs. J. A. Dyar, Royston; Mrs. Stewart D. Brown, Royston; Mrs. A. S. Simmons, Elberton; Mrs. S. V Sanford, Athens; Miss Sarah Hunter Moss, Athens.

Executive Board of Fort Valley Woman's Club Holds Meeting

The executive board of the Fort Valley Woman's club held its first meeting of the fall season Saturday afternoon with Mrs. Edgar Duke.

The officers of the club, with the chairmen of standing committees, constitute the board of directors to whom is delegated the authority to discuss all matters of importance to the club and make recommendations to the body. Membership is conferred by the board, and at this meeting several new members were admitted.

The program committee has prepared an unusually interesting program for the year 1924-25.

The direction of the club work will be in the hands of a new administration this year, with Mrs. J. M. Green, president, who will give to the club women of Fort Valley untiring and constructive leadership.

Although there has been a change of officers, there will be no break in the continuity of the federation work, for all projects fostered by the National Federation of Women's Clubs, of which the Fort Valley club is a member, will be supported by this club.

World conditions challenge the club women to keep awake to new creative forces and to hold the women responsive to the great new movements that give them the opportunity to serve, not alone our own community and state, but the whole country. Because of the vital nature of the problems that are facing the women of this day, they cannot afford to be content with anything less than constant striving for better methods of work, efficient service and outstanding achievements.

Mrs. B. M. Boykin, of Atlanta, corresponding secretary of the Georgia federation, will be a guest of the Fort Valley Woman's club at its first meeting early in October and will speak to the members at this time. Mrs. W. J. Braswell will be hostess to the club at its first meeting for the fall season.

Members of the executive board are: Mrs. J. M. Green, Mrs. W. J. Braswell, Mrs. C. Z. Wilson, Mrs. R. D. Hale, Mrs. Sydney McMillan, Mrs. C. N. Rountree, Mrs. E. L. Duke, Mrs. Moses Soloman, Mrs. Frank Vance, Miss Wilma Orr and Miss Katie May Williams.

Mrs. Peeples Honored At Rome Dinner.

Mrs. Oscar T. Peeples, the president of the Seventh District Federation, and also director for north Georgia of the woman's board of the Dixie Highway association, shared honors with Mrs. Oren Massey, of Macon, president of the woman's board, at a beautiful dinner given recently by the Presidents' club of Rome. Mr. Shackleton, president of the club, presided, and about fifty guests were present.

Mrs. Massey made a brilliant address covering the scope and aims of this new department in the work of the Dixie highway.

Mrs. Peeples spoke more along the lines of the value to education and better citizenship that the building of good roads would bring to a community and state.

Mrs. Norman Sharp Is Junior Membership Chairman

Mrs. Norman Sharp, of Atlanta, prominent and seasoned clubwoman, whose constructive work has been largely among the interests of the young people. She has been appointed state chairman of the standing committee of the junior membership in the Georgia Federation.

Mrs. Norman Sharp, president of the Atlanta Woman's club, has been appointed by Mrs. Archibald P. Brantley, president of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, as chairman of junior memberships. This important announcement was made last Sunday on the official club page and her appointment is of great interest and value to the club women of Georgia.

Mrs. Sharp, in her administration as president of the Atlanta Woman's club, has had as the keynote among her club activities which are of decided interest to young people.

She has been in communication with Miss Florence Dippert, vice president of the general federation, and national chairman of junior work, requesting her to map out a course, stating the exact ages for junior membership as prescribed by the general federation. A program will then be outlined suitable for the ages prescribed by the national chairman.

Mrs. Sharp, in speaking of her appointment, said: "I feel greatly honored in having been assigned to this work, for I know of no subject of greater importance than the proper training and guiding of the young people of our state. I am giving this subject my deepest thought and attention, and believe that in a short time we will assemble a large number of organized young people throughout Georgia, and they will work along lines of self-development and helpfulness to the community."

The Clubwoman---Here, There and Everywhere

BY LESSIE STRINGFELLOW READ,
(Director General Federation of Women's Clubs.)

Person—ality Science.

Did you ever take a course in personality science, for the development of self-confidence and personality? Lots of clubwomen are doing it. It has been proven that the most self-conscious person, afraid of her own voice and absolutely lacking in poise and personality, to say nothing of self-confidence, can overcome these difficulties provided she wishes to and is willing to go through a few weeks' careful, scientific training.

It is not vanity that leads ladies of the land to take up such study. Every woman interested in any public work, sooner or later realizes that the work suffers unless she is able to make a speech, to think on her feet, to appear pleasingly and convincingly before an audience, to put the work before the world in either written or spoken form, and learning to write is a longer process than is learning to speak.

This is a secret! One of the most brilliant speakers—women speakers—in America, one whose name is known all over the land, is not a born orator. Her personality is such that her slightest word carries weight and her simplest argument power with people she addresses. But when she was made president of a great organization, she immediately fitted herself for the job. She studied public speaking, she took a "personality" course, she trained herself to think on a platform as well as run on one, and she learned how to pitch her voice so it could be heard in the farthermost corner of the convention hall without being raised unpleasantly. She developed into a person and her "person—ality" has radiated round a large part of the world. Her mind will be alert so long as she lives and to the end of it she will be a student.

In her day, it is said, she had to go to Canada to get the course she needed to "knock out her self-consciousness." But today America is offering a number of courses on self-cultivation, one of the best of which, they tell me, may be had in Boston. The price, usually is only $1 a week for a course of 10 weeks, cheap enough surely, and within the reach of any woman who wishes to fit herself better for her work, whatever that may be in the world of cooperating clubdom.

The Bayview Council.

Ever been to Bayview? Neither have I, but I hope to go some day. At Bayview where they have a summer session equally famous with that at Chautauqua, they have a fine Woman's club and a celebrated clubhouse, and the women who live there are planning to offer many tempting things to the clubwomen of America. First of all, they gained the confidence of Mrs. Winter and Mrs. Pennybacker (two great persons who need not be designated anywhere in the civilized world by their initials) and won the approval of each. Next they mapped out a course of clubwork that will appeal to women who seek a vacation which will not be wasted time, but which will permit of profitable study as well as recreation. Next year they plan to have women speakers come from several parts of the country and talk on club work, and maybe hold institutes on department work, organization, administration, whatnot. They will issue a daily paper on the grounds and have a week's club program on the regular Bayview course. Many famous folk will be there. Sounds nice, doesn't it? The program will be in charge of a recently-organized Bayview council, composed entirely of clubwomen.

The Montana Meeting.

Montana has just had a great state meeting. It was held at Kallispell and was the twentieth annual of the state federation. Playday took delegates "down a fairy dell in the forests on the shores of Swan lake," as Mrs. Souders, president and general federation director, describes it, to the home of the Anaconda Copper company, Con Kelly, where Mr. and Mrs. Kelly threw open not only the entire plant, but their magnificent home, to the visitors.

An interesting feature of this far-western home is that it is completely furnished with furniture made at their own shop on their own grounds. The 20 house servants were kept busy waiting upon their guests including 40 house guests from New York. A stable showed 40 or more thoroughbred "Kentuckians." Diversions included a day in Glacier park and a concert by Gumiroff, of Bush temple, Chicago, and Madame Mankenberg, opera singer from Bireuth; tea at the home of Senator Walsh, whose deceased wife was president of the state federation a few years ago; a trip up Avalanch basin to Fairy Glenn. Which reminds me.

The Birth of a Cloud.

Did you ever see the birth of a cloud? This is a familiar sight to Montanans, but not so to women from other sections. Some 75 conventioners made themselves comfortable over the week-end and waited patiently "to watch the clouds form," which they did prettily, as if especially for federation guests. Mrs. T. E. Dawson, "mother of the glaciers," a quarter-breed Irdian, educated and refined, who worked to have her part of the Rocky mountains made into a national park, was a hostess who had the history of the section at her finger tips and who pointed out the Indian pictures and inscriptions on the rocks, and interpreted them as only a native can do.

Mrs. Wallace Perham, of Glendive, formerly vice president of the general federation, was present and had prominent part on the program. Among other things the conventioners voted:

To found a state federation magazine.

To follow loyally the leadership of the new G. F. W. C. president, Mrs. J. D. Sherman.

To approve the plan to make Armistice day an informational day on the destructiveness and uselessness of war and to dedicate itself to the slogan "It Must Not Be Again."

To urge the state legislature to appropriate funds to meet the federal Sheppard-Towner appropriation for work among mothers and babies.

To approve the Fess-Dollinger bill (S. B. 1408) that will give home economics opportunities and support equal to that now enjoyed by agriculture, trade and industry.

To urge congress to declare for the outlawry of war.

To urge the repeal of the medical prescription law that makes it possible for those who can, to have physicians write them prescriptions for liquor. "Montana having through referendum voted itself dry by a majority of more than 30,000."

Miss Bell Bayless Blazes the Trail For District Publicity

Miss Bell Bayless, press chairman for the Seventh District Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, demonstrates very clearly the wisdom and foresight a press chairman can express in her work for the federation.

Miss Bayless has prepared what she calls a "syndicate," and will get it out once a month for the seventh district, and has made arrangements with every paper in the district to print it the same Sunday. Through the kindness of Mr. Fleetwood, editor of the Bartow County Tribune, proofs were taken to be sent each paper.

Miss Bayless takes a decided step forward in advancing the seventh district's publicity, and her example would be a splendid one for every district press representative to follow. She has "blazed the trail" for district publicity, and sustains her reputation for reaching first place in anything she undertakes.

Vidalia Bronte Club Federates Music Section.

The Bronte Study club, of Vidalia, has federated its music section through Mrs. Bailey in Savannah. The club has enlarged its membership and taken up a larger civics work for this year's program.

Eighth District Adopts Resolution.

Athens, Ga., September 20.—The following resolution was adopted by the Eighth District Women's club board of directors at a meeting held in Athens on Friday, September 12, at the Athens Woman's clubhouse: A motion was made by Mrs. Joseph Vason, of Madison, and seconded by Mrs. Mell Blanchard, of Crawford, that the executive board of the Eighth district adopt a resolution recommending that a club institute be held at the University of Georgia during the last week in June or the first week in July of 1925. This recommendation was unanimously adopted by the board.

PLANS UNDER WAY FOR BIG EXHIBIT AT CATTLE SHOW

County farm demonstration agents and enterprising agricultural development interests generally throughout the state are actively at work in assembling exhibits and otherwise preparing to have their respective counties and communities creditably represented at the National Dairy show, to be held at Milwaukee, September 29 to October 4, at which exhibit space has been reserved by the Georgia association.

In addition to a comprehensive display of Georgia dairy products, the state will be represented at the big show by a stock-judging team comprising four Georgia boys selected by competitive tests from the various high school vocational classes of the state. These boys, with their instructors, will attend the show at the expense of the Atlanta Trust company, to compete there for first honors in dairy-cattle judging.

By a similar process of elimination, three Georgia Calf club boys also have been chosen to represent their state at the show, their expenses to be paid by the Kiwanis clubs of the state.

The stock-judging team is composed of four boys of the Hartwell Vocational school, and the calf club boys who have the honor of representing their state are from Kingston, Mansfield and Cordele.

GOVERNOR LEAVES FOR PHILADELPHIA PATRIOTIC EVENT

Governor Clifford Walker will be away from the city all of next week. He has been invited to attend the centennial in Philadelphia Thursday, celebrating the 150th anniversary of the convening of the continental congress in that city.

The governor expects to stop in Washington, where he will visit democratic national campaign headquarters. It is probable that he will offer his services as a speaker in the campaign for the presidency. While Governor Walker will be busy with his official duties until after the Macon convention, which is called for October 8, he states that he could, if needed, give his services to the democratic party for the closing three weeks of the campaign.

The governor will go to Athens today, where he will deliver an address before the Methodist Sunday school convention.

PHOTOGRAPHY CLASS OPENS MONDAY NIGHT

Opening at 7 o'clock Monday night, a Smith-Hughes course in photography will be offered to a limited number at the laboratory of the department of visual education, 237 Luckie street.

The course will deal with essentials of photographic chemistry, physics of the lens and actual practice in developing and fixing negatives and prints; enlarging, copying, both by transmitted and reflected light; making lantern slides, and taking, printing and developing motion pictures.

The course, which is for beginners, will start with the simplest fundamentals. The only charge is a fee of $1 to cover partial cost of materials. No previous registration is required.

The class will be in charge of E. R. Enlow, director of visual education for Atlanta schools, it was announced by T. W. Clift, director of vocational training.

Georgia Fine Arts Chairman Makes Announcement to Clubs

Since the clubs are now making up their programs for the year, I desire to make the following announcement:

The civic art committee of the General Federation, of which Mrs. John MacKee is chairman, is now making bookings for the 1924-25 season of three civic art lectures, illustrated by slides. One of these is a new lecture on civic architecture, giving types of community buildings, centers, clubhouses and public buildings. The two lectures on city planning and memorials have been rewritten and new slides have been added.

Let me call attention again to the need of the clubs working locally, also state and country-wide, toward arousing public opinion against billboard advertising. While a few of the states have already taken steps along the line of restricting and taxing billboards, many states, Georgia among them, permit their erection not only along the main roads leading into the cities and towns, but also along the state highways. The chautauqua resolution of the General Federation called this an intrusion of private business on public rights. Courteous letters written unitedly by clubwomen may bring about strong public sentiment toward lessening this civic blight. Let us work to this end.

MRS. W. R. JOHNSTON,
Chairman of the Department of Fine Arts for the Georgia Federation.

Tallulah Campaign Spreads In Neighboring Territory

Members of the Georgia Federation of Women's clubs have entered into a state-wide campaign to raise $40,000 for buildings and equipment greatly needed in the expansion of Tallulah Falls Industrial school for mountain girls and boys. Mrs. Z. I. Fitzpatrick, of Madison, is chairman of this state campaign and through the Atlanta Federation of Women's clubs, under the leadership of its president, Mrs. T. T. Stevens has already raised $18,000. Atlanta club women agreed during the past week to adopt the slogan "Right on for Tallulah," and continue an energetic drive for funds until a total of $20,000 has been reached. It is expected that Columbus, under the leadership of its city federation will follow suit and campaign the city for contributions from the friends of education. Mrs. Fitzpatrick went to Columbus on Friday to consult with club leaders regarding this undertaking. Mrs. T. C. Hudson is president of the Columbus federation, and among the Columbus leaders who are well known throughout the state may be counted Miss Edwina Wood, Mrs. Charlton Battle, and Mrs. W. R. Blanchard. Neighbors of Tallulah school have been among the first contributors in response to direct appeal from Mrs. Fitzpatrick. The mayor of the town of Tallulah having led the way with a personal gift of $50. Demorest, Clarksville, Cornelia are among the nearby places recently visited by Mrs. Fitzpatrick and all are planning special work for the school. At the first meeting of the executive board of the 8th district federation, presided over by Mrs. Walter L. Hodges of Hartwell, and held in Athens, Mrs. Fitzpatrick, and Mrs. John King Ottley, president of the board of trustees of the school were special guests and speakers. This district is forming definite plans to aid with the campaign.

Gainesville, in the 9th district, was visited by Mrs. Fitzpatrick immediately following the meeting of the 8th district and with Winder and Jefferson is forming plans for special work. Other Georgia towns in which the club women are going "right on for Tallulah" includes Martin, Sycamore, Zebulon, Lexington, Warrenton, Barlow, Wadley, Buford Sandersville, Norwood, and Lawrenceville. Among the Georgia towns in which club women have already been successful in obtaining gifts for the school are Savannah, which has given $100; Covington, Mr. and Mrs. Trox Bankston having sent a check for $50; Columbus, where the club leaders were given 35,000 brick by Columbus firms; Rockmart, where 100 barrells of cement were donated to the school; and Macon, where a large gift of terra cotta pipe has been made.

Mrs. John King Ottley, president of the board of trustees, declares that everything given by any community for Greater Tallulah, since the beginning of the campaign two years ago, will be credited in the sum total of contributions from that community, but the amount of $40,000 from the state, including the $20,000 which Atlanta is raising, must be new money for use in the building program now going on.

This program is now well under way and with the club women all over the state soliciting funds from their friends and from citizens who have the welfare of the state at heart, it is felt that completion of the physical expansion of he school is assured by the date of the state convention, to be held in Atlanta, November 11. The financial permanance of he school has already been accomplished by a modest endowment.

The executive board of the Georgia Federation of Women's clubs will meet at the Atlanta Woman's club on Thursday, September 25, at 10 o'clock for the annual September board meeting.

Atlanta Pharmacists Named on Committee To Secure Big Fund

A number of prominent Atlanta pharmacists have been notified of their appointment as a local committee to serve in the nation-wide drive for a fund of $1,000,000 for the erection of an All-Pharmacy headquarters building, to be given over to research work on drugs and in aiding the furtherance of the profession.

More than $400,000 have been subscribed to date, it is pointed out in a statement recently by Dr. H. A. B. Dunning, of Baltimore, chairman of the committee engaged in raising the total sum.

Atlanta pharmacists named on the committee include R. C. Hood, T. H. Brannen, D. G. Wise, A. R. Munn, T. C. Marshall, J. T. Selman, Sinclair Jacobs, Paul Fleming, Dr. J. Jacobs, T. A. Cheathem and Lynn Fort.

BALLARD'S EXPENSES IN PRIMARY $628.82

N. H. Ballard, state school superintendent, who was defeated for renomination at the recent democratic state primary by Fort E. Land, did not spend any money at all on advertising, his report of campaign expenses, filed Saturday with Comptroller General William A. Wright, shows.

Mr. Ballard's total campaign expenses were $628.82, divided as follows: Entrance fee, $150; postage, $167.68; printing, $110; traveling expenses, $140; telegrams, $17.60; and stationery, $43.55.

Other expense accounts filed Saturday included the two justices of the supreme court and two judges of the court of appeals, who were renominated without opposition. Each one gave his total expenses as the entrance fee of $150.

GEORGIAN HONORED IN NEW MEXICO HOME

Dr. Arthur Fort, prominent Atlanta physician, Saturday received a telegram from his brother, Tomlinson Fort, of Roswell, New Mexico, telling that the latter had been appointed a justice of the supreme court of that state.

Mr. Fort is a member of a prominent Georgia family. He was born in 1870 at Lumpkin, Ga., and is a graduate of Emory university. He was admitted to the bar in Georgia in 1894. For some years he was county school superintendent in Stewart county, but moved to Atlanta in the late 90s. For several years he was secretary to the justices of the supreme court, until, in 1912, he moved to New Mexico on account of his health. Since that time he has been practicing law in Roswell, the city of his adoption.

FUNERAL OF HOUSE TO BE HELD TODAY

Funeral services for William E. House, 72, who died Friday morning at the home of his brother, C. C. House, deputy sheriff, on the House road, near Buckhead, will be held at 11 o'clock this morning from the Sentell Baptist church. Interment will be in Mt. Perrin churchyard, with Hunter-Blanchard company in charge.

Pallbearers are W. J. Sentell, F. M Sentell, L. C. Sentell, F. J. Chappelear, G. P. Donaldson and O. B. Langford.

COMMERCE SCHOOL OF GEORGIA TECH ADDS NEW CLASSES

Additional sections in both business English and elementary accounting have already been made necessary in the Georgia Tech Evening School of Commerce by the rush of advance registration, it is announced.

These two courses are in the freshman group. Business English, of which there will be at least three classes, is in both the marketing and the accounting groups. While the course deals with the problem of making all business letters carry the sales and good-will message of the firm, close attention is given to collection, credit, adjustment and inquiry letters.

The elementary accounting class, which will be divided into Monday and Wednesday sections, covers not only the elements of bookkeeping, as an introduction to the advanced accounting classes, but as well a start in the theory of accounts.

Classes in the Evening School of Commerce will begin next week. The downtown class rooms at 18 Auburn avenue will be open daily from 12 to 8 o'clock this week for registration of students.

SAUNDERS SPEAKS AT MASS MEETING IN TWELFTH WARD

Supporters of William E. Saunders, candidate for reelection to council from the twelfth ward, will hold a mass meeting Tuesday night at the South Kirkwood store. In addition to Mr. Saunders, all candidates for city office will be invited to speak.

It is understood that Mr. Saunders will discuss matter alleged to have been mailed anonymously to many voters of the city, and in which implications are made against his character, along with character of other candidates.

Saunders is opposed by L. J. Cassells.

Beautiful Models Are Features Of Shriners' Big Fashion Show

Beautiful girls in the latest autumn fashions, parading down on an elevated runway close to spectators; girls in gowns, flashing with jewels, dancing ballet under iridescent lights; the Arab patrol speeding through intricate evolutions in representation of an oasis in the Sahara—Yaarab chanters singing, the Yaarab brass band playing, the Oriental orchestra sounding its weird strains on tom-tom and wallah-wallah—and the sprightliest of jazz by Warner's Seven Aces—that is a picture of the Shrine's first annual fashion show which opens Monday night at 7:30 o'clock. The show will continue every evening of this week, and 5,000 Nobles of Yaarab Temple expect six big nights and receipts which will materially swell the fund for building their great Mosque.

For weeks the Shriners have been at work on plans. J. W. Ostrow, managing director, has been assisted by a committee composed of Thomas C. Law, Roy Mather, Henry Heinz and Fred Patterson, while Virgil W. Shepard has had charge of the decorations. Every uniformed body within the Shrine has practised for its own special stunt. Enrico Leide has been rehearsing the big Shrine band for its concert, while the Chanters and the Patrol have been busy with practice.

Coeur de Leon commandery, Knights Templar, while not a Shrine body, has accepted an invitation to give an elaborate drill on the opening night.

Big Fashion Show.

But most important of all, of course, is the Fashion Promenade. Twenty or more young women have been engaged to display new fashions and have been busy with rehearsals all this week. This feature alone is expected to attract all the women as it will be an authoritative glimpse of "what they'll wear" this fall and winter.

Monday night's program follows:

Promenade concert by Warner's Seven Aces.

Address of welcome, Henry C. Heinz, past potentate of Yaarab Temple.

Grand fashion promenade.

Exhibition drill by company from Coeur de Leon commandery, Knights Templar.

"Dance of the Jewels" by Miss Nellie Sullivan and company.

Exhibition of draping on living models.

"French Flapper Doll Dance" by Miss Sullivan and company.

Dancing for all visitors, with music by Warner's Seven Aces.

Special Nightly Features.

On Tuesday night a special feature will be a concert by the Shrine band conducted by Enrico Leide.

On Wednesday night the Yaarab Oriental band will play as accompaniment to the Oriental ballet.

On Thursday night Arab Chanters, the best male chorus in Atlanta, will sing several numbers.

On Friday night the Yaarab Patrol, commanded by Captain F. E. Van der Veer, will give an exhibition drill in Sahara desert setting.

Several special features will be presented on Saturday night.

Tickets are to be had from any member of the Shrine or at the auditorium box office.

U. D. C. Present Bronze Busts Of Lee to England and France

Americus, Ga., September 20.—That the United Daughters of the Confederacy are accomplishing many activities outside of the United States is shown in reports which have been received by Mrs. Frank Harrold, president general, of this city, from France and England recently.

Of particular interest to members of the United Daughters of the Confederacy in the south is the presentation on September 4, to the Royal Military college, at Sandhurst, England, of a handsome bronze bust of General Robert E. Lee, Confederate leader. Exercises were attended by the United States ambassador, and Lady Astor unveiled the bust. The presentation speech was delivered by Mrs. Livingston Rowe Schuyler, former president general of the U. D. C.

A similar bust of the great Confederate general was presented by the United Daughters of the Confederacy to the Military school, of Saint-Cyr, France, and is said to be the only one of a Confederate general in all France.

According to a report of the presentation, which has reached Mrs. Harrold from France, a distinguished assemblage of French and Americans were in attendance. Myron T. Herrick, American ambassador, was one of the speakers at the exercises, it being stated that this was his first appearance in public since his recent illness.

Volck Designs Bust.

The bronze bust of General Lee was designed by Frederick Volck, of Baltimore, and was presented to the Saint-Cyr school by Mrs. Livingston Rowe Schuyler, Miss Belle Perkins, of Virginia, who is a relative of General Lee, and Lewis Bennettt, of Wheeling, W. Va., unveiled the bust, and Mrs. Schuyler delivered a brief address in tribute to the character of General Lee.

In her talk, the past president general of the U. D. C. stated that after the civil war was ended the famous Confederate general was offered large sums of money as well as an estate in England, with finances to maintain it, for the use of his name, but that he declined all of these offers in order to become president of Washington college, for the purpose, according to Mrs. Schuyler, to train the youth of the south for citizenship in the united country.

The bust of General Lee was accepted by Lieutenant Colonel Farris, one of the directors of the French school, who represented General Tanant, who was unable to be present. He welcomed the American delegation, and in accepting the bust of the famous Confederate chief asserted that it would forever remain one of the most prized and cherished of the American souvenirs possessed by the school. The genius and strategy of the Confederate general, according to the French officer, are recognized throughout the world, and his life and work studied in all of the great European military schools, he told his audience.

Herrick Speaks.

The final address, which was delivered by Ambassador Herrick, was said to be very informal and human, as he described how, when he was a little fellow, he used to admire the Confederate general, against whom his own family were fighting. After paying a glowing tribute to General Lee, Ambassador Herrick closed by saying that "those were the days when there was such a thing as chivalry."

Among prominent Americans who attended the exercises were Dr. Edwin Alderman, president of the University of Virginia; Andrew Jackson Montague, ex-governor of Virginia; Sheldon Whitehouse, charge d'affaires of the American embassy; Mrs. A. J. Smith, recording secretary general of the U. D. C.; Mrs. Walter D. Lamar, past president of the Georgia chapter of the order and chairman of the program for the next general convention; Mrs. Clarence G. Anderson, Jr., president of the Georgia Society of Colonial Dames, and Miss Mary Temple, state regent of the Daughters of the American Revolution, of Tennessee.

MEETINGS

The regular meeting of Kirkwood chapter No. 223, O. E. S., will be held Tuesday evening, September 23, at 8 o'clock.

Oglethorpe chapter No. 122, Order of the Eastern Star, will hold its regular meeting on Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock, in the Masonic temple on Peachtree road, at Buckhead. Officers and members are urged to be present. Visitors welcome.

The Twentieth Century Coterie will meet Thursday, September 25, at 3 o'clock, with Mrs. H. S. Nelms, 136 Hilton drive, in Decatur.

There will be a very important meeting of all mothers of kindergarten children of Spring Street Kindergarten in the kindergarten room Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Miss Landman is very anxious that there be 100 per cent attendance.

A baby health center will be held at Frank L. Stanton school Monday, September 22, with Dr. Hoppe and Mrs. Otis in charge. Mothers are urged to bring their babies at 2 o'clock.

There will be a regular meeting of Georgia chapter No. 127, Order of the Eastern Star, Thursday evening, September 25, at 8 o'clock, in the Oglethorpe Masonic temple, corner of East Georgia avenue and South Pryor street. There will be work in the degrees. All visiting members are invited to attend.

The regular meeting of the Atlanta Truth center will be held Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock at the Biltmore hotel in rooms 7 and 8 on the mezzanine floor. The evening class will be held at the First Congregational church on Ellis street at 6 o'clock. Mrs. A. W. Harrington will lead both meetings and a cordial invitation is extended to the public.

Will Study Law in Washington

Miss Charles Griggs, beautiful daughter of Mrs. Martha C. Griggs, of Washington, D. C., and niece of the late Congressman James M. Griggs. She is visiting her aunt, Mrs. James M. Griggs, in Dawson, Ga. Miss Griggs will return to the national capital this month to enter George Washington university and take up the study of law.

Fraternity Social Life Interests Athens Society

Athens, Ga., September 20.—Attention of a large number of friends and patrons of the Phi Mu fraternity at the University of Georgia centers in the reception or house warming at which the chapter entertains on Monday afternoon between 5 and 7 o'clock at the new fraternity house on the campus of the university.

The receiving line includes Miss Melville Doughty, of Augusta, house president; Mrs. H. C. Reynolds, house mother; Miss Josephine Wilkins, Mrs. W. D. Hooper and Mrs. Preston Brooks. Pouring tea from elegant silver services in the attractive dining room will be Mrs. Julius Talmadge and Mrs. Milton Jarnagin.

Assisting in serving and entertaining will be little Misses Janet Jarnagin, Marie McHatton, Betty Bradberry and Anne Brooks. The brightest and choicest of fall flowers will be used for decoration besides the pink and white carnations which will emphasize the colors of the fraternity.

At this time opportunity will be given the guests to go through the large house and enjoy the many improvements the girls have made and admire their cleverness and ingenuity in decorations and arrangements.

The Alpha Gamma Delta fraternity on Dearing street has been enjoying a number of small social affairs at their house, the largest and most charmingly planned being the tea on Friday afternoon at which Mrs. Allen Woodal, of Columbus, a former Athens girl, and a member of Brenau college, was the lovely hostess. The receiving line included the Mu chapter, Alpha Gamma Delta of old members of the fraternity and Miss Louise Merry received cards at the door.

Miss Susie Day Powell, house chaperon; Mrs. Dudley, of Tampa, Fla., living there this winter; Miss Irene Dudley, of Tampa, and Miss Louise Moon assisted in entertaining. About 50 called to meet the members and the new girls at Georgia. It was an occasion of great beauty and charm, and added a delightful incident to the fall social calendar.

The Ira Street Parent-Teacher association will meet Wednesday, September 24, at 2:30 at the school. This is to be the first meeting of the school year. All parents are urged to be present, as work for the year will be planned.

Library Literary Notes

A Roman Holiday

BY CLYDE PETTUS, OF THE CARNEGIE LIBRARY

The first fruit of a journey is the inevitable desire on the part of the well-intentioned traveler to share his experience with others. From the regalement of his more or less interested acquaintances he passes—publishers being complaisant—to the more enduring print and covers, and proceeds to communicate his happiness to the world-at-large.

"A Month in Rome" is the work of a Frenchman who finds the realization of a dream in the city of the seven hills. He writes first of all for himself—his Latin blood stirred by an emotion deeper than interest in this ancient mistress of the world; then more completely conquered by Rome than were his Gallic ancesters, he offers to those who will accept his companionship a share in the satisfaction of 30 well-spent days.

M. Andre Maurel describes himself as a passing-through-traveler, and his book as a naive account of the grandeur that was Rome. It is the kind of book that the tourist may carry as he walks about, smiling to himself as he finds in it his own half-formed impressions. The form is unique—a "walk" for each of the 30 days, beginning properly at the railway station looking across the Piazza delle Terme towards the Tiber, and saying farewell in a final visit to the broken marbles of the Forum. The intermediate days are filled with the passing reflections of a traveler who expects of his reader "average culture and unlimited interest," who with such a one in view has followed the counsel of Ernest Renan: "Lift your soul, feel nobly, and say what you feel."

Diverse Interests.

Any traveler who has surreptitiously dropped a penny in the Fountain of Trevi will understand why M. Maurel's impressions are more satisfactory than a guide-book. For he, too, has suffered from an attack of "cafard"—a malady venting itself in an irresistible impulse to go once and yet again to the Palatine, from which he would on no account banish the wolf, and to the Capitoline, where the Emperor Marcus Aurelius gazes serenely down, past the crouching sphinxes of the stairway, upon the center of the restless city. He will follow willingly in his guide's footsteps as he finds poems among the ruins. He will go with him gladly to feed his enthusiasm for the historic beneath the portico of the Pantheon and his reverence for Christian Rome under the dome of St. Peter's.

M. Maurel's interests are as diverse as an enthusiasm for the painter, Domenichino, and a consuming admiration for Chateaubriand, who is the attendant spirit of his Roman pilgrimage. One day is given to the indomitable little painter from Bologna, whose unpardonable sin was devotion to his art and and an incomprehensible neglect of short cuts to success—who kept a dagger by his side as he worked because of the envy aroused by his "Communion of Saint Jerome" in the Vatican gallery, and died poisoned, having made the name of "little Dominick" second to that of Raphael. But the presence of the magnificent Chateaubriand is felt in many of M. Maurel's journeys; he is the venerated master whom Rome saw at the height and at the decline of his glory. Two tombs are the strange memorial that mark his august and disdainful passage—one, to the devoted Pauline de Beaumont, a memory so inseparable from his own, and the other to a great forerunner of French art. Of this second monument he wrote to Madame Recamier: "You wished me to mark my visit to Rome; it is done; the tomb to Poussin will remain."

In his month of wandering the traveler sometimes leaves the city to walk under the eucalyptus trees without the walls. Or he takes a solitary journey along the narrow dusty Appian Way to the Campagna, stopping to explore the winding passages of the catacombs for the sake of St. Cecilia and Fabiola and "Quo Vadis." He describes the sculptured statue of the saint, with its severed head replaced on the shoulders, less like the beatific, singing Cecilia than a forlorn child, asleep. On another day he goes farther afield, to the red ruins of Hadrian's villa among its poplars and olive trees at the foot of the Sabine mountains; and to that other gem of Tivoli the Villa d'Este. Here the waters of the little Anio are transformed into a hundred tiny fountains and an amazing variety of cascades and waterfalls to please even the most exacting of renaissance cardinals bringing from Ferrara an ideal of beauty. It is the ghost of a garden now, where the fountains play only melancholy music.

Rome vs. Venice.

But new Rome is not like Venice, a sacrifice of the habitable to the picturesque. She has her old palaces and her marble fragments of the past but she adapts herself to the needs of the times. The refuge of Romulus has learned that man shall not live by the antique alone, disregarding the hygienic—and the groves beloved by Raphael are hidden beneath the pavement of the Tiber quays, while tramways encircle the column of Trajan. Yet nothing has been done ruthlessly. Rome adds another layer to the strata of the centuries. There are few cellars that do not cover statues, even temples; and who knows what treasures sleep beneath the sluggish waters of the Tiber? They are the wonders of tomorrow as the piratical cab drivers are the bane and blessing of today.

At the end of his sojourn M. Maurel passes once more under Bernini's colonnade to the vatican, for a last morning with Michelangelo and Raphael, and a farewell glance at the Biblioteca and the Borgia apartments. The afternoon is reserved for St. Peter's, vast and indescribable—the "throne room" of the religious life of half a world. Here it is easy to understand that to know Rome one must not visit her but must live her life.

One last evening and "A Month in Rome" is completed. M. Maurel remembers perhaps a night looking from the Capitoline upon the Forum, or moonlight shining through the arches of the Colosseum. With an effort he closes his notebook, feeling some diffidence about its enthusiasm. It is easier to end brusquely than with farewells.

"At any rate I shall have won the privilege of being able to quote from the Latin without making myself ridiculous."

Engagement of Miss Raley And Mr. Harding of Interest

With the announcement today of the engagement of Miss Lillian Raley to Hugh Northcote Harding, comes much interest.

Miss Raley is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Edgar Raley. Mr. Raley is a prominent business man in the wholesale brokerage business. He was originally from south Georgia.

On her paternal side Miss Raley is a granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Raley, Miss Raley being a Miss Williford, all from south Georgia.

Mrs. Raley was formerly Miss Mary Flemming, and Miss Raley's maternal grandparents were Mr. and Mrs. Chalmers J. Flemming.

Miss Raley is a sister of Mrs. J. B. Ennis and of James E. Raley, Jr.

Miss Raley is a young lady of much personal charm and vivacity of the brunette type. She is an accomplished musician, having devoted a great deal of study, under competent instructors, to the study of the piano. She attended school at North Avenue Presbyterian school and graduated from Washington seminary. Afterwards she was a pupil of Miss Simpson fashionable finishing school in New York.

Mr. Harding, who comes from England, is a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Harry Reginal Harding. They spent most of their life in Yorkshire, England. On his maternal side he is grandson of Esquire Q. C. Locock Webb and Mrs. Webb. His paternal grandparents were Rev. and Mrs. Harry Reginal Harding.

He attended school at Christ college in London, England, and came to America some years ago. He made his home in New York, where he was connected with mechanical engineering work. He has been a resident of the south for a year, and is southern representative of the Bozart Rug company, with offices in Atlanta.

During the world war, Mr. Harding served his country as captain of field artillery in the 33d division, and served overseas 18 months.

The wedding will take place Wednesday, October 8, at 11 o'clock in the morning, at the home of the bride-elect's parents, on Fairview road. Dr. Ashby Jones will officiate.

Miss Williams To Wed Mr. Henderson.

Interest centers in the announcement today of the engagement of Miss Chaltie Helena Williams and Norman George Henderson, of Newport, Vt.

Miss Williams is the second daughter of John D. Williams, of Smithville, Ga., but has made her home with her brother, John Quincy Williams, at Quantico, Va., for the past year.

Miss Whisenhunt Weds Mr. Holbrook.

Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Yona B. Whisenhunt, of Orangeburg, S. C., and Joseph Clyde Holbrook, of Atlanta, which was solemnized on September 11.

Owing to recent bereavement in the bride's family, the wedding was quietly solemnized at the home of the bride, in the presence of a few intimate friends and relatives.

Following the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Holbrook left for a wedding trip to Asheville, N. C.

After October 1 they will be at home to their friends at the Buford Court apartment, 667 Ponce de Leon avenue, Atlanta, Ga.

"A well dressed woman fills the room with poetic sense, like the perfume of flowers."—MISS OAKLEY

EVER SINCE THE DAYS of Eve women have been more interested in beauty than anything else in the world.

HOWEVER, in order to dress beautifully [and in good taste] it is not necessary to dress extravagantly. In fact, nothing so well becomes true feminity as simplicity.

THIS season particularly, our fashions seem as charming and naive as youth itself.

Interesting Wedding Plans of Miss Hardy and Mr. McCrorey

Of wide and unusual interest throughout the state are the wedding plans of Miss Musa Diamond Hardy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Gordon Hardy, and Roy Boyd McCrorey, announced today.

The wedding will take place at the home of the bride's parents at 253 Lawton street, Saturday, October 18, at 8:30 o'clock in the evening, Dr. L. O. Bricker officiating.

The bride will be given in marriage by her father and will have as her maid of honor her sister, Miss Goldie Hardy. The bridesmaids will be Miss Mildred Hardy, sister of the bride, and Miss Martha McCrorey, sister of the bridegroom.

Little Miss Madeline White, niece of the bride, and little Miss Ann Cornwell, cousin of the bride, will be the flower girls.

Mr. McCrorey will have as his best man his brother, W. Brooks McCrorey.

Miss Berta Sanford will keep the bride's register and Miss Sarah Sanford and Miss Ellen Gordon will serve punch.

Miss Helen Schald, at the piano, and Mrs. Mary Miller Trownsell, on the violin, will render the nuptial music and before the ceremony Mrs. LeRoy Webb will sing "At Dawning" and "I Love You Truly."

Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Hardy will entertain at a beautiful reception.

Among the out-of-town guests will be Miss Sarah Clore, of Cincinnati, Ohio; Mr. and Mrs. P. B. Agnew, of Greenville, S. C.; Misses Alice and Elizabeth Stubbs, of Macon, Ga.; Mr. and Mrs. D. A. White, of Birmingham, Ala., and Mr. and Mrs. Irving Scott, of Macon, Ga.

Miss Hardy is a young girl of the brunette type, possessed of a great deal of charm and is also very talented. She has a wide circle of friends who will be very interested in the announcements of her wedding.

A number of parties are being planned for this popular bride-elect.

Saturday, September 13, Miss Martha McCrorey entertained in honor of Miss Hardy with a bridge-shower at her home on Blue Ridge avenue.

Saturday, September 20, Misses Berta and Sarah Sanford complimented Miss Hardy with a matinee party at the Forsyth theater and tea at Nunnally's.

Saturday, September 27, Mrs. T. F. Johnson will entertain Miss Hardy at a matinee party at the Lyric theater and tea at the Winecoff.

Friday, October 3, Mrs. Pliny F. Cornwell will entertain at tea at her home on Copenhill avenue in honor of Miss Hardy.

Saturday, October 11, Mrs. H. A. Bennett will honor Miss Hardy at a bridge-tea at her home on Lucile avenue.

Wednesday, October 15, Misses Goldie and Mildred Hardy will honor their sister with a luncheon at the Biltmore.

Thursday, October 16, Mrs. Hardy will entertain at a trousseau tea at her home on Lawton street.

Friday, October 17, Mr. and Mrs. James Gordon Hardy will entertain at a buffet supper at their home following the reception.

Other parties are being planned, the dates to be announced later.

After a wedding trip to New York the young couple will be at home to their friends in their apartment.

Engagement of Miss Woolley And Mr. Farmer of Interest

Cordial interest centers in the announcement today of the engagement of Miss Frances Heard Woolley, daughter of A. C. Woolley, to John Floyd Farmer, of Savannah, the date of the wedding to be announced later.

Miss Woolley is the daughter of A. C. Woolley and the late Mrs. Woolley, who before her marriage to Mr. Woolley was Miss Virginia Beaird, of Selma, Ala. Mr. Woolley's family are originally from Alabama also, and he is president of A. C. Woolley & Co., wholesale grain merchants.

Miss Woolley graduated from North Avenue Presbyterian school, and later attended Agnes Scott college. She is a sister of Miss Virginia Woolley, a recognized artist of high standing and a leader in the Atlanta Art association. She is a sister of A. P. Woolley and J. A. Woolley, of Los Angeles, Cal.

Mr. Farmer is an only son of Mr. and Mrs. D. G. Farmer, of Savannah, his mother before her marriage being Miss Mary Lloyd. Mr. Farmer is an official of the Ocean Steamship company with offices in Savannah.

Mr. Farmer was a graduate of the Georgia School of Technology in the 1924 class and a member of the Theta Chi fraternity. He was also a member of the swimming team for several years.

Mr. Farmer is a civil engineer, doing survey work in Florida.

Miss Marion Tyler Weds Mr. Turnell.

Augusta, Ga., September 20.—Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Marion Tyler and Paul B. Turnell, which occurred Thursday at the home of the bride's mother on McIntosh street. Dr. E. L. Grace, of the First Baptist church, officiated.

The bride wore brown georgette draped over satin, beaded and inset with lace and Persian medallions and worn with a hat of fuchsia velvet. Her flowers were a corsage bouquet of rosebuds and lilies of the valley, corsage effect.

The bride was attended by two matrons of honor, Mrs. Henry Kahrs, of Atlanta, and her aunt, Mrs. Lee Olive, of Augusta, and entered with her brother, who gave her in marriage. The groom's best man was Charlie Paschal. Mrs. John C. Richardson rendered the music.

Mrs. Turnell is the daughter of Mrs. Willie A. Tyler, the granddaughter of Mrs. E. A. Wiggins and a niece of Mr. and Mrs. Armory Pilcher and Mose Pilcher, of Atlanta.

After a wedding tour through Florida and a visit to the groom's parents in Madison, they will be at home with the bride's mother.

Miss Adams Weds T. M. Danforth.

Augusta, September 20.—An interesting social event of the week was the marriage of Miss Helen Elizabeth Adams and Thomas Marion Danforth, which took place at high noon at the home of the bride's mother on lower Broad street. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Thomas Walker, an uncle of the bride.

Miss Eva Adams, of Sandersville, presided at the piano. The maid of honor was Miss Annie Vivian Adams and the best man, Jack A. Crouch.

The bride was attractive in a gown of black satin-panamroa crepe embroidered with a Persian design of flowers in the fuchsia shades, worn with a lavin hat of rust color and a corsage of bride's roses. After a wedding breakfast the bride and groom left for an extended trip through Canada and on their return will be at home with the bride's mother.

Ladies' Guild To Sponsor Tea.

The Ladies' Guild of the Church of Our Savior will have a tea at the home of Mrs. Winston Harvey, Williams Mill Road, Wednesday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

Miss Mixon Weds Mr. Harper in East Point, Ga.

A marriage, marked with beauty, dignity and simplicity, was that of Miss Annie Louise Mixon, of East Point, and Thomas Burgess Harper, of Jonesboro, which was solemnized Saturday evening, September 20, at 6 oclock, in the Church Street Methodist church, in East Point, in the presence of a large company of friends and relatives.

Church Decorations.

The church was elaborately decorated in ferns and stately palms, which formed a dense background. Floor baskets, filled with white roses and asters, were placed against the green foliage. Six large candelabras lighted the marriage altar. Southern smilax was twined around the chancel railings, and was dotted in clusters of white asters.

While the wedding guests were assembling, Miss Roline Trimble sang "Love's Old Sweet Song" and "Oh, Promise Me," accompanied by Miss Mae Bedenbaugh, who also rendered the wedding marches, "Lohengrin," which was used as the processional, and "Mendelssohn's, which was used as a recessional.

Bridal Party.

The groomsmen, Robert E. Boyle, Jr., and Carl Evans, were the first to enter, Mrs. Noble Weathers, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. Mrs. Weathers and Miss Alma Little entered at the same time, from different aisles. Little Gus Evans, nephew of the groom, was ringbearer, and wore a suit of white satin, and carried the ring embedded in a tall white rose. Helen Huie, the little flower girl, wore a dainty frock of pink chiffon, and carried a basket of rose petals, which she scattered down the aisle.

Miss Mildred Mixon was her sister's maid of honor.

The bride entered with her father, Dr. Fletcher Mixon, and was met at the altar by the groom and his best man, Clement C. Gaughf, of Albany.

In an impressive manner Dr. C. V. Weathers, of Bowden, officiated, using the ring ceremony, while "I Love You Truly" was softly played.

Mrs. Noble Weathers wore a lovely gown of blue chiffon and lace over peach-colored satin, with a picture hat of black velvet, and carried an arm bouquet of yellow roses and purple asters.

Miss Alma Little wore an exquisite gown of burnt orange chiffon over peach-colored satin, and her hat was black velvet trimmed in touches of gold. Her flowers were Ophelia roses and purple asters.

Miss Mildred Mixon wore apple-green chiffon over the same colored satin. Her hat was black velvet, trimmed in cream-colored lace, and her flowers were pink roses and pink asters.

Beautiful Bride.

The bride wore a stylish costume of fawn skin, of wood-colored brown, with fox fur collar and cuffs. Her hat was a small brown velvet model, trimmed in a spray of French roses. Her only ornament was a strand of pearls, a gift of the groom. She carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses showered with valley lilies.

The bride is the eldest daughter of Dr. Fletcher T. Mixon. She is a popular member of the younger social set, and has endeared herself to a large circle of admiring friends by her many lovable traits of character.

The groom is well known in both social and business circles, and is prominently connected with the Coca-Cola company.

Out-of-Town Guests.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Gaughf, Sr., of Albany; Captain and Mrs. Henry W. Beall, of Macon; Dr. and Mrs. C. V. Weathers, Sr., of Bowden; Mrs. M. P. Harvey and Miss Marie Harvey, of Fairburn; Dr. and Mrs. J. T. Henley, of Ben Hill; Miss Marie Mixon, of Dade City, Fla., Miss Maude Adams, of Birmingham, Ala.; Mr. and Mrs. H. Huie, of Forest Park, Ga.; Mr. and Mrs. Rolin Mixon, of Palmetto; Mr. and Mrs. Gus Evans, Misses Fannie Mae, Annie Belle and Delia Harper, of Jonesboro.

Mr. and Mrs. Harper left immediately after the ceremony on a motor trip through south Georgia and Florida. After their return they will be at home at 203 East Point avenue, in East Point.

Lovely Bride-Elect

Miss Eleanor Spence, lovely daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Cleland Spence, whose engagement, announced today, to Rufus Lettle Le Grand, is of widespread interest.

Miss Speaks To Wed Ernest C. Barrett.

Announcement is made by Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Speaks of the engagement of their daughter, Gladys Italyne, to Ernest Elmer Barrett, formerly of Marietta, the wedding to take place Thursday afternoon, November 27.

Miss Speaks attended school at the Girls' High and was a graduate of the class of 1920. Her mother was formerly Miss Bessie Stevens, of Birmingham, Ala. Her father is prominent in railroad circles. She is related to the Prosser, Nelson and Cowan families of Alabama and Georgia.

Mr. Barrett is the eldest son of M. L. B. Barrett and a brother of Grady and Linton Barrett. His mother was the late Mrs. M. L. Barrett, formerly Miss Navada Freeman, a belle and beauty of the state.

Shower Given Miss Wheeler.

A pretty event of Saturday was the miscellaneous shower given by Mrs. A. G. Sullivan at her home on North Howard street in honor of Miss Gladys Wheeler, a bride-elect.

The house was beautifully decorated with vari-colored summer flowers.

Interesting contests were enjoyed, after which refreshments were served.

Mrs. Sullivan was assisted in entertaining by Mrs. Collie Haygood.

The guests included Misses Ruby and Coral Morris, Gladys and Lurline Pullen, Florence Askew, Mary Chaffin, Vivian Barre, Mable Powell, Theo Allen, Kate Johnson, Ruby Hoffman, Sue Kendricks, Margaret Bean, Mrs. J. D. Brown, Mrs. Dunn, Mrs. Ballentine, Mrs. Stacy Jones, Mrs. J. L. Ivey, Mrs. Carl Duckett, Mrs. F. E. Crockett, Mrs. B. Sockwell, Mrs. Haygood and Miss Dorothy Wheeler.

Mrs. Gresham Weds Charles B. Cannon.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Godfrey announce the marriage of their sister, Mrs. Dorothy McCreary Gresham, to Charles Borromeo Cannon on Saturday, August 30, in Atlanta.

Judge and Mrs. Cannon have returned to the city and are at the Dalton pending the completion of their new home.

Miss York Weds John Vernon Grant At Lovely Ceremony

One of the most beautiful fall weddings of great interest to a number of friends throughout northeast Georgia was that of Miss Edith York to John Vernon Grant, of Clarkesville, which was solemnized Thursday afternoon, September 18, at 3:30 o'clock, at the Clarkesville Baptist church.

The church was exquisitely decorated in mountain laurel, ivey, palms and ferns, which formed a background for the floor vases filled with marigold and asters and the silver candelabra holding unshaded tapers.

Preceding the ceremony Miss Ruth Barron, of Toccoa, sang "O Promise Me." Following her, Miss Ethel Barron rendered a piano solo, Liszt's "Love's Dream." Miss Ruth Barron then sang, "Believe Me if All Those Endearing Young Charms," accompanied by Miss Ethel Barron, pianist, and Boyd Franklin, violinist.

To the strains of the wedding march from "Lohengrin" came the bridesmaids, Miss Grace York, youngest sister of the bride, and Miss Maudie Ree Grant, the youngest sister of the groom, and the groomsmen, Wilson Bird, of Atlanta, and I. L. Farmer, of Clarkesville. They entered by twos down the side aisles, crossing in the center, the groomsmen taking their places back of the bridesmaids. Miss Grace York and Miss Grant wore dresses of blue beaded charmeuse, small hats and accessories to match. They carried arm bouquets of pink and lavender asters tied with pink and lavender tulle.

Miss Myrtis York, sister of the bride, as maid of honor, entered alone. She was becomingly gowned in golden brown charmeuse trimmed in brown fur and a large brown hat. Her bouquet was of Ophelia roses.

Next came the flower girl, little Miss Mable York, in a dainty yellow crepe de chine dress. She carried a beautiful basket filled with asters and rose petals, tied with a fluffy lavender tulle bow.

Preceding the bride came the ringbearer, little Jimelle Farmer, wearing a dainty frock of flesh-colored crepe de chine. She carried the ring on a silver tray showered with white satin ribbons.

The bride entered with her father, who gave her in marriage. She was lovely in a handsome tailored tan charmeen dress with a small brown velvet hat and sabel neckpiece and accessories to match. She carried a beautiful shower bouquet of bride's roses and swainsona. Her only ornament was a platinum bar pin, the gift of the groom.

The bride was met at the altar by the groom and his best man, D. T. Cannon, of Athens.

The impressive ring ceremony was performed by Rev. J. W. Farmer, pastor of the church.

During the ceremony Moskiski's "Serenade" was softly played.

Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Grant left by motor for points in Florida.

The bride is a very accomplished young woman, possessed of a charming personality, being a graduate of the Georgia state Collee for Women. She is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. C. York.

Mr. Grant is the eldest son of Sheriff and Mrs. J. O. Grant, of Habersham county. He served his country in the navy during the world war. He is a member of the Habersham post of the American Legion.

Mr. and Mrs. Grant will reside in Cornelia after October 1.

Miss Adele Frohsin Weds Max M. Tarna, of New York

Marked by beauty and simplicity was the marriage of Miss Adele Frohsin, daughter of Jonas Frohsin and the late Mrs. Frohsin, to Max M. Tarna, of New York, taking place at high noon Thursday, September 18, at the home of the bride's brother and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Rothberg, on Springdale road.

The Rev. Dr. David performed the ceremony in the presence of the immediate families.

The bride was lovely in a handsome three-piece suit of hunter's green bengaline silk and cloth combined. The dress was fashioned of silk trimmed in gold braid, while the coat was of the cloth elaborately trimmed in sable fur. She wore a smart close-fitting hat to match, trimmed in gold braid. Her corsage bouquet was of orchids and valley lilies.

Following the marriage service, Mr. and Mrs. Rothberg entertained at an informal wedding breakfast.

Mrs. Rothberg wore an attractive gown of black georgette crepe.

The rooms of the home were artistically decorated with pink roses, smilax and ferns, the colors of pink and green being effectively carried out in the decoration of the table.

Mr. Tarna and his bride left in the early afternoon for Greenbrier, White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., going to New York on October 1, where they will make their home at the Emerson hotel.

Miss Hearn Weds John H. Fielding.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Simeon Russell announce the marriage of their sister, Susan Amy Hearn, to John Hale Fielding, Saturday, September 13, at the First Christian church in Jacksonville, Fla.

Mr. and Mrs. Fielding will make their home at Eastport, Fla.

The bride formerly resided in Atlanta, and was chief clerk in the city school superintendent's office, under Professor W. M. Slaton and the late Major W. F. Slaton.

The Beguiling
Ensemble Frock

A delightful fashion fact is this beautiful costume—the dominating mode for winter. . . It has the richness of the fur-trimmed suit, the chic of the dressy frocks—when the coat is removed—the luxuriousness of a handsome coat—the elegance of a harmonious ensemble . . . Significant features are the wonderfully handsome material, the richness of the finest furs.

The model sketched is made of imported Navy Chamoise Cloth, bodice and sleeves of gray Faille silk, richly braided in all-over design in gray and blue silk braid. . . . Kit fox borders extend down each side of the front. There is a luxurious fox collar and broad bandings on sleeves.

Millinery Gossip From the French Salon

NEW models are arriving daily, fresh from the ateliers of houses whose names are known to the women of Atlanta. They bring to our salon a spirit of verve—as the French say it—of charm, and style and originality combined, as we say it.

THE DIRECTOIRE — Austere as ever—is a prominent mode—but with modifications that lend it new charm and fit it to bobbed heads.

SPANISH THEMES — Are to be found in colors and shapes direct from the Bal de l'opera.

SWIRLING PLUMAGE — Curling plumes, lustrous peacock, in the perky new pom-poms that Reboux has sent from Paris.

And of no little import are the pricings—thoughtful of your purse to an extent you never expected . .

Our Ship Has Come In—

YOU will be ready to believe that it has been unloaded in our center display window when you see there a really marvelous array of European importations. You will see exquisite things from France, Austria, Switzerland, Germany, England and Belgium of such dazzling beauty and intricate workmanship that one wonders indeed—"Where do such as these come from?" . . . For beauty enhancement, for the enrichment of your home, for the thrill of possession . . .

—In your boudoir you may have the pleasure of a real lace scarf for your dressing table, patchwork lace pillow tops, French boudoir pillows—center for your night table; the same in petit point and antique gold lace; antique lace and silk damask scarf and center for the library table. Smart leather novelties, hand-tooled and gold inlaid; hand-etched steel jewel and cigaret boxes—cigaret cases and vanities of Bakelite, enamel and cloisonne.

—French enameled Perfume Vanities and jeweled boxes; electric flower sprays, Ecrase leather novelties and desk sets; French and English dolls.

—Real Belgian lace handkerchiefs, French linen handkerchiefs for men and women; the famous Appenzell handkerchiefs made by hand in Switzerland; ostrich plume fans, French and Viennese beaded bags; novelty silk bags and hand-embroidered silk shawls.

—Men's finest French silk neckwear; hand-made handkerchiefs and hand-etched cigaret cases; hand-tooled bill folds—gold inlaid; novelty bead necklaces, appliqued net scarfs; real amber beads.

It is a happy suggestion that here is a veritable mecca for the choosing of gifts — and not so far ahead of the gift season.

Better Homes Committee To Give Banquet and Dance Thursday

A delightful echo of the Better Homes celebration put on in this city in May, will be the banquet given at the Atlanta Woman's club banquet hall Thursday evening, September 25, by the Better Homes committee in honor of all the chairmen, representing the various civic and commercial organizations in the city and merchants who furnished equipment and supplies for Atlanta's prize-winning campaign.

The banquet will form an interesting feature of "Boost Atlanta Week," conducted by the Junior chamber of commerce, and the new song, "Toot Atlanta," will be introduced at the banquet. Mrs. Newton C. Wing, who has been Atlanta chairman for the national "Better Homes in America" movement, two years, during which time Atlanta has succeeded in capturing the third national prize in 1923 and the second in 1924, will present Eugene Black as toastmaster, who will in turn call on specialists in better homes work.

The reception committee will be composed of Mayor and Mrs. Walter Sims; G. C. Bowden, representing the chamber of commerce; Mrs. H. G. Hastings, representing the fifth district Federated Women's clubs; Mrs. T. T. Stevens, president of the city Federation of Women's clubs; Mrs. E. D. McDonald, Parent-Teacher council; Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of schools; Julian Boehm, president Inter-Civic clubs; Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, Atlanta Woman's club; Mrs. Samuel Inman, Mrs. Clifford Walker and Mrs. Albert Thornton.

Mrs. Arthur Hazzard, treasurer of the committee, has been appointed chairman for the banquet arrangements, and will be assisted by Mrs. J. H. Lorenze, secretary, and the following committee chairmen who had charge of the Better Homes Week celebration last May: Mrs. James Logan, Mrs. Henry Bernard Scott, Mrs. Stacy Ernest Hill, Mrs. P. G. Fabel, Mrs. Cleve Webb, Mrs. De Los Hill, Mrs. Roger Wilson, Verna O'Neal Watkins, Mrs. Arthur Merrill, Mrs. J. H. Wheeler, Mrs. George Ripley, Mrs. Calvin Stanford, Mrs. J. C. Sanders, Mrs. Frank Naedele and Mrs. Edward Hardaway Smith.

Mrs. De Los Hill, Better Homes chairman of music, will have charge of the musical program during the dinner, contributed by the following artists of Atlanta: Miss Jacqueline Moore, harp solos; Mrs. W. O. Chears, vocal numbers, and Mrs. De Los Hill, piano solos.

The dinner will be served in the beautiful banquet hall of the club and the tables decorated with souvenirs of Better Homes week. Following the dinner will be a reception and dance for the members and guests of the committee. Mrs. Frank Naedele, who was "house mother" during Better Homes week, will have charge of the punch bowl.

Guests of honor at the dinner will be: Governor Walker, Mrs. A. P. Brantley, president of the State Federation of Women's clubs; Paul Norcross, president of the chamber of commerce; Mrs. A. H. Brenner, vice president Georgia federation; Rev. Le Craw, president of the Junior chamber of commerce; Mrs. Norman Sharp, president Atlanta Woman's club; A. L. Myers, president Retail Merchants' association; Major John Cohen, Clark Howell, F. W. Lawrenson; Bert Adams, president Atlanta Real Estate board; A. D. Standford, president Atlanta Electrical association, and Mrs. George Wight, president of the Music club.

One hundred invitations have been sent out to organization chairmen and to merchants who materially assisted in the Better Homes week, accompanied with permission to bring their friends, if reservations are made with Mrs. J. H. Lorenze, secretary, Hemlock 4673, before noon of September 24.

Charming Young Girl To Enter College Here

Photograph by Thurston Hatcher.

Miss Catherine Louise Guller, who enters Agnes Scott college this fall, having graduated last June from Concordia Hall, in Jacksonville, Fla. Miss Guller is the beautiful granddaughter of Mrs. Edward Boyleston Walker, of Eastlake, and the late Major Walker, one of Atlanta's pioneer citizens, and is a direct descendant of Philippe de Trieux Patroon, a member of the first Huguenot colony coming to New Amsterdam in 1624.

Brenau College Social News.

The official opening day of Brenau was filled with a number of well-planned programs for the students. At 11 o'clock the Brenau auditorium was opened and every place filled with the student body and visitors. On the stage were members of the faculty.

The program was opened with a prelude given by John E. McCormick, organist.

Dr. T. J. Simmons delivered an address of welcome and Dr. Sibley, of the Presbyterian church, welcomed the students in behalf of the churches of the city.

The Chamber of Commerce was represented by Owen McDermott, the president, and Sidney Smith represented the Rotary club.

Miss Ione Parkinson, as president of the Student union, and Miss Lena Patterson, president of the Young Women's Christian association, gave brief but hearty words of welcome into the institution and its privileges.

Dr. and Mrs. H. J. Pearce on Wednesday evening entertained the faculty and students.

The reception halls and oriental parlors presented an attractive setting. In the receiving line were Dr. and Mrs. B. J. Pearce, Dr. T. J. Simmons, Miss Eva P. Pearce, Dr. and Madame Bela Varkonvi, Mr. and Mrs. John Hendricks, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Fuhlbregge, Dr. Tonn Hummel, C. B. Griffin, Miss Irene Eldridge, Miss Carrie Bell Robinson.

Miss Nelle Reece introduced the guests, and those assisting in entertaining were Miss Ella D. Winfield, Miss E. B. Mason, Miss Pauline Trimble, Miss Cecile Ramsey and Mrs. E. B. Michealis, Miss Edith Hampson, Miss Lena Patterson, Miss Catherine McQuary, Louise Edwards.

The members of the Rotary club and a large number of citizens of the city promptly at 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon loaded their cars with students, faculty members and visitors and a sight-seeing trip over the city was enjoyed.

At 6 o'clock they were invited to a delicious picnic lunch, which had been prepared at the country club.

The "Get Acquainted" party given by the members of the Young Women's Christian association to the new students on Saturday evening proved to be altogether delightful.

The gymnasium was decorated in blue and white, the Y. W. C. A. colors, and the reception committee, composed of the members of the executive cabinet dressed in white, with blue girdles, greeted the guests.

Otto W. G. Pfefferkorn, pianist, opened the season 1924-25 with the first faculty recital.

Mr. Pfefferkorn's ability as a pianist is widespread and in his very successful career as a pianist he has probably never played with more ease, finish and artistry than on this occasion.

The recital given on Friday evening by John Hendricks, baritone, assisted by Mrs. E. B. Michealis, accompanist, was decidedly one of the most enjoyable events of the college year.

The first vesper service of the Young Women's Christian association was held on Sunday evening at 6:30 o'clock. The members of the executive cabinet took part in the services, which were led by Miss Edith Hampson. On the program were Miss Mary Jim Oliver, Miss Mary Mitchell and Velma Hollingsworth.

Miss Eva F. Pearce, dean of the college, arrived on Friday after three months' tour in Europe. With Miss Pearce was a party of thirteen who visited practically all the important countries and cities of Europe.

Miss E. B. Mason, counsellor, has returned from a three weeks' trip to Pittsfield, Mass., "in the heart of the Berkshires."

Miss Ella D. Winfield spent the summer with her mother, Mrs. Arthur Dillon, at Monteagle, Tenn.

Miss Pauline Pearce spent the summer in Atlanta and Gainesville.

Mr. and Mrs. John Hendricks and daughter, Ann, from New York, arrived at the college Friday.

Among the recent additions to the faculty are Dr. and Madame Bela Varkonyi, of Budapest, who are members of the conservatory faculty.

Dr. Tonn Hummel arrived from New York to take charge of the department of German and philosophy.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Fuhlbregge, of Chicago, Ill., have arrived. Mr. Fuhlbregge has the department of history.

Miss Clarita Edye, head of the Spanish department, has returned from a summer spent in Boston, New York, Hartford and Portland, Me.

Miss Grace Jean Salls, dean of the school of oratory, spent a delightful summer in New England.

Miss Bertha Todd has returned from her vacation, which she spent in Hapeville, Ga.

Mr. and Mrs. John Weygandt are pleasantly situated in North Hall after the vacation season. The greater part of the summer was spent at Glen Cottage, Hope, Pa.

Miss Cecile Ramsey, head of the department of domestic science, has returned from her vacation, which was spent on the eastern shore of Maryland, Washington and Greenville, Ga.

Miss Lois Secor spent the summer months in Lansing, Mich.

Madame Berry spent the summer in Decatur, Ga.

Miss Ethel Bowers, of Mt. Gretna, Pa., visited several points in Florida and later went north for the remainder of the summer.

C. W. Griffin, of the department of physics and science, spent the summer in Anderson, S. C.

Miss Irene Eldridge, of Beloit, Wis., arrived several days ago and will be head of the department of mathematics.

Dr. E. H. Murfee has returned to the college to take up his work as head of the department of science.

Decatur Woman's Club To Hold Benefit Fair.

The Decatur Woman's club decided at the regular meeting held last Friday to give one big benefit fair all day Saturday, September 27, and this will take the place of all benefit activities that the club might give up to February, 1925, the end of the club year. At this affair the club expects to raise money sufficient to purchase the lot on which the clubhouse is to be built.

The benefit fair will be given around the courthouse square in Decatur. There will be attractive booths and places of display, and the president of the club, Mrs. Frank B. Bond, has appointed the following chairmen: Mrs. Royal Jones, games and fake baby show; Mrs. W. S. Elkin, Jr., benefit bridge; Mrs. R. E. Gardner, cold drinks, popcorn and peanuts; Mrs. Marshall George, candy; Mrs. W. S. Young, dance; Mrs. E. Myers, photography; Mrs. E. C. Hicks, cakes and pastry; Mrs. Charles Weeks, sandwiches; Mrs. W. D. Hoyt, hot coffee; Mrs. E. B. Sutton, toys and novelties; Mrs. W. S. Nelm, wiener sandwiches; Mrs. J. M. Royal, cigars and cigarettes; Mrs. J. A. Campbell, announcements in schools; Mrs. A. F. Samuels, cash donations; Mrs. William Alden, Punch and Judy show.

Mrs. Walter Lamar Returns From Europe.

Mrs. Walter Lamar, of Macon, has returned from a summer of travel to such fascinating and seldom visited spots as Wales and the North Cape, as well as to the customary meccas of Americans abroad, London, Paris and Naples. Within the unusual itinerary selected by Mrs. Lamar was included such old world cities as Bruges, Ghent and Antwerp. Ten weeks in all, Mrs. Lamar spent reveling in the beauty and grandeur of northern Europe and the marvelous scenery of Wales, which she declares far superior to the famed effects of the Trossacks.

Then, of course, as a Colonial Dame, Mrs. Lamar visited Sulgrave manor and equally of course this great lady of the Georgia division, U. D. C., was present when Lee's bust was unveiled at the French military school of Saint Syr in Paris by Mrs. Livingston Rowe Schuyler, past president general of the U. D. C.; Miss Belle Perkins, of Virginia, a relative of General Lee, and Mrs. Lewis Bennett, of Wheeling, W. Va.

Lieutenant Colonel Morris, one of the directors of Saint Cyr, welcomed the delegation and accepted the bust on behalf of the school. Ambassador Herrick was a delightful speaker on this occasion. Among the prominent Americans present besides Mrs. Lamar were Dr. Edwin Alderman, president of the University of Virginia; Andrew Jackson Montague, ex-Governor of Virginia; Sheldon Whitehouse, charge d'affaires of the American embassy; Mrs. A. J. Smith, recording secretary general of the U. D. C.; Clarence G. Anderson, Jr., deputy secretary of the general Society of Colonial Wars, and Mrs. Anderson, president of the Georgia Colonial Dames; Miss Mary Temple, Tennessee state regent of the D. A. R.; Mrs. Charles D. Ward, national president of the Patriots and Founders of America, and Mrs. Frank Buchanan Screven. Following the presentation these distinguished guests were entertained at tea by the officers of Saint Cyr.

Household Shower To Be Given Sisters Of Parochial School

Ladies of Sacred Heart church will give the sisters of the parochial school a miscellaneous household shower at their new home, 33 Forrest avenue, on Monday, September 22, at 3 o'clock.

The sisters have returned here after spending the summer in study at Catholic university, Washington, D. C., and the parish is welcoming this opportunity of meeting the sisters and giving expression to appreciation for their faithful and untiring work for the children of the parish by fitting up their home and contributing to their comfort.

Cash donations will be more acceptable, but the following articles are needed: Rugs, furniture, linens, curtains, dishes, glasses, kitchen and pantry supplies and house-cleaning supplies. Make checks payable to Sister Augustine.

The following ladies will receive: Mrs. H. Fenton Luckett, Mrs. S. P. Stringfellow, Mrs. Philip Aicklen, Mrs. Nell Braddy, Mrs. C. W. Carver, Mrs. P. P. Hanley, Mrs. C. L. McGowan, Mrs. Alice O'Donnell. Sacred Heart alumni in charge of refreshments.

Marion Reese Has Birthday Party.

Mrs. W. B. Reese was hostess at a children's party, Wednesday afternoon, at her home in celebration of the tenth birthday of her son, Marion.

Throughout the dining and reception rooms, pink and white flowers were artistically used in decorating. The dining table held as a central decoration a large birthday cake, embossed with pink roses holding 10 pink candles, and encircled with the favors carrying out the color scheme. A dish of pink and white mints was placed on each end of the table.

The motive of pink and white was further carried out with streamers which extended from the chandelier to the corners of the room.

Many games and contests were enjoyed by the children. Miss Gwendolyn Hall and John Fowler, both won a box of candy for pinning on "Billy Whisker's" tail.

The guests included Gwendolyn Hall, Mary Frances Jarrell, Mildred Reese, Lena Sweet, Rose Sweet, Christine Westmoreland, Ben James Arnold, Jack Clay, Marion Cobb, John Duval, John Fowler, Alvie Hall, J. H. Hall, Wilbur Jarrell, Gillman Lansdale, Paul Lansdale, Alvin Lovingood, Marion Reese, W. B. Reese, James Rowland, Ben Wheeler, Chester Wright and Harry Wright.

Twelve-Thirty Club Honored.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. McKenzie entertained the Twelve-Thirty club on Friday evening at "Pinecrest," the beautiful pavilion at Austell. Twenty-five members of this club composed of congenial friends were present. Dancing was enjoyed until a late hour.

Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Carnes, Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Christian, Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Couco, Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Brotherton, Colonel and Mrs. Ed Humphreys, Misses Carrie May Allen, Ann Turner, Pauline Pittard, Mamie Cole, Samnie Davis, Osee Wills and Mattie Couch; Harry Erwin, George W. Dykes, Hugh Milby, Wallace English, Harry Paker, P. D. Allen and Knox Poterfield.

Buckeye Woman's Club To Hold Meeting.

The Buckeye Woman's club will hold its first meeting of the fall on Tuesday, September 23, at the home of Mrs. W. E. Floding, 250 Myrtle street. Mrs. Floding and Mrs. Helbig will be joint hostesses.

The meeting will open promptly at 3 o'clock and every member is urged to be present as plans for the coming year will be discussed.

The club hopes to make 1924-25 a banner year in its history. Annual dues are payable at this meeting and members are requested to bring their garments for the needlework guild on Tuesday.

Mrs. John King Ottley will be a guest and will make a talk on "Tallulah."

The Buckeye Woman's club is on the honor roll as having recently pledged $100 for the federation's school, "The Light in the Mountains."

League of Women Voters To Hold Last Candidates' Luncheon

The candidates for aldermen in the first, fifth and tenth wards, Dr. W. B. DuVall, J. Allen Couch, Foster L. Hunter, Carl Dolvin and C. M. Ford will be speakers at the Atlanta League of Women Voters candidates' luncheon Tuesday at the Peacock cafe at 12:30 o'clock. Everyone is urged to attend this luncheon as it is the last of the series before the city primaries to be held September 24. Reservations may be made by calling the luncheon chairman, Mrs. W. A. Arnold, Ivy 6549, or by calling league headquarters, Main 3346. A plate lunch will be served for 75c.

Miss Eleonore Raoul, chairman of organization of the Atlanta League of Women oVters, has returned from a four months' vacation in France and other parts of Europe.

The Atlanta League of Women Voters announces the resignation of Mrs. B. M. Boykin from the board, made necessary on account of Mrs. Boykin's active interest in the campaign of one of the candidates for the city primary.

It is one of the policies of the League of Women Voters not to indorse, as an organization, any candidate. It is also a rule of the league that an yofficer who takes an active part in the campaign of a candidate must resign her officership.

Mrs. Boykin has been the chairman of the eighth ward and her ability has meant a great deal to that branch of the league.

Kle Club Meeting Called for Tuesday.

The Kle club will meet Tuesday morning at 10:30 o'clock, owing to the fact that Wednesday, the regular meeting day, is city election day. The president, Mrs. Ed Bond, will preside.

Early in the year the members of this club pledged themselves to give two garments a year to be distributed to the needy at Christmas. Mrs. F. H. Naedele, chairman of this "Hope-Chest" committee, urges those members who have not already done so to bring these garments to the meeting Tuesday. Children's garments are preferred, but others are acceptable.

Mrs. Gus Cooper, chairman of the music committee, has arranged an interesting program, including Miss Josephine Ingram, soloist. Miss Ingram has been heard and enjoyed by some of the club members on previous occasions, and those who have heard her know what a pleasure is in store for them.

Wedding Plans of Miss Wilson And Mr. Milam of Interest

Cordial and sincere interest accompanies the wedding plans announced today of Miss Mary Louise Wilson and Dr. Frank Milam.

The wedding will take place Saturday, October 25, at the home of the bride's parents, Dr. and Mrs. Allan Wilson, in Winchester, Ky. Dr. Wilson, the bride-elect's father, who is pastor of the Christian church, will perform the impressive ceremony before a small assemblage of friends and relatives.

The bride-elect is a daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Allan Wilson. Mrs. Wilson was formerly a Miss Arabelle Holloway, of Ohio.

Miss Wilson will have as her only attendant Miss Virginia Kingsberry, of Indianapolis, Ind.

Dr. Milam will have as his best man his brother, Arthur Milam, of Jacksonville, Fla.

Miss Wilson graduated from Swarthmore college at Philadelphia, Pa., and later did specialization work in the study of girls of the adolescent age and also studied the psychology of work among girls at Columbia university, New York.

Miss Wilson came to Atlanta in February to take the place of head executive of the Camp Fire Girls. She came from Augusta, Ga., where she had been doing wonderful and profitable work with the Y. W. C. A.

In coming to Atlanta to take up this worth-while work among girls, Miss Wilson threw herself into it with enthusiasm and ardor, and by her untiring efforts, charming personality and youth has accomplished things far beyond the expectation of the group of Atlanta women interested in the Camp Fire Girls, but not above their aims and ambitions, as this beneficial work among girls hopes to reach a very high standard.

Miss Wilson established headquarters in a room at the Chamber of Commerce building. This bare, unattractive room, with very little expenditure of money, was transformed into the most charming, hospitable place by her efforts and ability.

Miss Wilson, in her cooperation with, and constant devotion to this very deserving work, has received the support of the public school authorities for the Camp Fire Girls, and has established interesting courses for guardians.

She has formed unique classes in baby craft; that is, teaching the girls to bathe and dress babies and directing them in the care of babies. She has also started helpful classes in hand craft, such as basketry, batik work and gesso work.

One of the most interesting classes she has formed is one in interior decorating, which is to educate the girls in the art of making home attractive and cozy with the smallest amount of expenditure of money.

Miss Wilson conducted a most successful week of camp life this summer at Camp Highlands, where 126 girls enjoyed a most delightful outing.

Dr. Milam's home was originally in Jacksonville, Fla. He is a son of R. L. Milam, of Jacksonville, Fla. He graduated from Vanderbilt university in Nashville, Tenn., and has recently graduated from Rush Medical college in Chicago, Ill., where he is now making his home.

Dr. Milam has some very interesting plans with the Rockefeller foundation, with which wonderful institution Dr. Milam is now connected.

Miss Shannon Weds Mr. Call Friday.

A beautiful event of September 12, was the wedding of Miss Dollie Shannon to Luther Perry Call, which took place at 8:30 o'clock at the First Presbyterian church with Rev. L. W. Latham officiating.

The church was artistically decorated in green and white. A background of stately palms and soft ferns was used. A tall white pedestal basket containing white dahlias stood in the center. On either side stood seven-branch candelabra with burning tapers.

A program of exquisite music was rendered by Paul Hubbard just before the ceremony. Mrs. Harold Coolidge sang "I Love You Truly" and the bridal chorus from Lohengrin" was played while the bridal party came in and "Berceuse," from Jocelyn, was played softly during the ceremony.

First to enter were the ushers, Fred De Christina, J. C. Millechamp, Jr., W. M. Grant, Harry De Milli. Next came Miss Gladys Murdoch, bridesmaid, with Dudley Shelnutt, groomsman. Miss Murdoch was gowned in turquoise blue crepe beaded in crystal beads and carried a bouquet of pink rosebuds. The other bridesmaid carried the same flowers.

Miss Mary Grennor and R. L. Schneider entered next. Miss Grennor was gowned in pink crepe beaded in crystal beads.

Miss Fannie Mae Shannon, maid of honor, came next. She was gowned in Nile green crepe and carried a bouquet of Ophelia roses tied with Ophelia tulle.

The bride entered with her father, Hugh Shannon, who gave her in marriage. She was gowned in white satin beaded in crystal beads and draped on the side. Her veil of tulle was caught at the head with a coronet of orange blossoms. The only ornament worn by the bride was a platinum bar pin set with a diamond, the gift of the groom. Her shower bouquet was of bride's roses and lilies of the valley. They were met at the altar by the groom and his best man, Donald Oberdofer.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the bride's home. Mrs. Luther P. Call, Sr., of Boston, Mass., the groom's mother, wore gray crepe and her corsage was of pink rosebuds.

Mrs. Hugh Shannon, the bride's mother, wore black satin and hat to match.

The home was beautifully decorated with dahlias, smilax and asters.

Miss Della Mae Murdoch kept the bride's book.

Mr. and Mrs. Call are now at their home, 295 East Fourth street.

Flower Lovers To Hold Meeting.

The Flower Lovers' division will meet at the clubhouse Thursday morning, September 25, at 10:30 o'clock. There will be plants for sale by the flower exchange committee.

Mrs. Thompson Weds Mr. White At Quiet Ceremony

A wedding of interest was that of Mrs. Thelma Thompson, a granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hutchins, of Fairburn, Ga., and George White, which was solemnized Saturday morning at 11 o'clock at the East Atlanta Christian church.

Rev. Henry H. Dilliard, pastor of the church, performed the impressive ceremony in the presence of the immediate families and a few intimate friends.

The church was beautifully decorated and the chancel was banked with palms and ferns in attractive arrangement. Tall white baskets filled with long-stemmed white roses and brass cathedral candelabra holding white burning tapers were placed on either side.

Mrs. Hudson was the only attendant, and wore a henna crepe gown fashioned on attractive lines. She carried a shower bouquet of pink roses and lilies.

Mr. Tuchworth acted as Mr. White's best man.

The bride entered to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march, played by Miss Christine Hunt. During the ceremony she played softly "I Love You Truly."

The bride was lovely in a powder blue canton crepe gown fashioned on graceful lines. She carried a beautiful bouquet of bride roses and valley lilies, and wore a becoming hat of blue.

Following the ceremony the bride and groom left for an extended motor trip through Georgia and Tennessee. Upon their return they will make their home in Atlanta, where Mr. White is connected with the Keely company.

Miss Mullins Weds Neal C. Monroe.

An event of early autumn was the marriage of Miss Margery Mullins and Neal C. Monroe, which took place at 4:30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon at the West End Baptist church, in the presence of an assembly of relatives and friends, the Rev. W. M. Seay, pastor of West End Baptist church, officiating.

The church was decorated with palms and ferns. In front of the altar was a bank of palms; in the center was a tall stand graced with white dahlias and asters. On each side of the altar brass candlesticks were placed, entwined with ferns and each holding seven white tapers.

During the assembling of the guests Miss Helen Chaid played softly. Before the ceremony Miss Annie Barton sang "Believe Me If All Those Endearing Young Charms." To the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march the bridal pair entered, and Schubert's Serenade was softly rendered during the ceremony. Mendelssohn's wedding march was played at a recessional.

The bride was lovely in a traveling dress of tan charmeen, modishly fashioned along straight lines, and trimmed with designs in pastel shades wrought in the material. Her hat was a smart model of tan velvet. She carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses and valley lilies.

Immediately after the ceremony the bride and groom left for a ten days' trip to Savannah and other points of interest, after which they will be at home in Atlanta.

The bride is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Mullins. Mr. Monroe is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Monroe, and is connected with the Atlanta branch of the Pittsburg Plate Glass company.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Littleton, Jr., of Savannah, Ga., and W. H. Mullins, of Montgomery, Ala.

The eexrcises will include musical programs, healing, testimonials, lectures and free distribution of Unity literature. Imelda Octavia Shanklin, head of Unity editorial department, will spend a week in Atlanta this winter. Robert Bryan Harrison, director of the school, will preside and extends a cordial invitation to the public to attend.

Miss Byrd Bride-Elect Is Honored

Miss Roslyn Byrd, a lovely bride-elect of October, was honor guest at a bridge tea Saturday afternoon, at which Miss May Ivey entertained at her home on Highland avenue.

The home was beautifully decorated with flowers, and the attractive color scheme of yellow and white, was artistically carried out in the decorations and in the mints and ices.

Assisting Miss Ivey in entertaining were Mrs. Clara Ivey, Miss Ruth Ivey and Mrs. Charles Giddings.

Miss Ivey wore an attractive gown of blue crepe and cream lace.

Miss Byrd's lovely gown was of black satin fashioned on becoming lines.

Mrs. Clara Ivey wore a handsome model of black crepe.

Miss Ruth Ivey's gown was of tan crepe.

Mrs. Charles Giddings wore a lovely gown of peach georgette crepe beaded with crystals.

The prizes were attractive French novelties, and the honor guest was presented with a Venetian glass lemon plate and fork of unique design.

Those invited were: Misses Rosylin Byrd, Florrie Byrd, Elizabeth Byrd, Strickland, Lorene Oakley, Anita Stewart, Daisy Ramseur, Pattie Harrison, Mrs. Late Doswell, Misses Susie Anderson Mozell Miller, Mrs. Charles Giddings, Miss Ruth Ivey and Mrs. Clara Ivey.

Mrs. C. N. Weems Hostess at Tea.

Mrs. C. N. Weems was hostess on Friday afternoon at tea in honor of her sister, Mrs. W. D. Allison, of Pittsburg, Pa.

Tea was served in one of the attractive private dining rooms of the Biltmore hotel and the table had as center decoration a large basket of pink roses and ferns. Each guest was given a beautiful rose as a favor and the hand-painted place cards were decorated in roses.

The guests included Mrs. T. A. Splan, Mrs. E. E. Stead, Mrs. R. Frank McCormack, Mrs. Edwin N. Helbig, Mrs. W. E. Flodding and Mrs. W. E. Quallian.

Much Interest in the Engagement Of Miss Dudley and Judge Reagan

The announcement of the engagement today of Miss Anne Taylor Dudley to Judge Frank Reagan is of interest to a great number of people throughout the south.

The engagement was announced in Winchester, Ky., Thursday at a bridge-luncheon given by Mrs. H. H. Moore at her home on French avenue. The beautiful home was tastefully decorated with flowers in lavender and pink.

After the guests were seated strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march issued from the piano and little Miss Virginia Lee Moore, attired in a crepe dress, marched down the stairs, bearing a large bouquet of pink rosebuds, each bud having an envelope tied with pink ribbon on it and inside the envelope was the following announcement: "Cupid's Glance, Hearts in a Trance—Dudley-Reagan." Each guest was presented with a rose. The place cards and tallies were suggestive of the bride-to-be.

After the announcement and best wishes the guests were served a tempting three-course luncheon, followed by bridge.

Miss Dudley, who is one of the most charming and accomplished girls of the blue grass, comes from one of the oldest and most artistocratic families of Kentucky. She is a descendant of pioneer members of the old Virginia families of Taylor, Parrish and Dudley, who crossed the mountains in the footsteps of Daniel Boone and out of the wilderness helped to carve the commonwealth of Kentucky. One member of the family, Bishop Dudley, was the first Episcopal bishop of Kentucky.

Judge Reagan is a son of Judge E. J. Reagan and Mrs. Lula M. Reagan, of McDonough, Ga., and a grandson of Judge and Mrs. Joseph Reagan, and an A. B. graduate of Emory college in the class of 1899.

He was for a number of years actively identified with the Georgia press, having managed and edited a number of weeklies, and his editorials attracted wide attention. He has been a member of the Georgia bar since 1900 and is now licensed to practice in the supreme court of the United States and all the lower courts. For four years he was judge of the county court of Henry county.

Judge Reagan has also been prominent in church and civic work, having for many years been a Sunday school superintendent and an officer in his church and for quite a while was actively engaged in Boy Scout work.

For a number of years he has been specializing in federal taxes and has made an outstanding success in that intricate field.

Judge Reagan is a deep student of history and is chairman of the committee appointed by the Macon Chamber of Commerce to prepare and publish the history of Macon. In addition to his duties as chairman, he has written several chapters of the history.

He is also a charter member of the Kiwanis Club of Macon.

Judge Reagan is building a home in Shirley Hills, at Macon, to which he will bring his bride from their honeymoon.

Mrs. Game Gives Party to Visitors.

Mrs. Joe Game entertained at a bridge-luncheon on Wednesday, at her home in Druid Hills, complimenting Miss Ivey Rickley and Miss Sue Hart, of Columbus, Ga., the guests of Mrs. D. E. Patterson. Luncheon was served at the individual tables.

The top-score prizes were won by Miss Esta Cherry, Mrs. L. L. Warner and Mrs. Tom Strickland. Consolation was cut by Mrs. A. V. Gilbert.

Mrs. Game was assisted in entertaining by Mrs. Patterson and Miss Ruth Frost.

The guests were Miss Cherry, Mrs. Warner, Mrs. Gilbert, Mrs. E. W. Ramspeck, Mrs. Arthur Hippe, Mrs. Gilbert Beers, Mrs. D. W. Durden, Mrs. Charles Griffin, Mrs. C. A. Wilmarth, Mrs. Albert Staley, Mrs. Roy Sanders, Mrs. J. E. Tilford, Mrs. Jack Vires, Mrs. Copeland, Mrs. Strickland, Mrs. Claud Lokey, Mrs. Charles Henry, Mrs. W. C. Wallace, Mrs. Harry Reynolds, Mrs. Joseph C. Greenfield, Jr., Miss Sara Harris, Mrs. J. Gregory Murphy, Mrs. Nesbit Tilly.

Convention Calls Issued For Savannah and Quitman

Georgia division, U. D. C., will meet in annual session in Quitman on October 28, according to Mrs. Walter Grace, president of the division. The convention call is already in the mails and conveys the announcement that Stone Mountain will be the keynote of the convention. Of outstanding interest will be the welcoming of two new chapters into the division, the Robert Toombs chapter at Toomsboro and the Anna Davenport Raines chapter in Savannah.

The general U. D. C. convention will be held in Savannah, beginning Tuesday evening, November 18, at 8 o'clock, with Mrs. Frank Harrold, president-general and Georgia's distinguished citizen, presiding.

Mrs. Walter Lamar, of Macon, past president of the Georgia division, is program chairman for the general convention, and Mrs. A. B. Hull, president of the Savannah chapter and past president of the Georgia division, will be official hostess in Savannah and is chairman of the program of social events, which are always a delightful feature of U. D. C. conventions.

The convention call from the president-general follows:

To the Chapters of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, Greetings and Best Wishes: The thirty-first annual convention of the United Daughters of the Confederacy will convene in Savannah, Ga., on Wednesday, November 19, at 9:30 a. m. The opening exercises will be held Tuesday evening, November 18, at 8 o'clock, in the municipal auditorium.

Chapters are entitled to representation according to membership, as follows: "One vote for the first seven members and one additional vote for every additional twenty-five members, provided per capita tax has been paid, and provided that every member so claimed shall have been registered by the registrar general." Art. IV, Sec. 4. It is urged that chapters send delegates to the convention, but where this is impossible, they "may name as proxy any duly elected delegates from the same division. No proxy shall be given from one state to another when there are duly accredited delegates from that state, provided one person does not hold more than one state proxy." Art. IV, Sec. 4. Elect delegates at once, fill out blanks and send as follows: One to Mrs. W. N. C. Merchant, chairman committee on credentials, Chatham, Va.; the second to your division president, that she may be able to forward same to committee on credentials ten days before convention; the third to be taken by your delegate to convention for identification. (Art. 16). No credentials will be recognized that are not in the hands of the committee on credentials five days before convention. Art. VI, Sec. 2.

The official headquarters are at the Hotel De Soto. Business sessions will be held in the municipal auditorium.

Atlanta Chapter U. D. C. To Hold Meeting.

The Atlanta chapter, U. D. C., will hold the regular meeting at the chapter house, 156 Juniper street, at 3 o'clock on Thursday afternoon, September 25.

Mrs. Forrest Kibler, the treasurer, will be on hand to receive dues from all who have not paid on 1924.

Plans will be perfected at this meeting for the booth at the Southeastern fair. Miss Edith Wing Peacock, well-known psychologist, will deliver the address, the occasion being the celebration of the birthday of Admiral Raphael Simms.

Miss Emma Kate Philips, post-graduate and medalist of the Leffingwell violin school, will play several numbers, accompanied by Mrs. T. Taylor.

West End Woman's Club Holds Meeting.

The September meeting of the literary department of the West End Woman's club, Mrs. H. H. Turner, chairman, featured Mrs. M. M. Burns, of West End, and Miss Dorothy Collier, a versatile young reader and expression teacher. The spacious club rooms, 305 Gordon street, were decorated in blooming begonias and ferns.

Mrs. M. M. Jones began with a talk on Helen Hunt Jackson, showing her poetic gifts in contrast with Ella Wheeler Wilcox, Ellen Gates and Jessie Rittenhouse, each of whom is famous for one or more ballads. Miss Dorothy Collier followed, giving selections from "Worthwhile," by Ella Wheeler Wilcox; "Your Mission," by Ellen Gates; "My Wage," by Jessie Rittenhouse, and "Sign of the Daisy," by Helen Hunt Jackson. Miss Collier, before reading each poem, told in few words the thought, and then she read the poem, giving a sympathetic rendering.

A costume interpretative reading and dance of "The Minuet," by Mary Mapes Dodge, and "Grandma Told Me All About It," was the part assigned to little Helen Davis, the pretty daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Davis, of Olympian circle. The humorous ballad, "Calomel," was read. "The Spider and the Fly" from Mary Howitt, and the modernized form by another gifted woman was read by Miss Sarah Turner. The reading was excellently done and the modern idea of the old ballad was clearly shown in a clever dance with a Victrola accompaniment.

Mrs. Emmett Brogdon presented the gifted vocalist, Mrs. M. M. Burns, known to many as the daughter of Charles D. Tillman, the famous song writer. Mrs. Burns delighted her audience with two numbers, "A Song of the Hills," and "Today," by Carrie Jacobs Bond.

Mrs. H. H. Turner analyzed the poetic gifts of Emily Dickinson in a paper showing insight into the character and genius of that strange New England girl.

The social feature was a silver tea, sponsored by Mrs. Sidney Smith, assisted by Mrs. Henry Lee. Misses Dorothy Brogdon and Dorothy Collier presided at the punch bowls. Miss Anna Kaune, of New Mexico, the visitor of Mrs. Frederick Rice, was among the honor guests, also the following new members: Mrs. Anderson, Mrs. Alice G. Means, Mrs. Homers C. King, Mrs. J. B. Edwards, Mrs. D. F. Deene.

Mrs. H. H. Turner discussed the faults of the present registration system of voters and the burden which so many election days places upon the citizenship and suggested a remedy for the situation.

The art department will meet on Wednesday, September 24, to perfect plans for the exhibit for the Southeastern fair, and all members are asked to let the club know the nature of the help which will be given.

College Park Music Club Gives Tea.

Last Wednesday afternoon the College Park Music Study club gave a most delightful tea at the home of Mrs. S. W. Jones. The spacious parlors were artistically decorated with cosmos, scarlet salvias and other gay garden flowers. After the program a pleasant social hour was enjoyed by the club members and their visiting friends. Miss Helen Knox Spain and Miss Mary Jo Merritt were the guests of honor of the occasion. Mrs. Pogue and Miss Spriggs were also distinguished guests from the Atlanta club.

The program was most delightful. Miss Spain, introduced by Mrs. Hugh Couch, briefly and beautifully presented the course of study this department of music will follow this season. The club is indeed fortunate and happy to have Miss Spain direct this study course. The text-book used will be the one suggested by the federation.

Miss Merritt read "Mary Rose," a weird little play in three acts, and her interpretation was very impressive. The department of drama, under Miss Merritt's directorship, promises to be most delightful.

The first regular meeting of the club will be held Wednesday, October 8, at 3 o'clock at the Presbyterian church. All members and prospective members are most cordially urged to be present on time. This will be an open meeting, and all who are interested in the work of the club are invited and will be given a hearty welcome.

Covington Chapter Nominates Officers.

The first fall meeting of the Covington chapter, U. D. C., was held September 16. Mrs. Luke Robinson, as delegate, and Mrs. J. M. Eden, as alternate, were elected to represent the Covington chapter at the state convention, which meets in Quitman October 28.

The nominating committee made the following report: President, Mrs. R. A. Norris; first vice president, Mrs. C. A. Sockwell; second vice president, Mrs. J. C. Upshaw; recording secretary, Mrs. C. A. Dial; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Earl Smith; treasurer, Mrs. Mac Pope; auditor, Mrs. C. A. Sockwell; parliamentarian, Mrs. J. F. Rogers; press chairman, Mrs. W. Trox Bankston.

Second Painting Contest for Boys, Girls Announced

The second of a new series of drawing and painting contests for boy and girl readers of The Atlanta Constitution will be found today in the Boys' and Girls' Section of the Sunday Magazine. This contest, like the one last Sunday, offers boys and girls a chance to win one of 10 cash prizes, and in addition 25 tickets to the Lyric theater to see the Lyric players.

These contests are proving more popular every week, with thousands of letters being received from boys and girls in Atlanta, cities and towns of Georgia and also from many places in the other states in the southeast.

Boys and girls, no matter where they live, are eligible to enter this contest. All that is necessary is for pthem to finish the drawing in the Boys' and Girls' Section and mail it to the Boys' and Girls' Editor of The Atlanta Constitution before Friday noon of this week.

The first prize is $1 in cash. The next nine prizes are 50 cents each. Then there are the 25 tickets to the Lyric theater, which have been offered by Montague Salmon, manager of the Lyric theater.

In addition to the prize contest page, there will be found in the Boys' and Girls' Section of the Sunday Magazine each week the famous Buttons and Fatty comic page, the illustrated lessons and poems by Jane Corby, colored cutouts, and pages with stories, jokes and things to make, making this section the biggest and best in the south.

Fidelis Officers To Be Hostesses.

The newly-elected officers of the Fidelis class of the Gordon Street Baptist Sunday school will tender a reception to the retiring officers and the members of the class at the home of the teacher, Miss Essie Hall, at 244 Gordon street, Wednesday afternoon, from 3 to 5 o'clock.

Tallulah School Stressed To P.-T. By Prof. Sutton and Mrs. Stevens

Tallulah Falls School for Mountain Girls and Boys was paid high tribute by Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of the public schools of Atlanta, in an address to the presidents of the Atlanta Parent-Teacher council, assembled at luncheon on Friday at the James L. Key school as the guests of Mrs. Howard McCutcheon. Mr. Sutton spoke of the mountaineers as the future salvation of America and declared earnest consideration should be given the proper deucation of Georgia's mountain children. Of Miss Eliza Shirley, a graduate of Tallulah and assistant to the principal, Miss Nannie C. Davis, Mr. Sutton spoke in the highest terms, declaring the education of even one such helpful young woman justification for the effort put into the school by the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, by which the school is owned and directed.

Mrs. T. T. Stevens, president of the Atlanta Federation of Women's Club, was an honor guest at Mrs. McCutcheon's luncheon and aroused much enthusiasm among P.-T. A. presidents by her address on Tallulah Falls school, in the interests of which a drive for $20,000 is being conducted by the Atlanta federation, with Mrs. Stevens as chairman of the drive. Mrs. C. V. Peterson and Mrs. Arnold D. Gregory responded with tentative plans for adding scholarships to the facilities at the school.

Scholarships contributed by Atlanta citizens were recently added to by W. S. Witham, who gave five of $150 each for the current year, with the understanding that they are to be used for the neediest girls applying.

At the luncheon given last Tuesday for the presidents of clubs having memberships in the Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs and the workers in the Tallulah drive for $20,000, it was decided to "keep right on for Tallulah" until the full amount of $20,000 is raised, the amount reported on this occasion totaling $18,000 in cash and pledges.

Headquarters for the drive are 604 Chamber of Commerce building, and this office is open each day from 9:30 to 2 o'clock. Mrs. Stevens requests all interested in this great undertaking to report here, the phone number being WAlnut 0941.

Workers may meet at headquarters to plan and to consult with Mrs. Stevens and Mrs. John King Ottley, president of the board of trustees of Tallulah school.

Atlanta Elks To Give Dance.

Atlanta lodge, No. 78, B. P. O. Elks, have resumed their regular weekly dances at the home, 40 East Ellis street. The dance begins promptly at 9 o'clock and continues until 12. Good music has been secured by the dance committee. All officers are expected to be present to assist in the entertaining, and every Elk is urged to be present. All visiting Elks are cordially invited.

THE Answer SHOE
Made by the A. E. Little Process

The stitch in time,—

PREVENTING foot trouble is a great deal easier than remedying it—and far less expensive.

THAT tired feeling you frequently experience may not come from walking or standing, but may be due to incorrect shoes that distort the normal posture of the foot and accentuate the strain.

THE special stitching of the "Answer" shoe results in an arch supporting suspension construction that holds the foot in a glove-like grip—in a position Nature intended.

If you have experienced the first warning signs of approaching arch trouble come in and have one of our specialists show you.

Griffin College Set Members Will Return to Their Studies

Griffin, Ga., September 20.—Miss Annie Ray Mark and W. W. Gay Jr., of Brooks, were quietly married Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock at the home of Judge and Mrs. James A. Drewry, on Thirteenth street, the Rev. Mr. Drewry officiating. Only the two families and a few intimate friends were present.

Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Gay left on a wedding trip to points in the west, after which they will make their home in Brooks.

September chronicles the return of numbers of the school and college set to their chosen alma maters throughout the country.

Miss Rhoda Nichols is studying this winter at the Chambers School of Landscape Gardening at Cambridge, Mass.

Miss Mary Nichols, last year's graduate, has entered Sweet Briar college, Sweet Briar, Va.

Miss Nellie P. Baggett has returned to Greenbriar college in Louisburg, W. Va.

Miss Alice Searcy has resumed her studies at Randolph-Macon in Lynchburg, Va.

Miss Rosalind James and Miss Mary Ella Hammond have returned to Agnes Scott, Decatur, Ga.

Miss Mary Wilson is attending the North Avenue Presbyterian church school in Atlanta.

Miss Ethel Cochran is a student at the Sixth District Agricultural & Mechanical college, Barnesville.

Misses Maria Turnipseed and Mary Starr are co-eds at the University of Georgia.

Miss Nell Pounds will finish her course at the State Normal school in Fredericksburg, Va., this year.

Misses Lena Mae Walker, Emory Drake, Louise Carver and Thelma Faulkner are students at Bessie Tift college, Forsyth.

Misses Virginia Flynt and Marie Weldon will enter Wesleyan college, Macon. Miss Gwendolyn Williams will continue her studies at this popular Georgia college.

Misses Douglas Montgomery, Martha Law, Eurnice Bolton, Eloise Dye, Thelma Bryant, Ruth Phinazee, Vivian Peel, Mary Louise Warren, Addie Haisfield and Maggie Holman are attending the Georgia State College for Women, Milledgeville.

Misses Louise McKneely, Miriam Johnson, Nell Bridges, Emily Pounds and Loetta McKneely are taking business courses at the Southern Business college in Atlanta.

Misses Gladys Reed, Gladys Westmoreland and Ethel Goodman are attending Draughon's Business college in Atlanta.

Henry Smith has returned to Gainesville to resume his studies at Riverside Military academy. Phillips Brooks and William Griffin will attend the Philadelphia Textile school.

William Nichols, Jr., has gone to Sewanee, Tenn., where he will attend the Sewanee Military academy.

Wayne Traer will enter Oglethorpe university, Atlanta.

Will Rice will be a student at Mercer university, Macon.

Allen Eakes will take a special course at the University of Chicago.

Minoe Wheatton, Harrell Drewey, Marcus Carson, Jr., William Scott, Jr., Tofey Smaha and Monroe d'Antignac have returned to the University of Georgia.

Friar Thompson and Gordon Wheaton entered the State university this fall.

Harry Rogers and Harris Drewry will study medicine at Emory university.

Other Griffin boys who will attend Emory are Ralph Williams, John Dorsey, Franklin Sibley and Henry Holsey Moore.

The old boys returning to the Georgia School of Technology, Atlanta, are Lewis Brewer, Frank Binford, Jr., Lawson Johnson, John Hammond, Roger Rawls and George Wheaton.

John Brower, John Hall Murray, Donald Baird and George Tuno, members of the 1924 Griffin High school graduating class, have entered Georgia Tech.

Ben Brown, Jr., is taking a course at the Southern Business college in Atlanta.

Among those who are teaching in Georgia schools are Miss Carrie Eakes, at Fulton county high school, Atlanta; Miss Annie Goddard, in Moultrie; Forest Cumming, John Drewry and Ralph Thaxton, at the University of Georgia, Athens.

Mrs. Oscar W. Sibley and Miss Catharine Sibley entertained Saturday afternoon at a bridge-tea at their home on Tenth street in compliment to Mrs. Henry A. Willey, who is leaving soon for the Hawaiian Islands. Red, white and lavender asters, zinnias and dahlias graced the house. Thirty-five guests were invited to meet the guest of honor.

An interesting meeting of the Women's Auxiliary of St. George's Episcopal church was held Friday afternoon in the Grantland Memorial parish house, the president, Mrs. Robert Shepard, in the chair.

Mrs. Henry R. Stucky, educational secretary, announced the subject of the next program would be Hawaii, to which mission field the Rev. Henry A. Willey, beloved rector of St. George's church, and Mrs. Willey will go early in October.

Mrs. Elizabeth M. Watt and Mrs. W. G. Nichols, who have just returned from a summer spent in the east, gave interesting and graphic accounts of the Sunday school work in some of the eastern churches during the summer months.

Mrs. Hilton Lynch entertained in honor of her children, Marthalyn and Marcus, at a garden party Friday afternoon at the home on West Solomon street. Many games were enjoyed on the spacious lawn. Later the children assembled for games. The girls were given postcards, cut in jungles, and the boys were given cards to match the girls'. Each boy found his partner for the first prom by matching his card with hers. In the same way the young folks formed their partners for the second prom by matching numbers.

Mrs. Lynch was assisted in entertaining by Mrs. J. H. Newman, Mrs. Julia Pritchard and Miss Effie Saunders.

The Epworth League of the First Methodist church entertained at a party Thursday evening at Experiment in honor of the boys and girls going away to school. The guests were entertained on the banks of the beautiful lake in the Experiment Station grounds. The young people enjoyed songs and games, after roasting wieners and toasting marshmallows. Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Mixon, Mr. and Mrs. Claude Drewry were the chaperons.

The house department of the Sunday school of the First Christian church sponsored a tacky party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Mullens Friday evening.

Miss Annie Mae Blissett and Alfred Smith were married quietly Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock in the Christian church, the Rev. A. A. Gilley performing the ceremony in the presence of a few friends and relatives. The bride and groom left immediately for Atlanta to visit relatives. After a short wedding trip they will make their home in Griffin.

The Girls' Service club entertained at a party at the Baptist cottage Tuesday evening in compliment to the Griffin girls who are going away to school this year.

A guessing contest was enjoyed by the honor guests. They were given a number of questions, the answers to each which was a name of a popular magazine. Miss Nell Pounds won the prize, an attractive novelty, for answering most of the questions correctly.

The girls were divided into two groups.

Georgia Woman's Christian Temperance Union

President, Mrs. Lelia A. Dillard, Box 216, Emory University; Vice President, Mrs. Marvin Williams, 306 N. Moreland avenue, Atlanta; Field Secretary, Mrs. Mary Harris Armor, 500 Fifth avenue, Eastman; Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. W. G. Cotton, Box 1146, Columbus; Recording Secretary, Mrs. Sarah Poullain Campbell, 703 Second street, Macon; Treasurer, Miss Josephine Hammond, Monroe; Editor The Georgia W. C. T. U. Bulletin, Mrs. August Burghard, 431 Johnson avenue, Macon; Music Director, Mrs. A. B. Cunyus, Cartersville; Evangelist, Miss Carabel Wilkes, 121 Pierce avenue, Macon.

Coming Convention Attractions

Mrs. Ella A. Boole, of Brooklyn, vice president national W. C. T. U., who will address state convention.

BY MRS. AUGUST BURGHARD, Macon, Ga.

The Woman's Christian Temperance union, a perennial in the field of clubdom, has reached the garnering and the harvest home season, in other words, the time has arrived for compiling reports for the year book and the state convention, so Georgia White Ribboners are "up and at it."

Only state officers, departmental superintendents and district presidents make annual reports at convention, and the reports will appeal to the eye more than the ear, as only a few minutes can be alloted to each. Much ingenuity will be employed in visualizing reports.

Several spectacular demonstrations are being planned in addition to a march of allegiance to the constitution through the principal business streets one afternoon.

Among the eagerly anticipated convention attractions will be the Bible readings by the W. C. T. U. evangelist, Miss Carabel Wilkes, of Macon, and the songs of the state musical director, Mrs. A. B. Cunyus, of Cartersville. Several leading women of this state will take part on the program as arranged by the acting state president, Mrs. Marvin Williams, of Atlanta.

Mrs. Boole, of New York, to Speak.

Georgia is fortunate in having Mrs. Ella Alexander Boole, of Brooklyn, N. Y., treasurer of world's W. C. T. U. and vice president of the national and president of the New York state W. C. T. U., as speaker at the state convention in Albany, October 14-16.

Widely and favorably known as a magnetic speaker of force, persuasive and resourceful, Mrs. Boole has an enviable place in the heart of American audiences. Her interest in other countries and their problems has taken her to many European capitals and all over this country from Florida to Alaska.

She was the Georgia convention speaker when Covington entertained the gathering in 1915. The Emory university class in public speaking with their instructor, attentive and critical, sat in the audience. The next day in their class room, they were unanimous in their declaration that Mrs. Boole obeyed every rule laid down for public speakers.

Mrs. Boole, by the way, has addressed hundreds of college and university student bodies, is not only a college graduate but possesses the right to place Ph.D. as well as A. B. after her name.

During the past summer, Mrs. Boole studied conditions in England and France, seeking to learn their attitude toward world-wide prohibition and trying to determine what progressive steps had already been made by them along that line.

Speaker From Ohio.

The convention will have another world's and national W. C. T. U. officer as convention speaker, Miss Mary B. Ervin, of Xenia, Ohio, who is general secretary of the Loyal Temperance Legion, the children's branch for both organizations, and earlier she held that office in the Ohio W. C. T. U.

She is a young woman of rare attainments, is a forceful, earnest and eloquent speaker and holds her audiences as but few do. She has taught Latin and served as dean of women in her alma mater, Cedarville College, Ohio. She has met with remarkable success as an organization builder.

Messages to Delegates.

The officers of the Albany W. C. T. U., Mrs. J. R. Hudson, president; Mrs. N. H. Vaughn, secretary; Mrs. H. S. Harper, treasurer, and Mrs. W. A. Sumter, president of Dougherty County W. C. T. U., send greetings to Georgia white ribboners through this column, saying: "It will be a great pleasure to the Albany union to entertain the convention delegates, we are anticipating a happy, profitable time." They send the following message:

"Send names of delegates to Mrs. Sidney J. Jones, 530 Broad street, Albany, as early as possible. If any delegates are to stop with friends or relatives in Albany, please so state, otherwise homes will be provided. Upon receipt of names of delegates (in time), a card will be mailed to each, which they are to present to the chairman of homes committee upon arrival."

Columbus W. C. T. U. Receives Letters From Candidates.

The W. C. T. U. of Columbus, through their presidents, Miss M. Theresa Griffin, president of Muscogee county union; Mrs. Charles H. Davis, president of Theresa Griffin union, and Mrs. T. C. Garrett, president of the Rose Hill union, sent letters "as registered voters" to candidates.

Forty-two candidates signed and returned the following statement on cards enclosed in the letters:

"I observe the 18th amendment and the Volstead act by personal total abstinence and refusal to buy or keep alcoholic liquors.

"I stand for strict enforcement of the Volstead act regardless of class or race distinction.

"I stand for adequate policing of the entire city and county of the kind that will do the most to cripple and destroy the illicit liquor business."

The state signers were: William J. Harris, United States senator; William C. Wright, congressman; Clifford Walker, governor; S. G. McLendon, secretary of state; George M. Napier, attorney general; W. J. Speer, state treasurer; William A. Wright, comptroller general; C. E. McGregor, commissioner of pensions; T. E. Patterson, prison commissioner; Nash R. Broyles, chief judge of the court of appeals; George F. Hunnicut, commissioner of agriculture; John W. Clark, for commissioner of pensions; O. R. Bennett and Albert J. Woodruff for railroad commissioners, and twenty-eight local candidates.

New Zealanders in Gainesville.

Mrs. Rachel Don and Miss Christina Henderson, president and secretary of the New Zealand W. C. T. U., addressed more than 500 persons at a union service at the First Baptist church in Gainesville Sunday evening.

Social News From Hapeville.

Mr. and Mrs. Adelbert Brown, who were married August 20 in Jonesboro, have returned from their wedding trip and are at home to their friends at the residence of Mrs. Emma Humphries, on Georgia avenue. Mrs. Brown before her marriage was Miss Virginia Dunn.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. McKenzie entertained 25 friends on Friday evening at Pinecrest, Austell, Ga.

Mrs. William Henry Clarke, of Ellentown, DeKalb county, arrives today to visit her son and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Clarke, on Atlanta avenue.

Miss Mamie Lark Brown has returned to her home in Birmingham, Ala., after a 10-day visit to relatives.

Dr. J. R. Nesbit continues critically ill at his home on College avenue.

The engagement of Miss Gwendolyn Brooks to Harold Adams, of Riverdale, Ga., is of interest to their many friends.

Miss Emily Norris, of Luthersville, Ga., and Miss Frances Benton, of Atlanta, were the week-end guests of their aunt, Mrs. Thomas Redmond, on Virginia avenue.

Mrs. K. B. Irvine entertained the members of the Bob It club very delightfully on Monday afternoon at her home on Stewart avenue.

T. F. Jones, Jr., and Luther Jones, of Miami, Fla., are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. D. P. Pace.

Mrs. E. M. King was hostess to the Book club on Friday afternoon at her attractive new home on Atlanta avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Clarke entertained a number of friends and relatives at a dinner party on Sunday.

R. I. Greene, of Leesburg, Ga., is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. D. P. Pace.

Mrs. George M. Couch is in Athens, the guest of her sister, Mrs. Marion Conolly.

An interesting announcement to many friends was that of the engagement of Miss Winnifred Gibson, to Edwin R. Landers, the marriage to be solemnized at an early date.

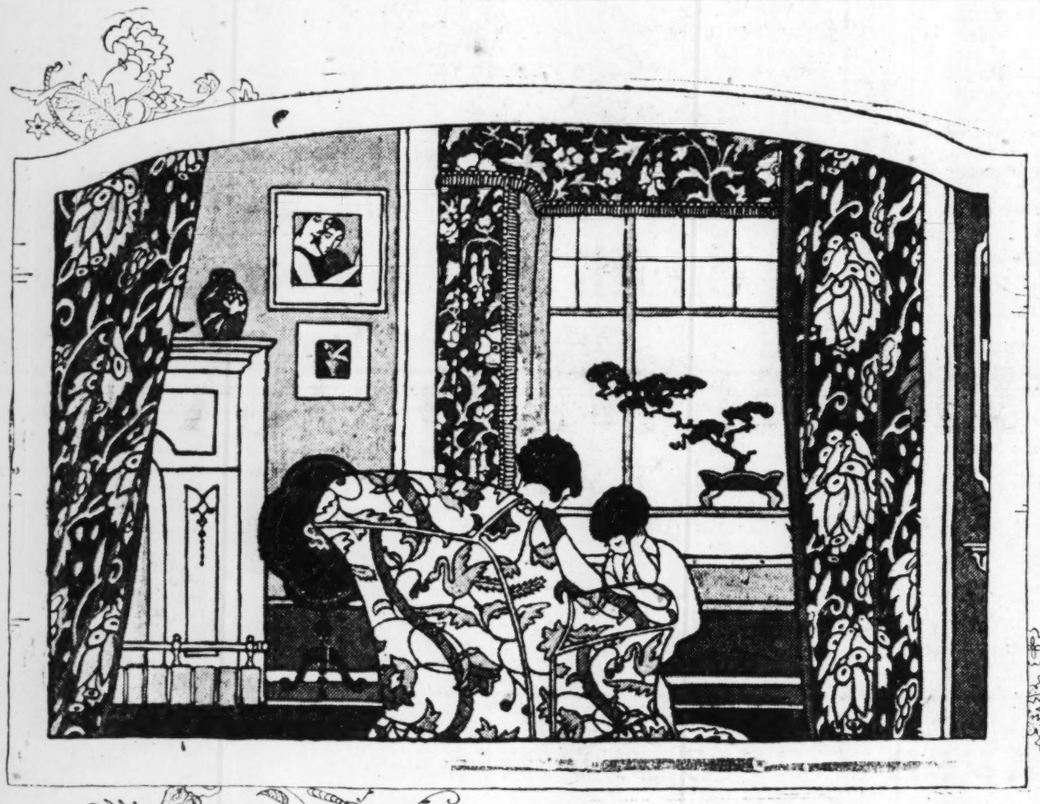

Mozley Faculty Is Entertained.

Patrons of the Mozley School for Girls were entertained informally Friday afternoon by Mrs. J. W. Mozley in honor of the members of the faculty.

Miss Annie Bowie, teacher of expression, gave several interesting readings; Miss Anita Cockrell told of work being done in the primary department; Miss Alma Murphy explained the benefits derived from glee club and kindred activities. Miss Mozley gave a short talk in which she stressed the importance of regular attendance of pupils, and urged the mothers to provide a special place and time for their children's home-study.

The Emersonian Dramatic club met Tuesday afternoon and elected the following officers: Alverda Thomas, president; Mamie Lucy McAdams, vice president; Mabel Davis, secretary; Mildred Settle, treasurer. Margaret Allen was appointed chairman of the program committee.

Message From Mrs. Trammell

Chapter Regents and Chairmen of Patriotic Education:

Your state committee patriotic education desires to voice and emphasize the program mapped out by our national committee.

Too much stress can not be placed on a fitting observance of Constitution day, and appropriate celebration of other days of historic significance. The awarding of prizes for excellence in the study of United States history, and for essays on historical subjects, is a most important feature of our work. Our celebration of anniversary days should be made with dignity and attractiveness, being held in school buildings, the homes of civic organizations, industrial plants, or wherever importance and broad emphasis can best be attained. As chapter regents and chairmen, please give this phase of patriotic celebrations careful thought for the psychological effect of such events is measured by the tact and wisdom put into plans for same.

Should Know These.

We, as Daughters of the American Revolution, should familiarize ourselves with the Declaration of Independence and constitution of the United States, never forgetting the American's creed, and the flag code. These features should be given a place on our yearly programs. Cannot your chapter arrange to place copies of the Declaration of Independence, the constitution of the United States, Americans' creed and flag code in your local schools? These, of course, should be framed for preservation. The cost will be small—you can make the results large.

Our national chairman advises a policy of concentrated effort in our schools for patriotic education, asking that we consider the needs of the several schools endorsed by our organization and decide upon one, or more, as objects of especial interest. This is a wonderful plan, as definite interest inspires definite and concerted action and brings about definite results. In making our decision as to what school we most wish to patronize, do not forget the opinion of a noted educator who advised us that "the worthiness of a school is proved by the quality of boys and girls it turns out."

With this month's chapter meetings we start a new year's work. Will you not join hands and heart with me for good work in the right direction for patriotic education? We can but believe that a high ideal of civic and national duty is necessary for the life, the welfare, and the continuous well being of our nation.

"Those love truth best who to themselves are true,
And what they dare to dream of, dare to do."

Respectfully,
MRS. P. B. TRAMMELL,
State Chairman Patriotic Education.
Dalton, Ga.

Bedrock of Work.

Patriotic education is bedrock of D. A. R. activities and Mrs. Trammell is appealing to Georgia daughters for continued interest. At the thirty-third congress the national committee reported a gift to the N. S. D. A. R. from the states of $169,916.53 (the student loan fund and Americanization committees made separate reports). Of this amount Georgia is credited with $16,536.95. Georgia has done well in the past, may the results be greater for the coming year?

The thought uppermost when we speak of patriotic education is our work among the Indians and southern mountaineers.

There are in round numbers 85,000 Indians of school age in the United States and of these eligibles 75 per cent are in school. The government with but one exception offers in their schools, study only to high school work. To solve the Indian problem, we must have Indian leaders, and to be a leader among his people the Indian must be educated. In this great work of leading the American Indian to citizenship, the D. A. R. is concentrating its gifts to the American Indian institute in Wichita, Kansas.

Among the accredited Southern Mountain schools is first in interest to the Georgia D. A. R., the Berry school, near Rome. Last year among the 2,500 visitors who registered, there were representatives from nine countries and 44 states. Starting in 1902 with a little industrial school, it is perhaps the largest school of its kind in the south. At the present time $150,000 is necessary to carry on the work, and it is interesting to note that about 90 per cent of this amount is received in donations of $100 or less.

There is the Kate Duncan Smith school in Alabama to which the D. A. R. of that state last year gave $25,000. The South Carolina daughters gave $64,399.59 to the Tamassee school in their state. There is the Southern Industrial institute in North Carolina, also Crossnore and it will be remembered that last year this school cleared $12,000 from the sale of old clothes sent by D. A. R. chapters in various parts of the United States. The Matthew T. Scott, Jr., and Maryville schools are helping in the education of the boys and girls of Kentucky and Tennessee.

The American International college, where foreigners are receiving education for leadership among the aliens who are in our country ask our support. Many state regents report gifts to this worthy institution, the most substantial was from the Massachusetts D. A. R., $60,000 for a dormitory.

May the reports of what other states are doing, inspire us to greater efforts and let us "join hands and hearts with" Mrs. Trammell, our state chairman, that her dream of what Georgia might do in patriotic education the coming year, will be realized.

Constitution week is with us and it is hoped that every D. A. R. in Georgia will study closely the greatest of all state documents—the constitution of the United States. As descendants of illustrious forebears the task falls imperatively upon us to look to the preservation of our institutions and the foundations of the national government. In our study let us grasp the meaning of American citizenship, its obligations and its privileges. In the spirit of restlessness, lawlessness and lack of reverence and respect for the constitution which is sometimes evident may we as individuals and as organized chapters be potent factors in obedience to and enforcement of the law.

Chapter Reports.

Miss Maude Penn, chairman of revolutionary graves of Sergeant Jasper chapter, Monticello, reports that on September 6 the chapter unveiled a marker on the grave of Sergeant Henry Slappey. This valiant soldier, aide-de-camp on Colonel Hampton's staff, carried to his grave scars from wounds in the battle of King's mountain. During his life he was honored by General Andrew Jackson, who, when he was on his way to the seat of the Indian war, stopped to see Sergeant Slappey and saluted him as a Revolutionary hero. Chapter members, descendants of Sergeant Slappey and citizens of Monticello attended the exercises, joining in the singing of patriotic songs.

Mrs. Price Heard, newly elected regent of Fort Early chapter, Cordele, has laid plans for a splendid year's work. "Woman in American History" is the subject for study outlined in the yearbook, in addition all patriotic days will be observed. Other officers elected are: Vice regent, Mrs. J. M. Diffee; second vice regent, Mrs. E. L. Kiker; recording secretary, Mrs. W. H Westbrook; corresponding secretary, Mrs. T. J. Royal; treasurer, Mrs. C. D. Terrell; historian, Mrs. A. S. Bussy; registrar, Mrs. D. H. Standard; auditor, Mrs. J. E. Lindsey; reporter, Miss Martha Fox; genealogist, Miss Ruth Hamilton; parliamentarian, Mrs. Max E. Land; librarian, Miss Sara Strozier; chaplain, Mrs. W. P. Flemming.

Lafayette day was observed at the opening meeting or the Sergeant Newton chapter, Covington. Mrs. Upshaw, the regent, pledged the chapter her untiring efforts for the coming year. The work as outlined by Mrs. Talmadge was discussed.

The yearbooks of General James Jackson chapter, Valdosta, are off the press. The cover is the D. A. R. blue and the printing is white.

Hon. John T. Boifeuillet addressed the Atlanta chapter on the "Framing of the Constitution" at the first fall meeting. Mrs. Wylie presided. Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, president general, has signally honored Mrs. Wylie by appointing her on the national committee D. A. R. student loan fund.

At the first meeting of the Joseph Habersham chapter, Atlanta, a program celebrating Lafayette day and constitution day was carried out. Mrs. Scott, regent, accepted for the chapter a handsome picture of Lafayette, a gift of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Loridans. Mrs. F. J. Paxon presented a beautiful chapter flag in the D. A. R. colors.

War Mothers To Hold Rummage Sale.

The War Mothers Service Star legion will hold a rummage sale on Saturday, October 4 and Monday, October 6, place of sale to be announced later.

All members and the friends of the organization are requested to assist and to make donations of articles for the benefit of the sale.

Association To Hold First Fall Meeting.

The Ladies Memorial association will hold the first fall meeting Friday, September 26, at 3 o'clock, at Edison hall.

A full attendance is urged as important business will be transacted.

Judge, Mrs. Hutchins Give Lovely Party To Atlanta Guests

A lovely event of Tuesday evening in Lawrenceville was the party at which Judge and Mrs. Nathan Louis Hutchins entertained at their home on Grogan street, in honor of Miss Georgia Byrd and George Scott Candler, of Decatur, whose marriage will be an interesting event of October.

The spacious rooms where the game was enjoyed were artistically decorated with quantities of late summer garden flowers from the hostess' gardens—pink and blue predominating, these colors being used on the card tables, both for the covers and dainty bonbon baskets.

In the dining room an exquisitely appointed table was overlaid with a lovely lace cloth. In the center was a silver basket holding rainbow shades of roses, buddleias and gladoli. At artistic intervals were placed silver candlesticks holding pink tapers and alternating with these were dainty silver bonbon dishes holding mints. From the chandelier to the table rainbow streamers of tulle were caught, adding a soft and effective touch.

As the guests entered they were served coffee by Mrs. J. N. Nicholson, who assisted in entertaining, wearing a black georgette.

Mrs. Hutchins received her guests wearing a becoming gown of powder-blue crepe-satin. About thirty guests enjoyed the delightful occasion.

Lithonia Party Honors Visitors.

A most enjoyable social event of the week was the bridge-supper on Saturday evening at the home of Miss Ruth Tribble and Miss Ethel Tribble, in Lithonia, given in lovely compliment to a number of their Atlanta friends.

The out-of-town guests included Miss Julia Napier, of Decatur; Miss Birdie Lichenwalter, of Atlanta; Miss Grace Litchenwalter, of Atlanta; Miss Mary Frances Witherspoon, of Atlanta; Miss Evelyn Barnett, of Decatur; Miss Thelma Barnett, of Decatur; Colonel Childs, of Atlanta; Dr. Stothart, of Atlanta; Mr. Darby, of Atlanta; Bill Crowder, of Georgia Tech; N. D. May, Jr., of Macon; A. C. Tilton, of Atlanta; Talmadge Leak, of Atlanta; Messrs. Arthur Burke, Whitaker and McLemore, of Atlanta.

Dance To Take Place On Tuesday Evening.

A dance will take place at Lakewood park skating rink Tuesday evening, September 23, 8 to 11 o'clock. Music will be furnished by Bowling's orchestra (Dixie Syncopaters). The dance will be sponsored by Mrs. E. H. Reynolds.

Mrs. Rose Mae Ashby To Lecture Sunday.

"Mental Telepathy and Thought Transference" will be the subject of an interesting and instructive lecture to be given by Mrs. Rose M. Ashby, psychologist, Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, in the mahogany room of the Ansley hotel. There will be questions and answers pertinent to current psychological topics.

By request Mrs. Ashby will explain the psychic phenomena involved in so-called communication with the dead.

The public is invited to this meeting.

Girl Scout Training Classes Will Begin on Tuesday

The girl scout motto: "Be Prepared" applies to leaders as well as to scouts and interest for the next three weeks will be centered in the training class for captains and lieutenants, which will be conducted at girl scout headquarters, room 614 Chamber of Commerce, Tuesday and Thursday afternoons at 3 o'clock, and Saturday mornings at 10 o'clock, starting Tuesday, September 23, by Mrs. H. L. Parry.

The course of nine lessons is free and is open not only to registered girl scout leaders, but to any woman in the community who is interested in leadership of young girls, especially 'teen-age girls.

The captain of a troop must be at least 21 and an assistant or lieutenant at least 18 years old.

After the summer vacation which, for girl scouts, has been mainly devoted to camping, swimming and other out-of-door activities, the 35 registered troops in Atlanta are bringing fresh enthusiasm to the planning of the fall and winter activities under the head of service, scout tests and recreation.

There have been many additions to the membership, both of scouts and leaders and any inquiries as to the girl scout program or any of the local activities will be gladly answered at the Atlanta headquarters, sixth floor of the Chamber of Commerce or by telephoning WAlnut 0040.

The leaders' training course will be conducted by Mrs. Harvey L. Parry, local director, according to the following schedule:

Tuesday, September 23, 3 p. m., principles and aims of scouting and methods of organizing and conducting a troop under the patrol system and court of honor; Thursday, September 25, 3 p. m., games for general recreation; How to adapt games to scout material as a method of instruction in scout work; Saturday, September 27, 10 a. m., dramatics, ceremonies, formations; Tuesday, September 30, 3 p. m., nature badges, method of approach to nature study; Thursday, October 2, 3 p. m., singing, choice of songs, how to lead singing, dramatization of ballads and folk songs; Saturday, October 4, 10 a. m., hiking, outdoor fire-building and cooking; Tuesday, October 7, 3 p. m., handicraft; Thursday, October 9, 3 p. m., psychology of the 'teen-age girl; Saturday, October 11, 10 a. m., how to give tests.

Musicale To Be Given at Church.

A splendid musical program will be given at the Capitol View Baptist church next Monday night, September 22, at 8 o'clock. The Georgia railway and Power Co. quartet will sing Kimo Kalio's "Sunset Four," will be heard on steel guitars. Mrs. T. C. Cox and Mrs. A. S. Gostin will give humorous readings. An enjoyable time is promised all who attend.

No admission will be charged, but an offering will be taken for the building fund. Everyone cordially invited.

VALETERIA—a new word, but a word that you'll welcome when you learn what it means.

It means "valet service"—not the kind of service you've known in the past, but a new service that shapes your clothes while it presses them—just as was done when they were made.

We can say most in fewest words by telling you that this is the remarkable new service that's now being advertised in The Saturday Evening Post.

Keely's Coats Are Laden With Rich Fur!

And They Are Charmingly Youthful: Versatile in Style: Superb in Color

When the coat is the basis of one's entire winter wardrobe, naturally a great deal of thought and care is given in its selection. Hats must match, frocks harmonize, and shoes and gloves tastefully complement it. There is nothing quite so important as getting the right coat.

We present these new coats of ours with a great deal of pride—not just because they are ours, but because of their pleasing variety, sprightly graceful silhouettes and sumptuous materials and colors. And their furs—we've never shown such variety before. There's leopard, mink, beaver, seal, blended and natural squirrel, and fox in every color. We mention a few outstanding models:

A stunning model is shown in beaver color Gerona, with collar, cuffs and wide band around bottom of blended opossum. Priced $129.75.

Rust color Mokine fashions, a very original model which has an unusual scalloped trimming combined with bands of mink. Priced $109.75.

Another very handsome coat combines distinctive style with a rather unusual material new to the season in a heavy corded effect. Deep cuffs, collar and pockets of beaver. Price $159.75.

Penny colored Kashmana is the inspiration for a lovely coat, which is luxuriously banded, collared and cuffed in mink. Priced $139.75.

Very youthful and very unique is a bottle green Kashmana collared with leopard. The leopard is used as an inlay in sleeves and skirt. Priced $99.75.

A distinctive coat for one who doesn't care for fur. Material is that new suede-like fabric in brick shade, embroidered in gold and self tones. Has novelty cap sleeves and graceful throw collar. Price $79.75.

Not only are coats in a bewildering array of youthful types, but there's a fine range of matronly styles and out sizes.

$29.75 $39.75 $49.75 to $159.75

RULES FOR RIGHT LIVING:—Let all bitterness, and wrath, and anger, and clamour, and evil speaking be put away from you, with all malice: and be ye kind one to another, tender-hearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you.—Ephesians 4:31, 32.

A NAMESAKE'S STRUGGLE.

Since the beginning of the world war, when the present Transcaucasian republic of Georgia first came into the limelight there has been more or less interest and concern in this American commonwealth as to its little namesake in a far remote corner of Europe, struggling as it has and is for independence against the covetous machinations of soviet Russia.

Just a few days ago another rebellion broke out in the little republic and that of its sister, Azerbaijan. It has been quieted for the time, but the political situation is so tense and Georgia is so rich in natural resources that further aggression against the Russians may be momentarily expected. For while Georgia is a republic in name and by will of the people, and so recognized by the western powers, the state has been ruled during recent years by a Russian military dictatorship of the most ruthless character.

It is against this rule, which continues despite the rewards of war and against the outstanding voice of the people who have struggled long and desperately for independence in fact as well as in theory, that the recent revolt was directed, and among the democracies of the world sympathy is with the Georgians.

Before the world war this territory between the Black and the Caspian seas, inland lakes where Europe and Asia meet, was a part of the Russian empire, and repudiating entirely the sequences of war, in which the dynasty of Russia fell, the soviet regime has shown a dogged determination to maintain Russian rule, simply to confiscate the great wealth that Georgia and her sister, Azerbaijan, possess. In other words, the inhabitants of the Georgian republic are cursed by their riches.

Not only is Georgia rich in oil and copper, but possesses the greatest manganese reserves in the world. In 1913 practically half of the entire world's supply of this ore mineral came from Georgia. Therefore, it is easy to understand the selfish and avaricious purposes of soviet Russia in forcing a dictatorship in a republic over which at present it has no legal or moral protectorate, or even right of invasion.

The independent government in Georgia was organized in 1918. It received German protection at first.

This was before the armistice. By a special treaty of August 27, 1918, the Germans forced the Russian revolutionists to recognize the new republic, at which time it relinquished its protectorate, and left Georgia quite capable of handling her own affairs.

After the defeat of Germany the Russians illegally forced their military dictatorship upon Georgia and since the battles for complete freedom have broken out at intervals, but as yet without success.

In the Lausanne treaty with Turkey the European powers reserved for Georgia certain rights and special privileges in the Straits of Constantinople, thus recognizing the state's sovereignty; and in the recent treaty between Great Britain and Russia the former withheld its recognition of soviet control over Georgia and its neighbor, all of which accentuates European sympathy with Georgia in the fight with the Russian octopus.

The hope of Georgia is the approaching treaty between Russia and France, and the League of Nations.

While a rich, little republic, entitled to the independence vouchsafed by war, is struggling against the oppression of bolshevik encroachment, this great mother republic looks on with hands off. Indeed, one word from America in proper cooperation would settle the matter without a dollar or a life. But America withholds that word.

Thus the selfishness of American politics destroys the victory of a world war for democracy.

But Georgia will be independent without the voice of America. The league is functioning and the other powers of the world are demonstrating more clearly their ability to get along without America than America can in the future hope to show that she can get along without the cooperation of the rest of the world.

SHOULD BE DEFEATED.

It begins to look as if the proposed 18-year-old child labor amendment to the federal constitution may fail of ratification. Six states thus far have acted. Three, Georgia, North Carolina and Louisiana, rejected it by enormous legislative majorities. One of the three to ratify, Arkansas, did so by the narrow margin of 45 to 40 in the house and 15 to 13 in the senate. Massachusetts passed it on to a popular referendum. Iowa postponed action.

In most of the states the legislators that are to be elected this fall will pass upon the question. In the meantime the sentiment against the amendment as submitted is growing in volume.

The fight on this amendment is not directed at proper and even uniform state regulations. Child labor not only should be regulated, but the physical and mental development of the child should be so guaranteed by each state that industrial exploitation of the labor of children should be prohibited.

But, this is a matter of state's rights entirely. The national government is becoming top-heavy with bureaucracy — with various and sundry departments and divisions that encroach directly upon the rights of the commonwealths, and strike at the fundamentals of democracy.

The amendment as submitted makes the age limit 18, which is not ridiculous, but has a tendency to destroy the initiative and willpower of young men, thus classed as "children," at a time when they are best fitted to shape their own destinies.

Again, the proposed amendment necessarily carries with it congressional control over the "education" of boys and girls, even of the ages of 16 and 17 and to 18. Nothing will be more ruinous to our educational system, and to the independence of states and of people, than federal control of education.

The child labor amendment is not merely a plan, as many politicians profess to believe, to keep immature children out of workshops. It is a rank socialistic scheme for the complete control of child life until boys and girls are 18 years of age.

It seeks, though unwittingly, of course, to destroy the manhood and womanhood of the next and each succeeding generation, and it ought to fail of ratification.

WHY KILL WILD THINGS?

The hunting season will soon be open in Georgia and hunters armed with the most improved and destructive firearms and dogs trained to ferret out every bird, squirrel or rabbit will be free to go forth and shoot as they will.

Why not call a halt on the wholesale slaughter of wild life and give the little creatures a chance? Suppose we put up the guns and the dogs and think it over.

Man, it is true, has always been a hunter. He became one from sheer necessity back in the primeval days when he lived in the woods like a wild animal and had to hunt food or starve. In a primitive state wild life must sustain the life of man. He must hunt for both food and clothing, but that necessity passed in this country long ago. After the stage of necessity is passed men hunt for sport. Hunting carries them into the open; it places upon the hunter the necessity of caution, accuracy, endurance and self-control. Hunting formerly did to some extent what modern golf is supposed to do. But in this day of automobiles, trained dogs and machine guns the slaughter of the wild things has become largely mechanical. Formerly, when man was armed with only flint-pointed spears and arrows the wild things had some show. Now they have practically none.

Formerly ducks and other waterfowl swarmed along the Atlantic seaboard by the thousands; squirrels rioted in all our woodlands and the cheery notes of Bob White were heard on every hand. The complaint is now made that there is danger of the ducks and other waterfowl becoming extinct; squirrels have become a curiosity in many localities and the quail—one of the best friends of the farmer and one of the most cheering and attractive creatures to be found in the rural regions—is rapidly diminishing everywhere.

Why would it not be a good idea to cut out the hunting for a season or two and give the little wild things a chance? They will all multiply rapidly and soon become familiar objects in communities where they are protected. They learn quickly — like the gulls and wild ducks in the Indian river—where their friends are to be found.

One question we might well ask ourselves—whether it is nobler to spare the life of the helpless wild thing and enjoy it as a living creature, or kill it and eat it or leave the body to decay in the woods?

NATIONAL PARK ADDRESS.

The chamber of commerce and its committee on the Appalachian National Park, of which Frank E. Beck is chairman, are to be commended for securing Hon. Robert Sterling Yard, executive secretary of the National Parks association, Washington, for a forum address on the national parks system and the relation of its units to neighbor populations and prosperity.

This address will be delivered on the 9th of October at the usual forum hour in the day and to add peculiar interest Mr. Yard has agreed to bring a number of lantern slides, illustrating the characteristics of our existing national parks and differentiating them.

This will, in addition to accentuating interest in the proposed national park to be located in the southern Appalachians, provide an educational and travel feature that will be exceedingly instructive and entertaining.

The National Parks association is a semi-official organization of which Secretary Herbert Hoover, of the United States department of commerce, is president. Among the vice presidents are such men as Nicholas Murray Butler, John Barton Payne, William Kent and others.

In the letter to Secretary Barker, of the Atlanta chamber, Mr. Yard says:

"Although Secretary Work's committee will make no report for some time, there is no doubt that it has found a location in the southern Appalachians which will very ably represent the east in our national gallery of scenic masterpieces, and the sooner that great centers like Atlanta inform themselves concerning the national park systems, the sooner will this great project be realized."

This would seem to confirm the statement already made in Washington that a four-state park, including sections of the Carolinas, Tennessee and Georgia, has been tentatively agreed upon, although the Work commission is now inspecting proposed sites in the famous Shenandoah valley of Virginia.

At any rate, the securing of Mr. Yard for an address in Atlanta is of great importance, and that the people of this city and section will arouse to the advantages to be had from hearing him is assured.

Again the chamber of commerce is commended for its good work.

BLIND VETERANS.

A number of United States blind veterans of the world war have grouped themselves into an association for the purpose of building, through popular subscription, a home or club house, with dormitories, the first unit to be built near Baltimore, with a dormitory capacity of 100 and a dining-room capacity of 165.

This is to be in close proximity to the government vocational school for blind veterans, authorized by the 68th congress, but will specialize in grouping together those sightless veterans who are not being provided for by the government.

That such a condition exists—that is that a service man in the war who lost his sight in the line of duty should be denied compensation through technical flaws in the records, is unthinkable, but such is the case. Although such service men made the greatest of all save the supreme sacrifice there are said to be scores of blind veterans today denied any help from the government, in compensation or training, because of the inflexibility of a law that has been proven flexible enough to permit a former director of the veterans' bureau to rob the government, and flexible enough to have a line of graft to permeate the department from land and supply purchases and sales to hospitalization contracts.

But the point is these men must depend upon private help and an association has been formed for the purpose of building the "home" in question, and providing vocational instructors, etc., as well as to give a home near a government training school for those fortunate enough to have entry thereto.

Investigation has established the fact that blinded ex-service men are happier generally, and active more, when grouped. The segregation idea is nullified by the fundamental plans which provide mental, physical, moral and vocational training, and the grouped amusements best suited to make the men happy and contented. It is proposed to have the "home" in close contact with the social, commercial and industrial privileges enjoyed by sighted people.

The week of October 19 has been designated as "blind veterans' week," and the president, who is understood to have approved the plan, as well as Director Hines, of the veterans' bureau, has been asked to designate Sunday, October 19, as "blind veterans' Sunday." The campaign will be conducted by volunteers without expense and the funds will go in their entirety into the enterprise.

In the meantime congress should take steps to include every veteran of the world war who lost his sight in service, in the compensation and vocational acts, whether their records are technically correct as to minute details or not. The only record that should be absolutely necessary is that the applicant served and served loyally and lost his sight in the service. There are entirely too many exactions in the records that must be submitted for compensation of disabled men—too many opportunities for inequalities that are conspicuously unjust to some and over-just, in comparison, to others. The provisions governing this feature of the world war veterans' laws are intricate, cumbersome and subject to various interpretations.

That a blind veteran who served faithfully and lost his sight in "no man's land" should be left friendless and alone by the government he served, while another with perhaps only a minor injury that involves no faculty, shall receive a substantial salary in compensation, is an inequality that should be rectified by saner and more understandable laws.

LEACOCK IS COMING.

The Atlanta Writers' Club, which is performing an excellent service along cultural lines, and coordinating with other civic organizations in providing wholesome entertainment for Atlantans and in doing many other big things, has engaged Professor Stephen Leacock, the justly celebrated Canadian humorist, for a lecture at the Woman's club auditorium on the evening of September 24.

There is today, perhaps, not a more outstanding figure on the American platform. As a humorist he has not had a peer since the days of Melville Langdon and Bill Nye.

Life, people, events, customs, fads—these are his themes, and with the subject of "Frenzied Fiction," which is said to be his masterpiece, the people of Atlanta who hear him next week will no doubt be as highly pleased as those of New York, London and other great centers of the English-speaking world.

Not only is Stephen Leacock a lecturer, but a magazine writer and author of international renown. His "Literary Lapses" and "Behind the Beyond" and other books are found in most up-to-date libraries. His series in Harper's Magazine last year under the title of "My Discovery of England" will be remembered as screamingly funny.

The Woman's club's auditorium deserves to be packed on the occasion of his first Atlanta appearance.

HEALTH CENTER WORK.

The magnificent work of the Young Women's Christian association in Atlanta has had a strong appeal for many years.

It has grown from year to year during the 22 of its existence, adding a new service here and there as rapidly as possible, until today it reaches directly through its different departments a total of 50,000 girls and women a year.

It conducts a cafeteria in the Peachtree arcade, which will be moved to the third floor of the Calhoun building, corner of Broad and West Alabama streets, on October 1; a home for girls at 56-62 West Baker street; a girls' camp at Highland, Georgia, and other and varied activities.

The institution has now reached such a stage of usefulness that a great Health Center will shortly be incorporated in its activities, the same to include classes in Swedish gymnastics for business girls and women; matrons' classes; school girls' and children's classes; reducing and building-up classes, and corrective work. Dr. Toepel will be examining physician.

Looking to this greatly enlarged service the Y. W. C. A. will move its executive offices to its own home at 19-21 West Baker street on October 1. To the large and commodious two-story building already erected two permanent units will immediately be added—a modern gymnasium, 50x70 feet, and a swimming pool, 30x50 feet.

The Health Center will be opened on January 1, at which time the new units will be completed. Until then the gymnasium classes will be conducted in different churches and halls.

The Constitution congratulates Mrs. Archibald Davis, the president; Miss Irma Finley, the general secretary, and Miss Lucy Marvin Adams, the director of the Health Center, upon the enlarged services that this great institution is preparing to give to the thousands of girls and women whom it reaches.

The poets of the seasons find that jingling rhymes is pleasant pastime, but it's the jingling of the dollars that makes the world 'swing corners."

It's next to impossible for them to "keep cool with Coolidge," who has to mop his brow every time he gets a good view of the situation.

It is lamented that people do not read current fiction as they once did. After a cursory survey of most any table of contents one cannot blame them.

You Wait No More

BY FRANK L. STANTON.

I.

There, at Love's door,
The Sweetheart of the Morning waits no more.
So weary was the waiting through dim years
For one whose only gift to you was tears—
So vain the crying to a voiceless shore,
You wait and watch no more.

II.

The steadfast stars shine true—
The stars that witnessed when your lips Love knew;
And Morning comes to greet you as of old,
Undreaming Love's sweet story has been told;
But Light is Night in heavens of cloudless blue,
Lost to the love of you.

III.

For me, no Morning light,
No bloom that comes with blessing for the blight;
Only the memory of a darkened door
Where Love, heart-wounded, waits no more—no more!
Thank God that unloved life is fast in flight . . .
Take, then, its last Goodnight.

Flaubert the Juggler

BY PIERRE VAN PAASSEN

Flaubert was a peculiar fellow, taciturn, meditative given to brooding. He could neither read nor write. He shunned company and was given to that strange habit of muttering and talking to himself. Of an evening he would stroll away down the road, select a lonely spot and sit staring at the moonlight and the stars. When he came back he seemed in a daze, impenetrable almost, yet with a strange light in his eyes. What were those thoughts which he kept so much to himself? Where did his reverie carry him? Was it to strange and fantastic countries, unknown rivers or blue unchartered seas? Or had he reached that point in mental development where he doubted and was confronted with the absolute? Was he facing the riddle of the universe in his own peculiar, plodding way? Nobody knew and nobody cared a great deal. With his companions he was not rated as a philosopher or thinker. They called him a half-wit, a fool. He had traveled over the whole length of the broad land of Flanders. He had seen every town, village and hamlet in Brabant, and that is saying a good deal. Still Flaubert could not have told you which city brewed the most famous beer or where they distilled the finest liquor. All towns were the same to him. They consisted of crowds. Crowds of gaping, curious peasants, boisterous merchants out to enjoy themselves, who stared at him, applauded his art and occasionally threw him a coin.

For Flaubert was a juggler. He could take six balls and throw them up in the air and keep them whirling around from hand to hand, until it looked as if he were merely pushing the spokes of some colored wheel. Never had he been known to drop one of the balls. Never yet had his art gone astray. A broad grin overspread his florid face when the time came to show his dexterity. With nimble fingers he commenced tossing, picking up an additional ball now and then, increasing his speed till the whole was a whirling rotating splotch of color.

For the past five years Flaubert had tried to bring a seventh ball into that gyrating game of his. Sometimes he would practice for hours, till the sweat poured down his face. He would not pay the least of attention to the jeers and shouts of his comrades who watched his endeavors. Patiently he went on and tried again, worked himself into a frenzy and fail again. It became an obsession, that seventh ball. It threatened to upset the poor fellow's mind completely. It was a matter of conquer or be conquered, so to speak.

Down in Merlin Flaubert played for the little children in the market square. He tossed his balls up and even let his eyes wander away to the spell-bound youngsters. His own eyes would sparkle with joy, reflecting in their blue depths the joy of the little ones. There seemed no end to his endurance. Flaubert would twirl the balls till there was but one single curly headed Flemish girl left to watch him. Then after that perhaps he would dance and jump about, twist his gaunt body in all sorts of grotesque shapes, stand on his head, turn a somersault. Anything to please the children. When the little ones shouted in elation it was balm to his heart. When a tiny tot clapped her hands it meant a great deal more than the golden louis tossed him by a drunken soldier attending the fair.

But Flaubert was not satisfied. His broodings and meditations at night had brought him something approaching a consciousness of sin. He could not have told you what was going on there in that storm-tossed soul of his. Moreover, he would not have told you. Flaubert was not communicative. He solved his own problems, slowly it is true, laboriously, he would have admitted it. But he reached a conclusion now and then. No conclusions of great moment, as things go in history, but they were the result of mature and careful consideration and they represented Flaubert's real nature. And so when he looked upon the singing, shouting, drinking crowds that jostled and jumbled around him, with not a thought for a better life, with little to distinguish them from animals, he was sorely perplexed. He was worried. He suffered under it. The empty lives of the people became a burden to him. The more they drank, the deeper Flaubert sank in spirits. The gayer they were, the more serious grew his countenance.

One day Flaubert disappeared from the fair. His little wooden box in which he kept his clothing, the checkered harlequin's tunic that he used when officiating as the fair's master juggler, his black Sunday coat, the little balls, that were his chief asset and stock in trade, it had all vanished with him. The chief of the traveling establishment under whose direction Flaubert performed, was furious. He fumed and frothed. He would thrash that good for nothing juggler, that half-wit, that idiot, that silent dreamer. He stormed and raved, but Flaubert did not come back.

Flaubert had become monk. One morning he knocked at the massive gates of a great monastery and applied for admission. He said he wanted to do penance for his sins. He promised the brother doorkeeper and later the abbot that he would be the least of the brethern if he were but allowed to enter into the community of silent, meditating men. Flaubert was admitted. He scrubbed floors, he rang the bell for matins at 3 o'clock in the morning. He helped the brother almoner in the kitchen, cleaned the pans and carried out the garbage. Never a word of complaint came from our good friend. If he had any thoughts he kept them to himself. But the painful look had disappeared from his face. He was a joyous, happy novice, obedient in every respect, unobtrusive and silent at meal time, ever willing to take on another duty, though it be ever so lowly.

But his brother monks soon discovered his childish spirit. They found he could not read nor write. He could not converse nor dispute when grave theological questions were discussed. He had not the faintest notion of the significance of the piles of manuscripts over which the brethren labored morning, noon and night. He just stood by in awe and wonder, rang the bell and cleaned the fish in the kitchen. Flaubert became the joke of the monastery. There were some good natured jokes told at his expense. Yes, on several occasions Brother Tramers, the scholarly librarian, had played a prank on the poor ex-juggler.

* * * *

To Flaubert the new life was filled with wonder and peace. Yet he would do something more than ring bells and run errands in the village. He wanted to show his devotion. He would do something to gain favor in the eyes of heaven. He pondered in his slow lumbering way. He even went to the prior with his troubles. The good father told him to pray for light and guidance. But Flaubert kept thinking, brooding. How beautiful it was to uncipher the ancient manuscripts, how marvelous a man was Brother Jerome, the preacher, who thundered from the pulpit! Flaubert must do something, he told himself. He must make a return offering for the peace and tranquillity that he had experienced since he entered the monastery. It was not enough to perform the lowest tasks. He must give something of himself, his life, if need be, his all.

In this state of mind, sad because it gave no solution, Flaubert went about the halls and corridors. His head sunken on his breast. He would move his hands over his eyes and sigh. Deep sighs, from the depths of his soul. Then suddenly one afternoon a light dawned upon him. He was a changed man. His step changed from a dragging gait to an elastic energetic dance. The monks shook their heads and whispered. The fellow had gone insane, they reasoned. They looked after his swaying figure. They heard him laugh to himself and talk and mutter. In his hands he carried some colored objects. And strange to say, though there was no service at that hour and though there were many tasks to be performed in the kitchen where the evening meal was in progress of preparation, Flaubert was seen to enter the chapel. Curious, wondering, the monks followed. A whole group of whispering, laughing brethren, on tip-toe, peering through the half-opened door of the chapel.

There kneeling before the altar of the Madonna they saw in the mystic dimmed light that streamed through the colored windows not Flaubert the novice, but Flaubert the juggler. His garb lay in a heap at his side. He was dressed in the tight-fitting, checkered suit that he had worn at the fairs. In his hands were tiny colored balls. Up he threw them, caught them in his other hand, threw them up again until it looked like a wheel spinning around, so quick and marvelously nimble did he play. Softly he counted. One, two, three, four, five, six, seven. Seven balls, seven balls at last, for the first time, were whirling in almost mechanical succession. On Flaubert's face was a smile and his eyes shone with a strange heavenly light. The monks gasped their surprise. The abbot emerging from his cell had joined them to look in on the wondrous spectacle. From behind pillars and high benches they followed his every moment. They heard him say: "For You Holy Mother, for You I do this. I Flaubert, I cannot write or speak. I am only a juggler." Then he collapsed in a heap on the floor. When the abbot ran forward and touched him on the shoulder, Flaubert was dead.

Power of Public Opinon.

BY M. ASHBY JONES, D. D.

In May, 1923, a report was made by the committee of the Iron and Steel institute, appointed a year previously, to consider the elimination of the 12-hour day in that industry. This report stated not only that the change was "impracticable," but it even questioned the desirability of such a change from "a social point of view." This report brought forth an indignant protest from the lovers of righteousness all over America and, let it be remembered, to the credit of President Harding that he joined in that protest in a personal letter to Judge Gary, the president of the steel corporation. For the sake of those who are skeptical of the power of a righteous public opinion, intelligently and persistently expressed, let me remind them that early in the following July the steel corporation reversed its position and began at once the elimination of the deadly 12-hour day. Other steel companies followed their example. Now we have a report of the results made by Mr. Adele Shaw for the Cabot fund.

While the report reveals the fact that the steel industry is not yet entirely on the 8-hour day six-day week of work, yet its whole tendency is in that direction. The hope that this change may become complete in the not distant future is justified by the splendid results thus far obtained where the change has been made. One reason for the refusal of the industry to lessen the hours of the men was the claim that it would so increase the cost of production as to render it utterly "impracticable." Now, after a partial trial, a representative of one of the largest independent concerns gives his opinion.

"The three-shift system will be an economy in cost of production. Give it time. It will bring about a change in the whole of industrial relations, and that is what has cost the steel industry money. Steel executives realize this economy. It was the greatest factor in the change, though public opinion pushed the movement forward." The investigation, the report of which is before me, justified this prediction. The overwhelming testimony is to the effect that the movement toward shorter hours has already increased production without increasing the number of laborers.

A Human Factor.

An authorized summary of Mr. Shaw's report reveals some very significant social results of this change. He speaks of "the more normal appearance of life in the steel towns." He gives the picture of men on the street "not in their mill clothes," with their wives, doing the marketing, or "just looking on." He sees them on the porches reading newspapers or in their little yards playing with the children. These men, who were so long driven by ceaseless hours of toil in the mills, can now be seen "working in their gardens, around their homes or driving in their autos." Such a picture needs no comment. Here is a contribution to social welfare, civic righteousness and the safety of democracy which cannot be calculated in terms of money.

He reports, also, "less tension in the towns. The men seem freer in their conversations and show a better spirit toward the mill." What a revelation of the truth of the gospel which we have been preaching so long, often to deaf ears, that after all this is a human as well as an economic problem. "Good will" is a vital element in the making of steel and, if for no other reason, a corporation can afford to pay for it.

This report also tells of "an increased tendency on the part of the workers to look into affairs concerning their own living conditions." It is difficult to overestimate such a gain. A Christian democracy must be builded out of home-makers and home-keepers. Any industrial system, which so drives its men as to so monopolize their time and thought that none is left for the care of the home, is a menace to a democratic civilization. Let us be truly thankful that the steel industry, after all, has proven itself sensitive and responsive to this higher human appeal and capable of appreciation of these finer social values.

A Church Contribution.

But we must not forget how this tremendous social-industrial change was wrought. It was the Churches of Christ in America which, after making an exhaustive and impartial investigation of working conditions in the steel industry, broadcast its report all over the nation. It was met by indignant denials and the most elaborate defenses of the steel industry by expert representatives. I do not, for a moment, claim that the church report was absolutely accurate in all particulars or that there was no basis in truth for the defense by the steel industry. The real contribution which the churches made was that they compelled the attention of both the public and the steel corporations to conditions which demanded the most searching consideration. The charge was not, and cannot, be made that the officials of these corporations were brutal and inhuman, but that from lack of adequate thought and attention working conditions in their mills had become brutal and inhuman.

Sunday Health Talks

BY DR. WILLIAM BRADY

THE ITCHING OF AN OLD SKIN.

There is a queer popular fancy that folks who itch a great deal are itching to bathe, yet there must be quite as many folks who bathe only to itch. I hardly know which class I'd rather belong to. I bathe so seldom, just now and then in order to get the point of view of those who do. Somehow I feel it my duty to get first-hand information about these minor factors of ill health when no great risk is involved.

Young skins—well, you can tell a young skin by just feeling it, with your eyes closed. It is soft and warm and oily, with maybe a pimple here and there. An old skin is harsh and dry and the owner is usually scratching it or wanting to. Old skins have that mean way of resenting years of treatment. They itch and itch even when there's nothing the matter with them. An old skin that doesn't itch more or less may happen here and there, but I can scarcely imagine such a thing—you'll have to show me. The only way I know in which one can keep the skin foom itching forever after is by keeping the skin young. Itching forever after what? Why, scratching, of course. The softness, smoothness, warmth and beauty of the young skin may be attributed to the one feature, oiliness. In youth the skin oil or sebum is freely secreted by the sebaceous or oil glands, indeed, this function is often excessive and the condition called seborrhea occurs. Seborrhea means excessive flow of oil or sebum; it constitutes not only the common oiliness of the skin, out is also the basis of dandruff and of ordinary blackheads and pimples (acne). Along with these terrible afflictions, however, youth has the skin oil to thank for beauty, for the sebum does beautify the skin just as a little oil brings out the finish of a piece of furniture.

But this is a talk about the itching of an old skin. The main characteristic of an old skin is diminished sebaceous function. The oil glands are falling down on the job, in many cases undergoing atrophy.

Now in all skins there is a normal constant casting off of epithelial debris so fine that one scarcely notices it. The exposed skin has little difficulty in getting rid of this debris by oxidation and abrasion. The skin which is kept covered with clothing, especially excessive clothing, has greater difficulty in disposing of the debris, and that's right where it itches so like the very deuce. Children or adults taking the sunbath treatment and developing a mahogany brown tanning of the skin have the most perfect skin texture and the least skin trouble.

The skin oil normally takes care of the disposal of debris very satisfactorily. Excessive bathing even with plain water removes the skin oil, and soap and water makes a combination well known as harmful to the "complexion." So if you have a young skin, bathe all you like; if you have an old skin, take the air instead. If you must take a water wash occasionally, let it be short and just tepid, but it isn't at all necessary, I assure you, for the human hide responds kindly to air bathing or dry cleaning.

Don't scratch. Brush. Use a soft-bristle brush and brush the skin with it for twenty to thirty minutes each morning. This is a great help in removing the invisibly fine epithelial debris which is responsible for the itching. But be sure the brush is very fine and very soft and avoid a brush which is as bad as scratching.

This brushing would be of questionable value if you have the wet-wash obsession and are given to the unhygienic habit of macerating your skin in the tub every little while. A brushing on the day of a soak would be comparable with the whisking the porter wanted to give the finnicky doctor who objected to stirring up a lot of germs and dust in the car. "Come on, Doctah, le' me brush you off—all de germs I'se gwine to stir up ain't gwine do nobody no harm."

One caution you must heed, however, in this brushing of the skin. Don't grunt while brushing, for if you do, you're almost certain to commence scratching, and that spoils the whole treatment.

Following the brushing, if you hanker after something to put on, you'll find either of the following preparations pleasing for habitual use. They may be looked upon as artificial substitutes for the natural sebum or skin oil and when used sparingly and daily, they will keep the skin in very fair condition.

The first is oil of sesame, sometimes called bean oil or teel oil, and this oil has the virtue of leaving no residue to clog the skin. Let the druggist prepare it for you by digesting for three hours over a water bath four ounces of sesame oil with fifteen drops of absolute alcohol and twenty grains of bezoin, and filtering the oil. A few drops will be sufficient to apply to a considerable area of skin daily.

The second preparation is more of an anti-pruritic (relief for itching.) Pruritus, by the way, is a medical term for itching without apparent cause. This is a skin cream originally suggested by Dr. Bulkley, skin specialist, for bath pruritus and dryness of the skin:

T. P. A. Representatives Discuss Loss of Measure With House For It

Editor Constitution: In behalf of the traveling men of this and other states. We thank you for the fight you made editorially to have the legislature, (recently in session) pass a law discontinuing the surcharge on sleepers and parlor cars. We have always found you amenable to reason, and ready to give your assistance whenever we have been able to show you the justice of the cause we advocated.

Our observations of the fate of this bill, which met with no opposition in the open, "not a dissenting vote in the senate or house," and yet through manipulation was sidetracked until no quorum was in the house, which fact caused it to fail to become a law, has led me to investigate as to why. And we have concluded the primary and fundamental cause that prevents the securing of beneficial and just legislation for the traveling public is based upon the practice of railroad attorneys being placed upon the committee which passes upon railroad matters (which duties are necessarily of a judicial nature).

No partisans such as representatives of the transportation companies should be placed thereon, but we find them in numbers on the rules committee, so that in event their influence is not sufficient to prevent the favorable reporting of such a measure or measures that affect the carriers to the benefit of the public, they may use their efforts in the rules committee to delay its being put upon the calendar. Evidently this was successfully done in the instance referred to.

From the best information we can obtain, there were six railroad attorneys on the railroad committee of the house this last session and six on the rules committee. In the senate five railroad attorneys were on the railroad committee and five on the rules committee. With the utmost respect for these attorneys, we submit they cannot be unbiased and should not be placed there by the speaker of the house or president of the senate.

We are convinced this practice is not confined to Georgia but prevails universally, and it is my purpose to bring it to the attention of not only state and national board of directors of the Travelers' Protective association, but to our next state convention in April, and national convention in June, and invoke the united efforts of our members to persuade speakers of the house and presidents of the senate to discontinue their long practices, and fill these committees with men who can impartially perform the duties assigned them.

Several years ago we personally called the attention of a "speaker of the house" to the injustice of this, and asked him what could be easier than for said attorneys to "corral their friends and tie ours out" until they found an opportune time to act? His reply was: "I have put doctors on sanitary committees and farmers on agricultural committees." We told him these were in no sense analogous cases, since farmers and doctors were free to vote without prejudice, while the very fact of their being in the employ of railroads would prevent the railroad attorneys in all instances doing so. If you can see this matter in the light we have endeavored to set forth, the traveling men all over this country will hold you in grateful remembrance if you will aid us in our fight.

Things New and Old About the Bible

The Military Mania

BY REV. W. P. KING,
Pastor First Methodist Church, Gainesville, Ga.

Whatever may have been the results of the celebration of mobilization day, it has at least served the purpose of bringing the public mind to a direct study of the whole question of war.

There are some considerations which should meet with response from reasonable people. There are those who would muddy the stream of clear thinking. The issue is not between a theoretic pacifism and increased military preparedness. The question is in this day of peace with the wisdom that should come from experience; what should be our attitude towards war and what should be our efforts towards universal peace?

War must be stripped of its false glory. It must be seen in its undisguished hideousness and horror. We must cease to idealize war. Sentimental women who think that a brass button on a bright uniform is perfectly lovely, should see the torn uniform and the mangled body and the brass button soiled with mud and stained with blood.

We must not forget the bitter lessons of the past. Lloyd George recently said: "The old generation is passing away, and a new generation that knows nothing of the terror and discomfort of the great war will be drenched by historians, novelists and artists with a description of its glories."

The double standard of morality as applied to nations and individuals must be condemned. Why should individuals be held to a tribunal of justice for settlement of disputes, while nations are held to be justifiable in resorting to uncontrolled passion and violence.

Senator William E. Borah makes a clear statement:

"What do we mean by outlawing war? In common parlance we mean to give war the same status in international law that murder has in our domestic law. We mean to place the settled and confirmed judgment of mankind over and against war as an institution for the adjustment of disputes between nations and to substitute in lieu thereof law and judicial tribunals. We mean to disown, renounce, and condemn force in the settlement of international controversies and substitute therefor reason and law."

The nation that refuses to abide by the international law should then be treated by the other nations as a policeman would deal with an obstreperous individual.

War must not be regarded as a permanent institution. There has always existed the rigidly conservative type who regards any existent evil as forever fixed. It was true in the case of duelling, polygamy, slavery and piracy. It is the blackest pessimism to regard war as permanently entrenched in human society.

Argument Absurd.

There is the type of preacher who insists that wars cannot cease until all men are regenerated and made righteous. This is a consummation devoutly to be wished, but the argument is absurd. It is the folly of the extreme individualist who said you cannot stop the saloons until you convert all the saloon-keepers, you cannot stop duelling until you convert the duellists, you cannot stop polygamy until you convert every man who wants more wives than one. The man who thinks that the nation cannot stop war until all the munition-makers and jingo politicians are converted, is not really thinking, but is only thinking that he thinks. There is also the theologian who thinks that wars must continue in order to fulfill his interpretation of the Book of Revelation to the effect that peace can only come as Jesus Christ subdues all opposing forces with the might of a material militarism.

There is more Christianity in the Labor day address of John W. Davis than in all the perverted conclusions of these varying types of preachers. Mr. Davis said:

"This generation needs no further lessons of the peril and destructiveness of war. We must bring ourselves to think in terms of lasting peace. With American flyers about to complete the circuit of the globe by air, with the human voice carrying across the ocean, and with men becoming every day more and more dependent upon products brought from foreign soil, those who counsel isolation are blind leaders of the blind. We shall have world peace and world disarmament if we are willing to work for it. We will not get it on any other terms.

I call upon the laboring men and women of America and those on whom the burdens of war fall with most weight, to lead their fellow countrymen on this great subject, to make sure that America takes her rightful place in the councils of humanity and that she becomes the first among the nations in the service of mankind."

We do real honor to our brave American boys who fell on the battlefields of the late war, when we set ourselves to fulfill their slogan, "The War to End War. When the first shipment of American boys killed in the world war was unloaded on the Hoboken pier, President Harding looked out over literally acres of rough boxes containing all that remained of potential builders of civilization, and said with deep feeling: "This must not be again!"

"Notable Utterance."

The Methodist Episcopal church sent out this notable utterance: "Millions of our fellow men have died heroically in 'a war to end war.' What they undertook, we must finish by methods of peace. War is not inevitable. It is the supreme enemy of mankind. Its futility is beyond question. Its continuance is the suicide of civilization. We are determined to outlaw the whole war system.

The patriotism of the Methodist Episcopal church has never been challenged. Neither our motives nor our loyalty must be impunged when he insist on the fulfillment of pledges made to the dead and assert our Christian ideals for the living. Governments which ignore the Christian conscience of men in time of peace, cannot justly claim the lives of men in time of war. Secret diplomacy and political partisanship must not draw men into the dilemma of deciding between support of country and loyalty to Christ.

The world is now open to a crusade for peace. War-weary nations everywhere are eagerly awaiting. America must lead the way. Our nation and our church can do now what we may never be able to do again."

The race of military preparedness does not stop war. America should lead the way to an interwational agreement, which gives notice to any belligerent nation that when it breaks forth into violence it encounters the opposition of the other nations combined. When nations prepare for war they will precipitate war.

The people should demand of their government that questions in dispute must be settled by some other method than the appeal to the brutality of war. It is estimated that fewer than twenty men brought on the late war. The blundering leaders who bring on war always manage to keep their own hides whole. I do not want to see anybody die, but if the war must come I want the first gas attack to be turned on munition makers, and bloated capitalists and politicians who hitherto have kept their full paunches out of the danger zone and made their purses full.

War is the chief handicap to the progress of humanity. War is the devouring monster that swalllows up ninety-three cents out of every dollar of taxation. The money spent on war would build churches and school houses in reach of every human being, turn the waste places of the earth into a garden, and relieve a large part of the woes that afflict mankind.

Universal Carnage.

Another world war would mean a universal carnage of death and destruction. It would involve the wholesale slaughter of armies and cities. Inventions such as poison gas, devices for the spread of disease germs, and the "death ray" reveal very plainly that the future holds in store nothing less than the complete downfall of civilization and the suicide of humanity, unless the forces of Christianity can overtake and bring under rational and moral control the conscienceless materialism that stalks threateningly among the nations in this very hour.

If an international agreement fails, then please remember that your military preparedness cannot proceed along the old methods. The main line of preparation would necessarily be the construction of huge aeroplanes and the production of poisonous gases.

After the invention of gunpowder, there were doubtless medieval knights who wanted to keep on fighting the old way, but after smelling gunpowder a few times, they decided to change their method.

So today we live in an utterly changed situation. We have a number of would-be instructors of the public mind, who are asleep and don't know it. They are in worse shape than Rip Van Winkle, because Rip did wake up.

The sane Christian course for the United States to pursue is to join the other nations in laying a foundation for enduring peace. The old motto, false as it is old, "In time of peace prepare for war," must be changed to, "In time of peace prepare for peace." When the war clouds gather it will be too late to think clearly and rationally. It is the supreme duty of the United States in this hour to think in terms of peace, to hold forth the ideal of peace, and to lead the nations out of the hellish war system. It is hardly short of criminal to talk war unless our government should do the utmost to accomplish this high mission and then failed.

Powerful Sentiment.

We must reckon with a powerful peace sentiment which is many times stronger than ever before. Wherever the church has spoken as a group it has been against the military mania. The Federal Council of churches makes a statement of the "Creed for Believers in a Warless World."

"We believe in a sweeping reduction of armaments.

"We believe in international law, courts of justice and boards of arbitration.

"We believe in a world-wide association of nations for world peace.

"We believe that Christian patriotism demands the practice of goodwill between nations.

"We believe that nations no less than individuals are subject to God's immutable moral laws.

"We believe that nations that are Christian have special international obligations.

"We believe in a warless world and dedicate ourselves to its achievement."

"Let friendly flags be far unfurled,
Be hushed the quarrel of the world.
God's leaders can no more afford
The pagan swagger with the sword.
War attitudes but anger men,
And make them burn to fight again.
By love and truth must men grow great,
And live to put wars out of date.
Let armaments dissolve with rust,
And let mad sabers waste in dust.
White hands of peace in this new day
Must wash the stains of war away."

Over The Bounding Wave

Ocean Travel Has Its Compensation

BY O. O. McINTYRE.

This is written while the S. S. Olympic is two-stepping over Mrs. Atlantic's permanent wave. So far as I can tell by my wrist watch we are about a block and a half from the middle of the ocean.

For two days I have been ratching pea green complexions with wan passsengers for a farthing a shade. Such fun! And I always win. In my steamer chair at night brisk deck walkers no doubt mistake me for a phosphorescent fish. There is a faint glow about my gills.

It is strange the way a sea voyage changes your ideas. A week ago I didn't think eating was vulgar. Many of my best friends ate. If I had my way I'd fire every cook on the boat.

And if you think a certain moving picture heroine is beautiful, my dears, you should see her! No alley cat would drag in anything so terrible as she looks just now.

Still ocean travel has its compensation. I have only a cynical smile for those who have for years chided me for my inherent Scotch thrift. And if I were strong enough I could laugh right out loud at one fellow who said to me: "That guy never gives up anything!"

A lot he knows and don't ask silly questions! There was a gentleman who lounged alongside of me in a deck chair. He is one of those ruddy seasoned voyageurs who seems to have a pitying contempt for the sea weakling.

"Sea sickness," he ventured, "is mostly mental. Eat what you like, drink what you like, walk a lot—"

But I didn't hear the rest of it. I was paging fish.

The son of one of the richest men in America is a fellow passenger. He may be strong financially but gastronomically I am his equal. He can't look a bowl of clam broth in the face without galloping to the rail in nothing flat.

Mal de Mer.

Mal de mer—as we globe-trotters call it—is like any other ailment. You either die or get well. So on this third day I am beginning to sit up and take a little nourishment, but I wouldn't care for any slabs of fat pork, thank you. And if any of you are planning a dinner of corn beef and cabbage, don't mind me; I have another engagement.

The ship's doctor has enough initials after his name to start up another alphabet. He is a fellow of this and a fellow of that. No end and blimey, what swank! But the next time he gets all the fellows together they ought to think up something in the way of a nice little seasick cure. It might come in handy sometime when they are not strutting the deck showing all their gold stripes.

Of course, all of the officers mollified us by saying the ocean was especially rough. I'll even go farther than that. I'll say it was positively uncouth and they can quote me in the Daily Ocean Times in 24-point Caslon.

I made friends with a jolly old deck swabber. He's been around the Horn on windjammers and crossed in frait tramps. In fact, he's sailed the seven seas—which ought to be enough for anybody.

'What do you do when you get shore leave?" I asked.

"Me, Guvner?" he replied. 'Why, I tykes the ol' woman and we go down near Battersea afishin'."

'Bl... my timbers" was all I could think of in reply. I guess the ocean becomes a habit just like eating or writing to motion picture stars. But if I keep what is left of my health I'm going to continue to love the soil.

Grandma used to tell me you had to eat a peck of dirt before you die. The way I feel I could eat my peck at one sitting and never bat an eye. I don't believe I ever longed so much before in my life to take an old-fashioned buggy ride. A bag of peanuts and one foot over the outboard driving down Main street is my idea of heaven. Giddap, Napoleon!

Speaking of Baths.

Britannia can rule all the waves she wants. I don't care to be the overlord of the smallest ripple in a bathtub. And speaking of baths, I decided that with all the quarantine regulations I might as well take one. Doesn't that seem the jolly tophole of insane efforts?

Just think how silly it is for a man in the middle of the ocean to crawl into a ridiculous little four-foot bathtub and splash about in two feet of water. It is like a candy manufacturer giving a taffy pulling.

The ship's doctor—I must keep picking on that bird—tells me many ocean travelers have a water phobia. The ocean becomes to them a glowering, terrifying thing. There are cases where they have to put them in shackles. They wouldn't have needed shackles for me. A nice light-weight thread would have been sufficient.

The ocean when you're seasick doesn't seem terrifying. Of course, I wouldn't care to wrestle with it or attempt to compete in a standing high jump. I think it's a mean old thing. If it hadn't any respect for me it might have remembered there were a lot of nice old ladies on the boat.

I rather warmed to one of those southern gentlemen on board. "Poah, but proud" was coined for him. The ocean had been romping him around until it shook all the buttons off his vest and took his appetite. As soon as he could walk around a bit he got up in the bow and began shaking his fist at the water. He swore simply gorgeous. And he had some cuss words in his collection that made some of the hardened old salts red behind the ears.

There is one thing about seasickness—indeed there are many things if one is a gourmand for details—that is rather soothing. It gives me a chance to do a little martyrdom stuff.

Every Home Its Martyr.

Every home has its little martyr. In ours it was Aunt Lieb, who seems to shrink from everything with "Don't mind poor me." And she gets all the breaks. Everybody feels sorry for her. When everything is blithe and gay she does her stuff. And gloom prevails.

So I took up martyrdom and it was perfectly elegant. When anyone would ask me to do this or that I'd toss them a wan smile and whimper: "No, you folks go on. I'll just stay in my deck chair. And don't mind me." And off they would go, murmuring: "Poor old fellew."

When all the jovial sea dogs gathered in the lounge to split a cold bottle and what we know back in the states as the 18th amendment I'd merely wave my hand and repeat the same thing. I got so cluttered up with self pity that I would sneak into my stateroom and have a good old-fashioned cry.

As a result of this I received more attention than I have ever received before.

Beautiful ladies would stop for a moment or so while promenading and inquire as to the state of my health, but I found when I became active and strong again they didn't notice me at all. On my next sea voyage I'm going to bribe the help to circulate the rumor that I am a rich invalid.

That's the way to get a lot of free food, free drink and free petting.

The most cordially hated man on the boat, I believe, was one of stalwart and bronzed six footers whose booming laugh could be heard on all decks while the ship was shimmying. He was just as popular as a snake in the breakfast food. And the prize passenger was a pale poet—who had embraced communism, vorticism, dadaism, cubism, vers-librism and seasickness.

His room was so filled with flowers and fruits he had to sleep in a runway.

AGNES SCOTT GIRLS PLAN LECTURE SERIES

The lecture association of Agnes Scott college is planning a series of lectures for the term which will bring many well-known speakers to the college, it was learned Saturday. The first lecture will be on September 24 by Stephen Leacock, called by many America's foremost humorist. His subject will be "Frenzied Fiction."

Among those who have been asked to lecture are Fannie Hurst, Carl Van Doren, editor of Century Magazine; Gutzon Borglum, Carl Wilson Baker, Walter Camp and others who will be announced later. The public is invited to all lectures.

Officers of the association are: President, Miss Ellen Walker, of Summerville, S. C.; treasurer, Miss Larsen Mattox, of Moultrie, Ga.; faculty member, Miss Cleo Hearon.

Weekly Bible Talk

A Chapter In Luke

BY WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN.

Instead of giving a summary of the Bible talks for the past quarter, I venture to vary the custom and call attention to the riches of a single chapter in the Gospel by Luke.

This chapter, the 18th, is not singled out because it is greatly superior to other chapters; it merely illustrates the wealth of the Book of Books and furnishes justification to those who daily consult it.

Other books are read and laid aside, but the Bible is ever new. Whenever we open it, some new truth springs out at us from its pages or some old truth impresses us as it never did before.

The chapter under consideration begins with a lesson on the value of persistent prayer.

Jesus gives us a picture of an unjust judge whom a widow approached with a petition. The judge "feared not God, neither regarded man," and yet, because of the widow's importunities—lest by her continual coming she might weary him—this hard-hearted official listened to her plea. Arguing, as He often did, from the less to the greater, the Saviour asks:

"And shall not God avenge his own elect, which cry day and night unto him, though he bear long with them?"

As God is infinitely more just than man, especially more just than an unjust judge, may He not be expected to hear and answer the prayers of those who appeal to Him?

God Answers Our Prayers.

We must not become impatient; we see but a small arc of an infinite circle, while God sees the end from the beginning.

Joseph could not see why he should be sold into Egypt or why he should be sent to prison for maintaining his integrity. Neither could his father see why his beloved son should be taken from him, but in the end both Joseph and his father learned that the working out of the divine plan required the suffering which they were compelled to undergo.

So we may be assured that our petitions, if offered in the right spirit, are treasured up in heaven and will be answered in God's own time, and in God's own way, which is better than our way.

Following the eight verses devoted to the above subject, the Master devotes six verses to a contrast between two prayers—a contrast which has for 19 centuries admonished those who trusted in themselves, and given encouragement to the humble and those of a contrite heart.

The pharisee went up to the temple, boasted of his superiority over other men and called it a prayer; the publican confessed himself a sinner and pleaded for forgiveness.

It is a wonderfully impressive and instructive lesson which the Saviour taught and yet note how few words He employed.

A Tribute to the Child.

Then, in three verses, Jesus paid a tribute to the child and made its faith the pattern for all mankind. For beauty, brevity, simplicity and valuable instruction, this passage is not equalled outside the Scriptures and not surpassed in the Bible itself.

Infants were brought to Him that He might touch them—a delicate compliment to Him and a manifestation of tender interest in the young.

His disciples rebuked the parents; they were thinking only of the physical welfare of the Master and were worried lest He should be worn out by the devotion which He aroused, but Christ was always about His Father's business and here was an opportunity to teach a lesson of vital importance.

"But Jesus called them unto Him and said, Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for such is the kingdom of God."

Then, having exalted childhood as it had never been exalted before, He proceeded to apply the thought in a practical way.

Faith is a necessary virtue; without faith it is impossible to please God. Christ made it easy to understand the meaning of faith. As a child trusts its parents, never for a moment doubting, so we must trust the Heavenly Father.

"Verily I say unto you, Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child shall in no wise enter therein."

What a child does without an effort, an adult ought to be able to do. And yet many adults complain that they can not have faith.

The real trouble is that they have substituted faith in somebody else's word for faith in God and faith in God's word.

A Sad Picture.

Next follows one of the saddest pictures in all literature.

A young man—rich and a ruler—came to Jesus and expressed a desire to follow Him. Upon inquiry it was found that he had led a blameless life.

If Christ had been an adventurer He would have made it easy for the young man to join His followers. But the Saviour was not an imposter; He was not lowering the standard a hair's breadth in order to secure followers.

He looked into the young man's heart and saw that love of money—not love of the Master—occupied the throne. He suggested a test:

"Now when Jesus heard these things, he said unto him, Yet lackest thou one thing; sell all that thou hast, and distribute unto the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven; and come follow me."

The requirement was too severe, as Christ knew it would be:

"And when he heard this, he was very sorrowful: for he was very rich."

Some contend that it was a harsh requirement that Christ made, but it was no more harsh than many tests to which we are subjected in daily life. Some purpose must dominate; we are continually choosing one course to the abandonment of all others.

A Lost Opportunity.

The marriage contract, for instance, is an exclusive one: the parties pledge themselves to abandon all others and cling to each other. Is it unfair? A father, when asked for the hand of his daughter replied:

"If you had only an hour to live, with whom would you desire to spend that hour? If with my daughter, yes; if with any one else, no."

If there must be a choice in matters affecting this life, why not a choice in matters affecting the soul's eternal welfare?

The rich young man came into the limelight for a moment; a priceless opportunity knocked at his door; he lacked one thing—only one thing, but the one thing needed—and then he dropped back into obscurity and appeared no more.

Changing the subject abruptly, Jesus employed four verses in revealing coming events:

"Then he took unto him the twelve, and said unto them, Behold, we go up to Jerusalem, and all things that are written by the prophets concerning the Son of Man shall be accomplished.

"For he shall be delivered unto the Gentiles, and shall be mocked, and spitefully entreated, and spitted on:

"And they shall scourge him, and put him to death: and the third day he shall rise again."

Refusing to Believe.

But, "they understood none of these things." How could they be expected to comprehend things that never occurred before and would never occur again?

If today, with all the verifications of history and all the indubitable proofs offered by the lives of the multitudes of saints and martyrs and the faith of innumerable followers, many people—some highly educated—refuse to believe that the things prophesied ever occurred, we should not judge too harshly the disciples who were slow to understand.

But it can be said to the credit of the disciples that they did understand after the prophecies were fulfilled and that they proved the depth of their conviction by the sacrifices that they willingly made.

This wonderful chapter closes with the curing of blind Bartimaeus—the name is given in the tenth chapter of Mark.

This passage has furnished themes for many sermons. First, a comparison can be drawn between different kinds of blindness. Those who are physically blind are unfortunate, but not so unfortunate as those who are intellectually blind; and the intellectually blind are not nearly so unfortunate as those who are spiritualy blind.

Blind Bartimaeus.

Blind Bartimaeus knew that he was blind; many of those who are intellectually blind, and a still larger proportion of those who are spiritually blind, do not know that they are blind.

Bartimaeus wanted to be healed; many of those who recognize their intellectual or spiritual blindness do not care to be healed.

Bartimaeus knew to whom to look for a cure and he pleaded for help—pleaded the more earnestly when those who went before Jesus officiously rebuked him.

No emphasis need be placed upon the fact that Jesus opened the eyes of the blind man. It mattered not that he was a beggar; Christ is no respecter of persons. He did not hesitate to reject a rich young ruler, and so he did not hesitate to accept a poor blind man who sat by the wayside asking alms.

What a variety of clarifying glimpses this one chapter gives us of the many-sided Christ!

He teaches us to be patient and persistent in prayer; He distinguishes between the boastful mouthings of the self-satisfied and the humble petition of the truly penitent. He immortalizes the innocence and truthfulness of childhood and makes it the gateway through which the Christian may enter into the kingdom.

Besides these, we have a purse-proud young man rejected and the faith of a blind beggar rewarded. In addition, we have a forecast of His crucifixion and His resurrection—a revelation for which His most intimate companions were not yet ready.

And this is only one chapter of one book of the Book of Books which reveals the divine will, and divine wisdom for the instruction of all mankind.

dram; cold cream (made with white petrolatum) 6 drams. This should be dispensed in a collapsible tube, for cleanliness.

When itching or burning is intense, it is advantageous to add to the formula about five grains of menthol.

Lest some subjects of pruritus be tempted still to scratch, I had better add one more recipe, which some sufferers dubbed "dew of Sahara," because it is so grateful to the dry, rough, harsh, itching skin:

Powdered tragacanth, 1 dram; phenol, 5 drops; glycerin, 5 drops; oil of bergamot, 5 drops; olive oil, 4 ounces; distilled water, enough to make one pint.

This is to be thoroughly shaken up for a few minutes several times in twenty-four hours, to make an emulsion.

Now, if the printers deal kindly with these three receipes I have ventured to publish (and if you knew the terrible anxiety that is mine till I see what the printers will do with my formulas, you would admit I am a brave man), here is an opportunity for you to rejuvenate your old wrapper.

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS REMAINS IN ATLANTA

Wonder Picture To Show Another Week at the Atlanta Theater.

Douglas Fairbanks' glorious fantasy of the "Arabian Nights," "The Thief of Bagdad," will begin its second and positively final week at the Atlanta theater with matinee and night performances tomorrow (Monday) and continuing twice daily thereafter at 2:30 and 8:30. This photoplay surpasses anything heretofore seen on the screen. This extraordinary picture has upset the equilibrium of the critics in every city in which it has been presented. It is the crescendo picture of the screen. It is a fantastical love-story and adventure laid in an imaginary world of fancy, abounding with amazing happenings, and what critics generally have called unbelievable wonders. If you still believe in love, if adventure still stirs you, if you like your heart to miss beats in ecstatic moments of exciting suspense, if you enjoy the surprise of seeing things that heretofore you thought were impossible—here in "The Thief of Bagdad" you will find them, in the background of beauty and splendor. In this picture a winged horse flies up to and through the clouds; a magic carpet soars over the housetops and into the sky; wonder after wonder, surprise after surprise, are here revealed in amazing abundance. To depict such happenings on the screen has never before been considered within the bounds of possibility. This crowning achievement has been accomplished by Douglas Fairbanks. It has received the highest endorsements that any picture has ever received. In this particular it will be well to repeat what Robert L. Sherwood wrote in his department in "The Silent Drama" in Life, April 3, 1924. "After seeing 'The Thief of Bagdad' I am more competent to understand the motives which inspired the sturdy Britons who have been struggling for years to reach the peak of Mt. Everest. I now know what it means to be able to say 'Well, I've been to the top.' Standing at the point marked by this "Arabian Nights" entertainment which Douglas Fairbanks has fashioned, I can look down to the lesser summits of 'Robin Hood,' 'Broken Blossoms,' 'Passion' and the rest; several miles below, and barely discernible from this dizzy altitude, lie 'Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight,' 'Rags to Riches' and the 'Old Nest.' There may well be higher peaks than that achieved by 'The Thief of Bagdad,' but if there are, they have not as yet been chartered on any of the existent contour maps." This picture will positively not be shown anywhere else in this city this season.

DOUBLE HEADLINE AT KEITH'S FIRST HALF

Two acts, differing greatly in their nature, but identical in their high quality of entertaining ability, will be the headlining feature at Keith's Forsyth theater the first three days of this week and form the nucleus for one of the best programs offered this season.

They are a "Trip to Danceland," a singing and dancing revue, and Neal Abel in "Negro Dialect and Songs."

Neal Abel in known from coast to coast as one of the most able entertainers on the vaudeville stage. His has been a long career of successes as a dialectitian. His stories are of the southern darky, and there are few narrators who can tell a story so well. His yarns are gained first hand as he spends most of his spare time collecting material.

Mr. Abel works "white face" and depends entirely upon his dialect to get his stories across. He is described as the man with the "mobile face" and this ability of countenance is of material aid. In addition to his stories he will do some excellent soft shoe dancing and complete his performance with songs.

The "Trip to Danceland" act is a most unusual song and dance revue. Girls aplenty add color and enjoyment to the extraordinary dance numbers, and one of the big features of the turn are the scenic effects contrived.

Eddie Black and Claire O'Connell, characterizing "A Village Nut," can cause more laughs than the majority of comedians. A small town is the locale of their most diverting sketch. It does not require a great deal of imagination to see the possibilities of their act for entertaining purposes.

The girl in the role of the visiting concert artist is followed from the railway station, accosted by the village nut, who is runner for the town hotel, and the resulting controversy leads to many agreeable surprises.

Hammer and Hammer present a scene called "Woodland Echoes," a picturesque bit of woodland with a variety of electrical effects, peopled by elves impersonated by this accomplished team. They are contortionists and they bend and twist in such manners as seems almost impossible of belief. Their remarkable routine is made materially more effective by the handsome way it is mounted and presented.

Harry Hayden and his company have an interesting and entertaining skit entitled "The Love Game," which rounds the excellent program. A Pathe news reel and an installment of Aesop's fables also will be included.

'PAYS TO ADVERTISE' AT LYRIC THIS WEEK

Atlanta Ad Club Sponsors Inspiring Farce Comedy of American Business.

"It Pays to Advertise," the inspiring farce comedy of successful business and triumphant romance, is the offering of this week at the Lyric theater, where the Lyric players will present it, beginning on ladies' bargain night Monday, with the indorsement and support of the Atlanta Advertising club.

The comedy is a laugh hit from the first quiver of the first curtain to the final encore after the last one. Edith King, as the youthful secretary to the soap trust king, who winds the magnate's callow son around her little finger; Wilfred Lytell as the callow son who develops an unbelievable amount of pep and high purpose in the winding; Gus Forbes as the advertising manager, who is old Mr. Pen himself, have the central characters of the piece.

Many Atlantans who have seen the motion picture version, produced by Paramount-Arteraft after the phenomenal success the comedy attained on the speaking stage, will remember Bryant Washburn in the part Lytell has, Lois Wilson as the girl Miss King plays and the jovial Walter Hiers, Georgia boy who has become famous as a comedian, in the comedy part played here by Forbes.

The original purpose of Walter Hackett and Roi Cooper Mergue in writing "It Pays to Advertise" was to create the "great American business comedy" and the central theme of advertising was the natural selection of the playwrights because modern advertising is so peculiarly an American institution.

As they advanced their preparation of the play they became so thoroughly "sold" on the powers and possibilities of advertising and so enthusiastic about the characters and situations they had drawn that the comedy became one of the most stimulating and inspiring pieces of comedy writing that has ever been given to the American stage.

"We bought the Atlanta rights to the play early last spring, but were counselled against using it until cool weather began because it sends people away so full of pep and determination to do things that it might have caused a wave of heat prostration if it had been produced during the hot months," Montague Salmon, Lyric manager, confided to the theater's press agent Saturday.

"By producing it now just at the beginning of the invigorating fall season and with prospects of the briskest business of the last five years in all lines, we believe it should be a big success as an attendance-getter and as a contribution to the general business revival in Atlanta and its territory."

Although Miss King, Lytell and Forbes get the central roles in the comedy, William Macauley as the rich father, Will Loyd as a big business man, Rankin Mansfield as an English gentleman of leisure, Gavin Harris and Finley Freeman in business-like characterizations, get splendid chances at good comedy acting.

The full feminine strength of the company is called into the play, with Loraine Bernard in a fascinating character as a fake French princess with oodles of coin and gowns that make Paris proud of itself, with Marion White in a snappy business girl character and Ramona Weaver as a French maid.

The comedy may be seen any night this week or at matinee Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday.

'A NIGHT IN SPAIN' IS LOEW'S HEADLINER

Nine People Are in Cast of M. Golden's Fantastic Presentation.

The romance of old Spain, with its beautiful melodies and fascinating dances, will be depicted at Loew's Grand theater this week in a spectacular fantistic Spanish revue presented by M. Golden. "A Night in Spain" is the title of this beautiful revue and a cast of nine people, four men and five girls, will dance and sing their way into the hearts of the audiences who attend Loew's Grand this week.

Beautiful settings with true Spanish artistry will lend a soft fascinating tone to this revue, with the figures of the pretty girls in the cast and the men in their striking costumes gliding in and out of those dances of Castile, which have been in opera the world over. The songs, representative of the romantic nature of Spain, will be heard, too, and rendered by a company who are skilled in vocal work. This revue, which has gained the unstinted praise of critics in the east and north, will be presented in Atlanta just as it was in New York and Washington and the other big cities. Besides the excellency of its presentation, "A Night in Spain" is truly an entertaining vaudeville headliner and holds rank among the better headliners of the vaudeville circuits of this country. It is an act that no one can afford to miss and one that you will remember for months.

"Helene (Smiles) Davis and Laughs" is another big feature offering at Loew's this week, and Helene (Smiles) Davis needs but little introduction to Atlanta theatergoers. This is an act in which there is presented a clever combination of songs, laughter, and steps, with Miss Davis' personality radiating throughout the whole performance. She and her partner will give one of the most pleasant ten or fifteen minutes of vaudeville possible.

Manny Besser and Bert Keller will present "The Screen Test," by Al Bonsberg, a rip-roaring comedy sketch that boasts of not a single dull moment. There is an extremely funny plot in this sketch and Besser and Keller have rich lines and know how to handle them. This act will prove a decided treat.

Ernie Gordon and Evelyn Delmar in "Songs as You Like Them" will present just exactly what their billing says, a collection of popular songs that people like. This couple in addition has a splendid and clever line of comedy sketches and pianologues that will make a big hit.

Frank Shields in "A Western Novelty" is a true cowboy who will demonstrate some of the stunts for which the cowboy has become famous.

Mae Busch, Pat O'Malley, Wanda Hawley, Hobart Bosworth and several other stars will be seen in the feature picture, "Bread."

ANNA MAE COLEMAN BACK FROM STUDIES CLASSIC DANCE ART

Miss Anna Mae Coleman, who has been for the past two months in New York studying all the latest of the modern and ancient classic dancing, is back in Atlanta. Miss Coleman stated Saturday she would not reopen her school in Atlanta until about the sixth of next month.

While in New York she took complete courses in acrobatic dancing, the latest dance craze, from the famous "Michael," and studied the ballet with Ivan Tarosoff.

When the new school is opened next month Miss Coleman will teach these dances and all of the stage dancing for which she is now well known.

MILADY'S FINGERS MADE FREE FROM NICOTINE

No more nicotine for milady's fingers.

Likewise no more cumbersome cigarette holders to be misplaced on to clutter up the fiminine smoker's dressing table.

For her recent role of a vampirish screen actress, Betty Blythe, originated a tiny little appliance which serves to keep nicotine stains away and yet dispenses with the conventional cigarette holder.

This small clasp to hold the cigarette can be attached in a second to any ring. As worn by Miss Blythe in Samuel Goldwyn's production for First National of "In Hollywood With Potash and Perlmutter," it was slipped under a large turquoise first-finger ring. When not in use it is easily removable or can be worn indefinitely without inconvenience.

Betty Blythe shows just how it can be utilized in the accompanying scene close-up.

NORMA SHEARER ON ROAD TO FAME

Is Norma Shearer, Canadian, traveling the same road to fame as her illustrious countrywoman, Mary Pickford?

It would appear so, judging from the quality of her work in recent pictures, the rapidity with which she has forged to the front and the opinion of her fellow players.

Hardly known in Hollywood a year and a half ago, she has played leading roles recently in several outstanding successes. Recently she was signed by Paramount to support Jack Holt in "Empty Hands." The story is an adaptation of the Arthur Stringer novel by Carey Wilson and has been produced by Victor Fleming.

It presents in daring contrast, the modern social worker of the city and the stark reality of untamed life in the wilderness. The wilderness 'shots' give Miss Shearer every opportunity to display her prowess as a champion all-'round athlete and former member of the Montreal A. A. A. Montreal was her birthplace and she is remembered there as one of the best known exhibition swimmers and divers in Canada.

Midnight Frolic For Whites at The 81 Theater

Friday night at 11 p. m. Manager Charles P. Bailey promises the best midnight frolic ever staged in Atlanta at The 81 theater for white patrons.

Irvin C. Miller, the famous negro comedian and directing genius of the musical comedy, "Liza," which ran three years on Broadway to capacity houses, will appear on The 81 theater stage, with all the original "Liza" girls. The show comes to The 81 direct from New York, positively one of the snappiest musical revues ever to show in this city at anywhere near the price. You will hear good music, jazz a-plenty, remarkable dancing, bright bits of talk and all the high lights of better musical comedies.

Emmett Anthony, a colored comedian who rivals Miller, is a notable member of the star cast especially added for the frolic. A blues singer of reputation has also been added to make this really the best and biggest show ever promoted by manager of The 81 theater.

Mr. Bailey stated that, this being the first of a number of big shows to be shown this year, he wants it to be the best.

For your convenience the tickets will go on sale at the theater, 81 Decatur street, Tuesday, 10 a. m., prices being 75c, $1.00 and $1.50. Get yours early, as the theater only seats 1,600 people, and it looks like a sell-out. Remember Friday night.

BELLE BENNETT HERE IN BIG COMEDY PLAY

Metropolitan Has Old Atlanta Favorite in the Season's Big Laugh.

Comedy of the most delicious and wholesome order will dominate the Metropolitan's program this week. Remembering the inimitable "Potash and Perlmutter" which came to this theater a few months ago one hails with delight the announcement that the latest venture of the famous partners—their experience as motion picture producers in Hollywood—forms the basis for the feature, "In Hollywood With Potash and Perlmutter," that is the prime attractin at the Metropolitan this week.

Again Alexander Carr, creator of "Mawruss," has the Perlmutter role, and George Sidney, famous for Hebrew characterizations on the stage, fills the place made vacant by the death of Barney Bernard and gives an interpretation of Abe Potash that is a joy. Vera Gorson is Rosie Potash ano queenly Betty Blythe is Rita Sismondi, vampire de luxe.

But hear the best of the story. The fifth, and surely in Atlanta destined to be the most popular member of this imposing cast, is Belle Bennett—the same whose blonde beauty and histrionic ability kept her in the enviable position of leading lady in the Forsyth and Lyric stock company for twenty-eight successive weeks.

From Atlanta Miss Bennett went to San Francisco for a stock engagement, but it was not long before the call of the camera took her to Los Angeles—and to Hollywood, where Samuel Goldwyn, just putting "In Hollywood with Potash and Perlmutter" into production, sought her for the part of the young, pretty and exceedingly colorful Ruth Perlumutter.

An aggregation of talent you'll say; and more than that, a production that takes even higher rank as entertainment than the first "Potash and Perlmutter" feature. Immensely clever titles, up-to-the-minute, sparkling, wholesome and humorous, abound throughout the film.

Then there's Literary Digest's "Fun From the Press," which will be screened to the tune of "Dixie's Favorite Son," a Feist hit; the usual Kinograms screen news; a Mack Sennett comedy, riotous, rollicking and swift-moving, "Lizzies of the Field."

Enrico Leide's music furnishes whatever else may be desired. His numbers include the overture, a fantasy on Pagliacci by Leoncavallo, an organ interlude by J. Gordon Moore and a musical setting for "In Hollywood With Potash and Perlmutter" with "The Vamp" is the central theme.

A copy of the first cut print of "A Sainted Devil" has been forwarded to Rudolph Valentino at Juen Les Pins, Antibes, France. Mr. Valentino sailed the day following the completion of his work in the production at the Paramount Long Island studio.

'THE ALASKAN' AT THE HOWARD AS FEATURE

Thomas Meighan Is Star of Curwood's Story of the North.

Wantonly violating the sanctity of a mother's grave, John Graham laid the foundation of a mighty hatred. Upon this incident is based the story of Thomas Meighan's latest starring vehicle, "The Alaskan," which Willis Golbeck adapted from James Oliver Curwood's famous novel of the same name. Local movieites will have the opportunity of seeing America's favorite male star in the greatest picture of his screen career, as the production is scheduled for a week's run at the Howard this week. Produced for Paramount by Herbert Brennon, "The Alaskan" is said to be the year's outstanding success as an out door picture. The entire company was transported to the wilds of Alberta and British Columbia, where all of the exterior scenes were filmed. Featured in the cast chosen to support Thomas Meighan are Estelle Taylor, John Sainpolis, Charles Ogle Frank Campeau and Anna May Wong. "The Alaskan" is founded upon a conflict between native born Alaskans, sons of the gold-rush pioneers, and the powerful financial interests which strove to gain control of Alaskan industries. The feud between Graham and young Alan Holt, played by Mr. Meighan, begins when the former, engaged in the blasting operations, carelessly destroys the grave of Holt's mother. Begun at first simply as a physical conflict, the struggle continues before a senatorial investigation committee in Seattle. Meighan's testimony exposes the designs of the Graham interests in the far north. On his way back to Alaska after this investigation Meighan falls in love with a young girl, Mary Standish, played by Estelle Taylor. Later her actions lead him to believe that she is in league with his enemies, and to his horror he learns that she is the wife of Graham. The subsequent battle between Holt and Graham in the far north, where there is no law, and the surprising part that Mary Standish plays in it furnish some of the most thrilling action ever flashed on the silver sheet. If you are looking for film entertainment de luxe then don't miss seeing "The Alaskan." It's Meighan's latest and best production.

With the summer vacations over and all of the artists back at their desks in the pit, the Howard Symphony orchestra will open its regular winter series of standard overtures this week with Wagner's "Tannhauser." Of course Tannhauser needs no introduction to Atlanta music lovers and its presentation at the Howard with Mr. Risinger conducting will mark the beginning of a series of five or six such standard offerings to be offered every three or four weeks during the winter season. In direct contrast to the overture Conductor Risinger will also introduce as a musical specialty this week a popular young Atlanta business man and composer in a group of his own favorite works, played as a piano solo with the Howard Symphony orchestra in accompaniment. The young artist is Forney Wyly, whose compositions, most of them of the productive order, have been heard quite frequently at the most select dances and one or two of them have been recorded by the phonograph laboratories. The fantasia to be presented this week will include "Sara an' Grace," "When the Show is Falling," "Paradise Orchard," "Once in a Lifetime," "Love Comes Creeping" and the whole will be presented under the title of "Love Time," which is soon to be released on the records. The prologue will mark the triumphant return to the Howard of Miss Nell Howze after a most brilliant series of appearances with Balaban & Katz at their Chicago theater and other Chicago houses. Miss Howze sang last at the Howard about two years ago in the prologue for "Peg 'o My Heart."

In his score for "The Alaskan" Mr. Risinger will feature "June Brought the Roses" as the love theme, with Roy Lamont Smith's "Keltic Dance" and excerpts from Puccini's "Girl of the Golden West" holding important positions in the musical score. The usual varied and original "Sympho-Jazz" arrangements will accompany the lighter portions of the program.

The Palace Theater.

(Inman Park.)

"Dulcy," the latest "Connie comedy," is altogether different from anything yet made by Miss Talmadge.

The play is described as "typically American." There is plenty of action, much humor and a lot of sustained interest. "Dulcy" was adapted from the New York stage hit by George S. Kaufman and Marc Connelly. It was directed for Producer Joseph M. Schenck by Sidney Franklin and is being distributed by Associated First National Pictures, Inc.

Others in the cast are Jack Mulhall, Frederick Esmelton, Claude Gillingwater, May Wilson, Johnny Harron, Anne Cornwall, Andre de Beranger, Gilert Douglas and Milla Davenport.

It is showing at the Palace theater Monday and Tuesday.

Left to right, Belle Bennett at the Metropolitan in "Potash and Perlmutter in Hollywood." Above center, Constance Talmadge in "Dulcy," at the Palace theater, Inman Park. Right top center, Patsy Ruth Miller in "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," at Alamo No. 2. Right, Mae Bush and Robt. Frazier in "Bread," at Loew's. Below center, Estelle Taylor and Thomas Meighan at the Howard in "The Alaskan." Right, Richard Dix and Bebe Daniels at the Rialto theater.

"The Hunchback."

(At the Alamo No. 2.)

"The Hunchback of Notre Dame," the massive and much-heralded film production of Victor Hugo's story masterpiece, will be given another showing in Atlanta on Monday at Alamo No. 2, where the picture is scheduled for a four-day engagement. Lon Chaney, admittedly the finest interpreter of unusual character roles on either stage or screen, adds another star to his crown by his remarkable portrayal of "Quasimodo," the hunchback, an elemental creature, twisted in body and restricted in mind, who haunts the great church. "Quasimodo, as Mr. Chaney presents him, is said to be a grotesque monster, and yet under the forbidding aspect the actor succeeds in making the character human and pitiful.

RAY JONES NOW WITH LASKY, INC., AT DALLAS, TEX.

Raymond B. Jones, former director of publicity for the Howard theater of this city, who resigned to take charge of a theater in Topeka, Kan., never got to Kansas.

When the Paramount people, of Dallas, Texas, saw the story in The Atlanta Constitution that he had resigned his post in Atlanta they got in touch with him on his way to his new western position and gave him the position of director of publicity of all the Paramount theaters in Dallas. This is a decided promotion for Ray, and we all wish him the best of luck in his new connection.

That Jones can put it over in Dallas is certain as he is a live wire and hard worker, with gobs of originality and personality about him.

The theaters he will promote are the Palace, The Old Mill and Melba.

"The Snob."

Nick Grinde has returned to picture-making after spending a brief period directing stage productions, and has been appointed to assistant to Monta Bell at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio, where Bell is producing Helen R. Martin's "The Snob" from his own adaptation. Grinde, like Monta Bell, began as a newspaper man and then entered pictures. Both have been stage directors. A lasting and harmonious business relationship is predicted for them on the basis of their similarity of tastes and talents.

Famous Negro Comedian.

(At 81 Theater.)

Irvin C. Miller, the famous negro writer and comedian, is showing in Atlanta this week at the 81 theater. Miller has written no less than five Broadway successes, "Liza," which is showing at the 81 Theater, being one of his best. It ran three years on Broadway to capacity houses.

BETTY COMPSON GLAD SHE CUT HER HAIR

(By Betty Compson.)

It took me a year and a half to decide to bob my hair, and for three days afterwards I cried.

Now I am glad I did it—bobbed it, I mean.

I'll never have long hair again. It's silly.

In the summer when it was boiling hot, I used to envy men. They had no pounds and pounds of hair curled around their heads. They didn't have to spend hours every morning brushing and combing, combing and brushing. They didn't have to hunt frantically for just one more hairpin, when time was short.

Now that I've bobbed my hair, neither do I. If it happens to be a hot day I can fluff my hair with my fingers, and never have to worry about arranging the strands. I can put on a rubber cap and go swimming, and if the water does leak through there's nothing to worry about; my hair will dry in a few minutes. I can give it a couple of swishes with a brush and a comb and I'm ready for the day. Hairpins are only a dim, distant and unbereaved memory.

They say long hair is a woman's crowning glory. Perhaps that's true. But I'd rather have a bob than a crown, any day.

"The Great Divide."

Psychoanalysts have endorsed William Vaughn Moody's "The Great Divide," which Reginald Barker is producing at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio with Conway Tearle and Alice Terry in the leading roles, and declare it psychologically sound. They state that love and hate are essentially the same emotion, and that Ruth Jordan abandoned the man who had kidnaped and forced her into marriage because of her inability to understand this fact. It nevertheless accounts, they conclude, for her eventual reconciliation with him, and the theory is proved by it.

"SINNERS IN HEAVEN" RICHARD DIX STARRING

Bebe Daniels Also in Rialto Theater Picture.

Every once in a while there appears in the film horizon a motion picture that offers something new in the way of story and theme. Originally in photoplays as regards plot is mighty rare, and for that very reason "Sinners in Heaven," which comes to the Rialto theater for a week's engagement Monday, deserves to be singled out for special and honorable mention.

The many film fans the title of this photoplay has a familiar and reminiscent sound. That's because it was adapted by James Creelman from the powerful novel of the same name by Clive Arden, who had the coveted honor of having this story adjudged the prize winner in the English book competition of last year.

The Rialto program also includes an Imperial comedy, "Arabia's Last Alarm;" the International Newsreel and the musical program, which this week will find the Rialto musicians producing the weird haunting strains of the music of the South Sea Islanders in an expert manner, lending the correct atmosphere to the picture.

"Sinners in Heaven" tells the story of a man and a girl who, through cruelty of fate, are wrecked from a hydroplane on a tropical island off the coast of Africa. Try to imagine what would happen if you found yourself stranded in some remote corner of the earth, apparently a million miles from any sign of civilization and your only companion was a person your cordially disliked.

That is the situation that confronts Barbara Stockley, the heroine, and you can readily understand the tremendous possibilities for dynamic and rich drama when we tell you that the girl eventually falls in love with the man and marries him, there in the heart of the African island desert. How the marriage is performed and bye, I'll see you—never."

'BREAD' BIG FEATURE PHOTOPLAY AT LOEW'S

"The woman in business," one of the biggest developments of modern life, is the subject around which revolves the plot of "Bread," Metro-Goldwyn's screen version of Charles G. Norris' highly successful novel, which comes to Loew's Grand theater tomorrow for a run of six days.

Which comes first? A woman's duty to her husband, to her children or to herself? Should a woman with a natural instinct for business sacrifice her talents to the home? Can love take the place of the daily excitement of being in the midst of business accomplishments?

Charles Norris, the author of "Brass" and "Salt," in writing this story, made it one of deep significance for everyone in America. It strikes at a vital thing in our life, a problem which is hitting more homes every year, and, transferred to the screen, it makes a really timely drama of modern life.

The screen version was directed by Victor Schertzinger, who has lately handled the megaphone for such productions as Jackie Coogan's "Long Live the King," "A Boy of Flanders," and his own, "The Man Life Passed By."

The chief part is played by Mae Busch, who has appeared in many big productions in the past year, including "The Christian," "Nellie, the Beautiful cloak model," "Name the Man," "The Shooting of Dan McGrew," and "Broken Barriers." Robert Frazer, who has been called by Pola Negri "the best lover on the screen," is the leading man. He has lately appeared in a number of successes which include "Women Who Give," "Men," "When a Man's a Man," "Jazzmania" and "Broken Barriers."

Then there are Pat O'Malley, whose Irish features have shared the screen with Laurette Taylor, Mary Philbin and many others; Wanda Hawley, who scores a wonderful come-back in this picture; Hobart Bosworth, Myrtle Stedman, Ward Crane, Raymond Lee and Eugenie Besserer.

The story deals with the countrywide problem of the woman in business; what it does for girls who want to be independent, in economic advantages, and its danger to home life. It is a vital discussion of American life and develops many thrilling moments of drama, as well as a plentiful supply of comedy moments.

The screen adaptation was made by Albert Lewyn and Lenore Coffey. It is a Louis B. Mayer presentation.

Ben Turpin, who makes comedies for Mack Sennett and Pathe, announces that he is the only man that can cry down his own back. With this accomplishment he should adopt the pet parting expression, "Good-bye, I'll see you—what happens after that we will let you discover for yourself.

An indication of the extreme care that went into the making of this screen play may be seen in the array of cinema talent that has been assembled for the various roles. Bebe Daniels and Richard Dix have the two featured places, while the supporting cast includes Holmes Herbert, Montague Love, Effie Shannon, Florence Billings, Betty Hilburn and Marcia Harris and others.

BOOK REVIEWS IN TABLOID

THE WISHBONE MAN, by Cornell Greening, noted cartoonist, is the book that all the little folks have been wishing for, and of which Jackie Coogan says:

"I have had lots of fun with 'The Wishbone Man.' 'The Wishbone man is great—I want to follow 'The Wishbone Man' all the time."

This is one of the most charming and interesting books for little folks that has been published this season. The author dedicates it "To Jackie Coogan," that lovable child whose intelligent interest in the adventures of Eb and Flo, and The Wishbone Man was an inspiration to their creator.

It is an oblong containing lots of pictures, and there's an interesting story too—and it can be said that all the sketches are really stories told in cartoons.

These stories of "The Wishbone Man," are for "just folks"—the small folks no matter where thew live, and they are sure to have a good time if they will make friends with "The Wishbone Man," for Jackie Coogan says so. (The Century Company, New York.)

TAKE YOUR CHOICE.

Clinton W. Gilbert, one of the authors of "The Mirrors of Washington," which was written under "Anonymous," and which was well dusted before publication, attracted as much attention as the "The Mirrors of Downing Street." This volume selected fourteen of Washington's great political figures and in doing so made a near expose of American politics. It was indeed a brilliant satirical study of great Americans.

And now the author is presented in his true role—as he undertakes to "write up" for the benefit of his many readers in political circles the three outstanding figures at this time: John W. Davis, Calvin Cooledge and Robert La Follette.

Mr. Gilbert is an expert with a pen—also a duster—he is a popular newspaper man who has devoted a great deal of time to the interesting and mysterious game of politics which has been and is being played in Washington.

"Take your choice," the three candidates are now before you, and the story of the three as written by Mr. Gilbert will be found most interesting, yet impartial, as he gives a biographical sketch of each, stating facts, presenting their ideals through open windows, and even looking beyond into the future.

These three prospective candidates for the presidency are entirely different types, different characterists, which will have to be closely studied by every citizen, especially Mr. La Follette, who has always been called "Fighting Bob," the man who has never learned the value of a smile.

The world has been called a stage and on the American stage at this time are three well-known Americans whose work ranks from light comedy to near tragedy and the audience which is watching these noted actors with intense interest is made up of the citizenship of the United States. Take your choice! (G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York.)

ADEQUATE BREVITY.

A little volume which has just come from the press, and which is a "Collation and Coordination of the Mental Processes and Reactions of Calvin Coolidge," as expressed in his addresses and messages, and constituting a self-delineation of his character and ideals, edited and compiled by Robert J. Thompson, is really a character study which is worth while devoting a little time to, especially now that the subject of the sketch is before the public. Listen to these:

"America still the land of opportunity."

"Our first duty is to ourselves. You represent every part of this nation, every activity of this nation."

"Without a healthy, productive and prosperous agriculture, there can be no real national prosperity."

"The army is a guarantee of the security of our citizens at home."

"There is no surer road to destruction than prosperity without character."

"Education is to teach men not what to think, but how to think."

"We are not going to be able to avoid meeting the world and bearing our part of the burdens of the world."

"We cannot escape the effect of world conditions."

There are about 100 pages in this little volume—simply a collection of the author's sayings on almost every subject. (M. A. Donohue & Co., Chicago. Price, 50 cents.)

THE NATIONAL MUSIC OF AMERICA.

The National Music of America, and Its Sources, by Louis C. Elson, author of "Curiosities of Music," "The Great Composers and Their Work, This is a revision of the volume which was published in 1899 and immediately welcomed in all musical circles.

The late Mr. Elson was a musical authority and his books were read with much interest, they were instructive, in fact fascinating to the lovers of music. Twenty-five years have passed since that time during which time books have been written and published, studied and thrown aside, but this book found a resting place of its own and has never been displaced by any other work on the subject.

Realizing the importance of the volume and of the ever-changing movements of the musical world along with other arts and enterprises, the publishers decided to make revision and in doing so placed the work in the hands of the noted author's son, Arthur Elson, who has added much new material which brings it up to date.

This volume should be in every library, every music club should not only study its contents, but it is a splendid reference book. No matter which corner of the U. S. A. the reader represents he will not feel lonely if he will study this book which is filled with the words and the music of the noted songs of this country. (L. C. Page Co., Boston.)

RELIGIOUS BOOKS.

The Methodist Book Concern. A Romance of History, by H. C. Jennings, for 24 years one of its publishing agents. This little volume of about 300 pages covers many interesting questions and subjects which are not only valuable to all members of the church but which are being asked by many people, especially now when church controversies have become so popular.

The author has not attempted to furnish general statistical information but enough figures and dates are given to make it interesting to the readers. Of course the book is not original, but it is made up of facts gathered from different authors who in their turn quoted in the same way.

One of the most interesting chapters is the story of the Methodist Book Concern. It is a unique story in which it tells how in 1789 it operated on a capital of $600 and is now, after 135 years, in a flourishing condition.

The Essentials of Methodism. By Bishop Francis J. McConnell, of which the Pittsburgh Christian Advocate says:

"This little book is a strong, helpful, convincing discussion of such Methodist fundamentals as Conversion, Sanctification, Christian Nurture and the Witness of the Spirit. A careful reading of this volume would clear away the confusion existing in many minds with respect to the things upon which Methodist lays most emphasis.

The Methodists. By John Alfred Faulkner, of which the Christian Advocate says: "For thoroughness of information and lucidity of treatment it cannot be surpassed. It would be an admirable introductory manual for newcomers into Methodism."

John Wesley, the Methodist. A plain account of his life and work. By a Methodist preacher. This is a very interesting book. It is filled with incidents and anecdotes and is readable. While the story of John Wesley has been written many, many times, the readers will find something new in this volume to study. (The Methodist Book Concern, New York City.)

JUNIOR BOOKS.

Theras and His Town. By Caroline Dale Snedeker, author of "The Spartan" and "The Perilous Seat," splendid tales of Greek life for older boys and girls—but this story is for the little folks and they will find it a most ralistic story.

The book is attractively illustrated and the story which is woven around a boy of the age of the little school boys and girls will appeal to them.

Land and Sea Tales for Boys and Girls. By Kipling, whose works have not all been for the grown-ups. This book is made up of many poems and stories that have never been published before and how delighted the children were when it was known that Rudyard Kipling was writing a book of stories from boys and girls.

In years to come when these boys and girls have grown to manhood and womanhood, and have handed down their library of junior books among them, there will be none to give more pleasure than the Land and Sea Tales by Kipling.

The Just-So Painting Books for Children is something new, and the children will enjoy this added pleasure when the winter months come with the door closed and the nursery and the library is made attractive and comfortable for them. (Doubleday, Prge & Co. New York.)

The Friends of Diggeldy Dan. By Edwin P. Norwood, with illustrations by A. Conway Peyton. This is a most interesting story book for boys and girls from seven to twelve years old.

Diggledy Dan is a popular circus clown, in fact he is the most wonderful circus clown in the whole world and the story goes that he was permitted by the circus fairy to release all the animals in the circus menagerie for one hour and during this time they could do just as they pleased. so the clown takes them out for a little fun, and such a time as they had when they went to visit the king of the Jungleland. Illustrated by A. Conway Pepton. (Little, Brown & Co. Boston.)

LITERARY DRIFTWOOD.

Advice From Margaret Deland.

Margaret Deland relates, that as a child, she was not allowed to read anything without the consent of her aunt in whose household she was brought up. Scott, Hawthorne, parts of the Spectator and the Tattler, Shakespeare, and most of all the Bible, were given her to read, and these things formed her literary taste. Mrs. Deland feels that it is a serious mistake to allow a child to suppose that anything it writes is to be taken seriously, and she is convinced that her aunt's apparent neglect of her childhood literary efforts was of great assistance to her in her future work. Mrs. Deland's latest book is "New Friends in Old Chester."

Marcosson "Glad to Leave Russia."

Isaac F. Marcosson, author of "The Black Golconda," writes that he has emerged from Russia after remarkable experiences there—glad to be out of the unrest and suspicion and back into civilization again. Mr. Marcosson sailed for America September 10 on the Homeric.

CURRENT MAGAZINES.

The Antiquarian. A monthly magazine for the collection of antiques, works of art and rarities. The September issue illustrates chairs of the Louis XIII period, Bristol china, furniture at Mount Vernon; old New England wedding chests; old world masters in new world galleries, etc.

Outdoor America, which is owned and published by the Izaak Walton League of America—defender of woods, water and wild life, presents an interesting number for the beginning of the fall, with a most attractive little poem entitled "When September Comes to the Little River," also a story "When Game was Tame," etc.

South's Leading Editors Will Speak at Mercer

Augusta, Ga., September 20.—That Mercer university students in the school of journalism may have the benefit of the experiences of able editors of the south in equipping themselves for the profession a plan has been evolved whereby at least monthly, and possibly oftener, the best minds in the newspaper profession in Georgia and the southeast will give counsel and advice to the student body. The plan was submitted to a recent meeting of the board of trustees by Thomas J. Hamilton, a member of the board and editor of the Augusta Chronicle, who was named chairman of a special committee of the faculty and trustees to work it out. Dr. Rufus W. Weaver, president of the university, in a letter to the editor of The Chronicle, expresses appreciation for the suggestion and places the university itself squarely back of the plan.

Already the consent of able editors in Georgia and throughout this section has been obtained to address the school of journalism, although no dates have as yet been announced. Richard H. Edmonds, editor of the Manufacturers Record, of Baltimore, one of the most brilliant of southern journalists, expresses deep regret that he cannot attend on account of the invalidism of a beloved member of his family, but Mr. Edmonds will write an address on "Journalism and Its Duty to Humanity," which will be read to the students. Colonel John Temple Graves, editor of the Hendersonville (N. C.) Daily Times, has consented to address the students and acceptances are coming in by every mail. Editors of the leading papers of Georgia are expected to cooperate enthusiastically.

Start Innovation.

"To give Mercer university journalism students the maximum of advantages so that they may possess superior equipment for their profession, is the purpose of the plan," reads a statement issued here today by Mr. Hamilton, and the trustees and faculty have heartily endorsed it.

"Whether any other school of journalism has as a fixed program lectures semi-monthly, or at least monthly, by editors of outstanding character and ability, I do not know, but I think it is an innovation. We have an able journalism faculty, but it matters not how accomplished are the regular instructors, lectures by men and women of the profession who stand for high ideals of journalism in their own communities and whose hands are stained with printers' ink through daily contact, will inspire our embryo journalists and instil into them a more intense fondness for that estate which Edmund Burke said was the most powerful of them all.

Aid Government.

"The points of view of various editors upon big questions of the day, their ideas and ideals of the newspaper profession, their personalities and the reflection of those personalities on the papers they edit will prove fascinating in the extreme to young men and women whose laudable ambitions are to climb the circuitous route that leads to journalistic success. Newspapers, according to Dean Cunliffe, of the Pulitzer School of Journalism, will be fewer and better in the future, but newspapers will only be better," he continued, "if the men conducting them have intelligence, education, professional capacity and a keen sense of public responsibility. If the conception of the newspaper as a private business enterprise should become universal, and if it should no longer be regarded as a public trust, I do not see how democratic government is to be carried on.

"The last statement is a self-evident truth to all real newspaper men and women, who have as their motto the principle of Rotary, that those who profit most serve best.

Instil Duty.

"However, the duties and obligations of the editor and the reporter cannot be stressed too much upon those who aspire to join the ranks of the profession. It is a hard life, often without adequate financial recompense when the amount of ability, energy and consecration to duty are considered. Indeed to be a real success as a journalist, I believe one has to be an idealist. With all of its hardships and discouragements, however, the newspaper profession is the most fascinating in all the world and those who do not catch the vision of what it means and are not willing to undergo hardships, endure sacrifice and work long hours for the joy that they find in the work, should seek some other profession.

"The young men and women of Mercer will hear much of idealism and learn much of the practical side from the editors who have consented to favor us with lectures—or more properly speaking, talks, about the craft and its problems. It is a duty on the part of the editors of today to help make better the editors of tomorrow. Indeed, it will be considered a privilege by the best minds in our profession in Georgia and the south to make this contribution to the journalism of the future, and the enthusiastic responses to the invitations to address the Mercer School of Journalism are gratifying in the extreme and indicate already such splendid cooperation that assures us in advance the success of the plan."

FLORISTS PLAN SHOW AT BIG ANNUAL FAIR

In connection with the Southeastern fair, Atlanta florists composing the Atlanta Florists' club, are planning to stage the first real flower show ever witnessed in Atlanta.

The greater part of what is known as the Automobile building at Lakewood, is to be the site and the show is to continue through the entire week of the fair. The general planning and decorating committee is headed by John Wilson, manager of the C. A. Dahl, whose varied and extensive experiences in the north and east, make it possible for Atlanta Florists to offer visitors at the Southeastern fair a show equal to those staged in much larger cities.

Mr. Wilson says that from each walkway one will enter among groups of palms and foliage plants, backed with massive columns, topped with dreamy hanging tropical vines; and in the center there will be tables with all the native garden flowers, each variety labeled with correct name; baskets of roses, dahlias, and other flowers. Orchids, the rarest of flowers, will be shown in many varieties, on special days.

In addition to the collection of cut flowers there will be miniature garden effects, with huge aquariums, filled with tropical and native fish of many varieties, and hundreds of canaries.

SEVEN STOLEN CARS RECOVERED; NEGRO IS HELD

Seven automobiles, said to have been stolen in Atlanta, were recovered by police Thursday night, and Percy Lawrence, negro, of 190 East Harris street, who, police claim, was found in one of the machines, is held on a charge of suspicion. It is thought that he is implicated in the theft of several, if not all, of the machines.

Automobiles stolen from the following were recovered: Miss May McCarthy, an employee of the Red Rock company; J. B. Moore, of Florida; J. A. Turner, of 249 Peachtree street; R. W. McRoberts, proprietor of the McRoberts Drug company, and N. Ney, of the Ney Pharmacy. The owner of the other machine, which was found on West Peachtree street, has not been located.

Patrolmen McCrary and Davis, who made the arrest that led to recovery of the machines, stated that they surprised Lawrence as he was sitting in the car owned by Miss McCarthy at Cain and Hilliard streets. Lawrence denies that he is implicated in any of the thefts, but was unable to give a satisfactory explanation of why he was seated in Miss McCarthy's automobile, which was reported stolen several days ago.

MINISTER TO REPLY TO RUPERT HUGHES

Rev. Dr. G. W. Gasque will reply to Rupert Hughes' article, "Why I Quit Going to Church," Wednesday night at 8 o'clock at the Church of Our Savior, corner Highland and Blue Ridge avenues, it was announced Saturday.

In his article, the statement says, Mr. Hughes launches a vicious attack at Christianity and the church. He asserts that there are no less than 300 downright contradictions in the Bible; that the church is the greatest curse that civilization has ever known, and that Christians are in the same catalogue with savages, apes and dogs.

Dr. Gasque will take up each attack and will show that there is not a single contradiction in the Bible; that Christianity is the keystone of civilization, and that men are sons of God and not on a level with dogs and apes, he says.

Barrie Explains Author's Picture Of "Peter Pan"

Hollywood, Calif., September 20.—Cameras have started grinding away on two of the most discussed motion pictures of the year.

"Peter Pan" will get under way at Lasky's and Erich von Stroheim will begin the direction of Mae Murray in "The Merry Widow."

Until Betty Bronson was selected to play "Peter" there was some doubt as to where the picture would be filmed. At last Herbert Brenon, who went to London to go over details of the production with Sir James M. Barrie, sent back word that Hollywood had been chosen. Brenon is here now, ready to start producing. That pilgrimage of Brenon's did more than settle mechanical matters in connection with "Peter Pan"—it brought out what Barrie had intended when he wrote the play.

For Brenon asked him whether "Peter Pan" represented dawn of youth, or the baring of the human soul.

Sir James answered gently, "Why, it is just a little story. I don't know that it means anything. I always thought of Peter Pan as a little boy who died the same day he was born."

A great many other pictures are scheduled to go into production soon. Perhaps the happening which Hollywood is awaiting more curiously than any other is the arrival of Rudolph Valentino.

Valentino is now in Europe looking up appropriate costumes and will hustle back to begin work as soon as possible on a Spanish picture, "Cobra."

Men's Bible Class Of St. Mark's Church Planning Big Year

Starting the fall season with plans for a membership drive and with renewed interest manifested by the members, the Men's Bible class, of the St. Mark Methodist church, is looking forward to one of the most successful years in its history. Judge H. Warner Hill recently has been re-elected teacher of the class and Charles F. Hoke is the new president.

Other officers of the class, which has a membership of 250, are Dr. R. R. Byrnes, vice president; Charles J. Cofer, secretary; Hiram Blair, assistant secretary; Lawton Miller, treasurer; Albert I. Armstrong, leader of section "A," and Lewis N. Dugger, leader of section "B."

A "hand-shake" committee to welcome visitors and greet the members every Sunday, and a past presidents' committee, composed of former presidents of the class, are two organizations which will pep up interest in the activities of the class. Included in the past presidents' committee are Harry M. Houser, president; Dr. B. T. Carter, Thomas H. Scott, Charles M. Marshall and Mr. Hoke, ex-officio member.

The class meets each Sunday at 9:30 o'clock in the building to the right and rear of the church, at Peachtree and Fifth streets.

VALUE OF EXHIBIT COMMERCIAL ART TOLD TO AD CLUB

The educational as well as the artistic value of the commercial art exhibit to be held here the early part of November was brought out in a talk given by F. A. Wilson-Lawrenson to the Advertising Club of Atlanta at its meeting Thursday, at 12:30 o'clock.

The exhibit, which is to be given by the Advertising club, will show how real art may be used in advertising, and is intended to encourage the development of commercial art. Exhibits of original work, as well as reproductions of representative examples of business art, will be shown.

The club's golfing tournament was discussed and it was announced the qualifying rounds would be played off next week.

Thursday was the first meeting of the club since its adjournment during the hot weather. About 50 members were present. As an entertainment feature, Mrs. Dwight Barley, contralto, of the Central Congregational church, sang, accompanied by Mrs. Leroy Rogers, at the piano.

"MYSTIC" TO RETURN MONDAY AND TUESDAY

Two addresses will be deliverd by C. Jinarjadasa, "India's practical mystic," on Monday and Tuesday on the Hotel Ansley roof garden. The lectures will deal with the unification of the human race. Subjects to be discussed are: "The Spiritual Factor in National Life" and "The Coming Christ and His Message."

The lecturer is now making a tour around the world, coming here from Australia and only stopping at cities of leading population of the United States. He is a philosopher as well as a scientist.

COOLIDGE-DAWES CLUB ORGANIZED IN GEORGIA

A Coolidge-Dawes club, similar to the Davis-Bryan club, organized several weeks ago, was formed by the ways and means committee of the state republican party at a meeting held in its offices at 61 1-2 North Forsyth street Thursday afternoon.

Louie H. Crawford was elected president and a board of directors was selected to advise the tactics to be pursued. Dr. W. Y. Gilliam was elected vice president.

The club will have representatives of the republican party stationed at every polling place in the state at the national election, it was stated. There is no membership charge.

Mother, Why Don't You Take Nuxated Iron

And Be Strong and Well and Have Nice Rosy Cheeks Instead of Being Nervous and Irritable All the Time and Looking So Haggard and Old?—The Doctor Gave Some to Susie Smith's Mother and She Was Worse Off Than You Are and Now She Looks Just Fine

The Childs' Appeal

Nuxated Iron Will Increase the Strength and Endurance of Weak, Nervous, Careworn, Haggard Looking Women in Two Weeks' Time in Many Instances

"There can be no healthy, beautiful, rosy cheeked women without plenty of iron in their blood," said a prominent New York physician and medical author recently. "I have strongly emphasized the fact that doctors should prescribe more organic iron—Nuxated Iron—for their nervous, rundown, weak, haggard-looking women patients. Pallor means anaemia. The skin of the anaemic woman is pale, the flesh flabby. The muscles lack tone, brain fags and the memory fails, and often they become weak, nervous, irritable, despondent and melancholy. When the iron goes from the blood of women the roses go from their cheeks. They become weak, irritable, and nervous because food for the nerves can only be supplied through the blood and when the blood is thin and anaemic, the nerves are improperly nourished. The nervous mother or housekeeper is highly irritable, forgets where she puts things, and often cannot remember what she started to do. At night she often has a "good cry" and excuses it by saying it is a relief for her nerves, when it means a high state of nerve force exhaustion. Often her nervousness and irritability is a strain on her children and may help to wreck their delicate nervous systems. Medical science and chemistry have proven that NERVE FORCE IS A DISTINCT SUBSTANCE, SIMILAR TO YOUR BLOOD. It is the most important fluid in your body. It gives life to your nerves and force to your brain. If you cannot think right, if your memory fails, if you are irritable and easily upset, trifling things annoy you, look into your nerve force. When your nerve force becomes weakened, all the vital organs of your body lose their normal strength and vigor, and as a result all kinds of alarming symptoms may appear. From the pains across the back one woman thinks she has kidney trouble; another may think her spine is injured because of the tender spots which may occur thereon. The dull, heavy pain in the lower part of the head or the back of the neck leads another to think she is going to have paresis. Sleeplessness and nervous irritability, heart palpitation and indigestion are very common symptoms. Some people are born with a very small amount of nervo-vital fluid, because the nerve force has been squandered by the lives led by their ancestors. Others use up their nerve force faster than the body can make it but in every case, your nerve force is your capital in life, and when it is gone your capital is gone, the same as if you had lost or squandered your capital in business. When you lack nerve force there is only one thing that is going to help you, and that is more nerve force. IN SUCH CASES IT IS WORSE THAN FOOLISH TO WASTE YOUR TIME TAKING MERE STIMULATING MEDICINES OR NARCOTIC DRUGS. Your starving nerves must have nerve food or something to supply increased nerve force, the same as a starving man must have bread to make new flesh and muscle. For centuries science searched for a nerve force food. At last a celebrated French physician brought to the attention of the Paris Academy of Medicine a remarkable product which contained the principal chemical constituents of active living nerve force, in a form which most closely resembles that in the brain and nerve cells of man. This wonderful product was later combined with organic iron and other valuable ingredients under the name of "Nuxated Iron," so that today true artificial nerve force ready to be transformed into active living nerve force, the moment it enters the body, may now easily be had, simply by taking two tablets of Nuxated Iron three times a day, with or after your meals. ORGANIC IRON, CONTAINED IN NUXATED IRON, IS LIKE THE IRON IN YOUR BLOOD, and like the iron in spinach, carrots, lentils and apples. It not only quickly enriches the blood, but it also stimulates the blood to manufacture a greatly increased supply of new nerve force, so that Nuxated Iron not only feeds artificial nerve directly to the nerve and brain cells, but it indirectly increases the production of nerve force through the medium of the blood.

MANUFACTURERS' NOTE—Millions of people are using Nuxated Iron. From the remarkably beneficial results which it has produced, the manufacturers feel so certain of its efficacy that they guarantee satisfactory results to every purchaser, or they will refund your money. If you are weak, nervous or run down, get a bottle of Nuxated Iron today, and if within two weeks you do not feel that it has increased your nerve force, and made you feel better and stronger in every way, your money will be refunded. Look for the word "Nuxated" on every package. Sold by all druggists.

Rheumatism!

"Congratulations"—They feel like themselves again.

THERE IS a certain unexplainable feeling that goes with hale and hearty old age—it is a feeling of happiness, of care unknown, of reborn youth!

But rheumatism—that deadly malady which has caused so many to surrender to the woes of pain and suffering—caused so many to forego the pleasures of life—caused so many to be dependent. Why suffer from it?

To be helped about, crutches, canes and willing hands always needed to assist you here and help you there. Rheumatism will vanish the same as skin disorders—the same as sallow complexion—the same as that run-down condition when S.S.S. is used. S.S.S. builds red-blood-cells by the score. Your nerve power is strengthened. When rich, red, healthy blood courses through your system, there is no such thing as inflammation of the muscles and joints. S.S.S. is what you need to retain that old time vim and vigor and vitality, when you turn down the final stretch of life.

Mr. M. A. Farmer, Elyria, Ohio, writes: "S.S.S relieved me of rheumatism and nervousness. It is the best medicine for building up the blood."

S.S.S. is made of carefully selected and scientifically prepared and proportioned herbs and barks. Only pure vegetable ingredients are used. Stronger, healthier bodies—bodies able to withstand the onslaughts of diseases are the results of S.S.S. All leading drug stores carry S.S.S.. The large size is the more economical. THE BLOOD HORSE

Bryan Walter Procter (1787-1874)

Gamarra is a dainty steed,
Strong, black, and of a noble breed.
Full of fire, and full of bone,
With all his line of fathers known.
Fine his nose, his nostrils thin,
But blown abroad by the pride within!
His mane is like a river flowing,
And his eyes like embers glowing
In the darkness of the night,
And his pace as swift as light.
Look,—how 'round his straining throat
Grace and shifting beauty float!

Sinewy strength is in his reins,
And the red blood gallops through his veins;
Richer, redder, never ran
Through the boasting heart of man.
He can trace his lineage higher
Than the Bourbon dare aspire,—
Douglas, Guzman, or the Guelph,
Or O'Brien's blood itself!
He, who hath no peer, was born,
Here, upon a red March morn;
But his famous fathers dead
Were Arabs all, and Arab bred;

And the last of that great line
Trod like one of a race divine!
And yet,—he was but friend to one
Who fed him at the set of sun,
By some lone fountain fringed with green,
With him, a roving Bedouin,
He lived (none else would he obey
Through all the hot Arabian day),
And died untamed upon the sands
Where Balkh amidst the desert stands.

Ziegfeld "Frowns" on Follies Scandals

Comments on Escapades of Frank Tinney, Imogene Wilson and Flo Leeds—Names Most Beautiful Show Girls

By Flora Merrill

TIME and the glorification of American girls have made Florenz Ziegfeld a wary old dog. His beauties may sue and be sued, give interviews in the bathtub and kick over the traces generally, but it is only with his distinct disapproval. He himself remains, to all outward appearances, calm cynical and the husband of Billie Burke. He is the proud father of a lovely daughter, and speaks in fatherly tones of his wayward show girls, their speedy husbands and gentleman friends.

His office, however, is all that a life devoted to glorifying girls might lead one to expect. Located on the ninth floor of the New Amsterdam theater, it modestly hides behind signs informing the world Mr. Ziegfeld sees you only by appointment, and behind more barriers of corridors, gates and offices. All is quite ordinary until one reaches the last and sacred "Private," outlined against a blue silk curtain. What greets you inside is not Mr. Ziegfeld, who remained seated, but gold walls, more blue curtains and gilt furniture in one of the Louis periods. There are couches and easy chairs upholstered in pale flowered brocade, and on the floor a thick carpet of corresponding shade. A grand piano in nothing less than teakwood or rosewood, with a picture of Billie Burke in riding togs on it, occupies one end of the room. Opposite is the flat topped desk of America's authority on feminine beauty. Giving it a boudoir effect is a gilt inlaid writing set, more photographs of Miss Burke and their daughter, Patricia, and two good-luck elephants. Behind it sat Mr. Ziegfeld smoking a cigar and wearing a gray suit with a bright blue shirt on the sleeve of which was his monogram.

A left-over Palm Beach tan helped by the Easthampton sun gave him a youthful, vigorous appearance, belying his fast graying hair and Methuselah manner. His hazel eyes gleamed and twinkled continually like a man who has seen so much of life there is nothing left for him to do but laugh at it. The smile gradually gets to his mouth, but reluctantly and only half heartedly.

"The girls haven't changed," he replied when requested to compare show girls of ten years ago with those of today. "It's the way they have been presented. The type we exploit each season depends entirely upon what we are trying to depict, whether it be cities, women of the past, or featuring dancing when smaller girls are used, being preferably, without previous experience. It lasts anywhere from five to six years and occasionally for ten. As the producer tersely remarked: "It all depends on how she behaves herself."

Mr. Ziegfeld would not tell on the wildest girl he had ever employed, but an amused expression crossed his face, leaving no doubt there had been one whose escapades were enough to impress even a veteran manager. Enraged Mr. Ziegfeld doubtless becomes, and bored and sarcastic, but not surprised. Their temperament and tricks are all an old story to him. In defending those whom he glorifies, he said:

"The large majority of show girls suffer for the sins of the few. Most members of the chorus are hard-working girls."

MR. ZIEGFELD gave as his reason for refusing to employ Imogene Wilson that the publicity she recently enjoyed was the wrong kind. Hearing him discuss Miss Wilson and Frank Tinney, any one would have thought they were both children and he their senior by fifty years.

"I said to Miss Wilson, 'If you're crazy about this fellow and can't let him out of your sight, why just tell me frankly and go to Europe, only keep it to yourself.' But, oh, no, she would—" the rest he thought better left unsaid.

Asked if he would re-engage Flo Leeds should she wish to return to the fold, he neglected mentioning whether the Stillman divorce case was the wrong or right kind of publicity, only saying:

"I don't think she will. Judging from the last time I saw her, I don't think she'd qualify."

At home at Burkely Crest, Hastings-on-the-Hudson, Flo Ziegfeld poses on the lawn with his wife, Billie Burke, their daughter, Patricia, and "Isabelle." The wire-haired fox terrier was named after Miss Burke's role in "The Intimate Strangers."

Yvonne Taylor's face is prettier than any other show girl's, according to the glorifier of American beauty.

Dorothy Knapp, whose figure, Mr. Ziegfeld says, "is the most beautiful I have ever seen."

Marriage enters into only one of the Ziegfeld contracts, and that is Mary Eaton's. In this star's career, her manager thinks he sees a particularly bright future and so insists she marry only some one of whom he approves. Mr. Ziegfeld took, with perfect good nature, the reminder that the late Charles Frohman felt much the same way about Billie Burke's career.

Like many careers, his as a producer started more by accident than anything. For seven or eight years he was manager of the Chicago Musical college. Becoming interested in the world's fair, he took over the management there of the Trocadero. His principal consisted of $8,000, which he spent on advertising. Searching New York for novelties, he discovered Sandow, the strong man, and took him to Chicago. From a losing venture, he turned the Trocadero into a success making $28,000 a week. At the close of the exposition he toured the country with Sandow. Later in London he discovered Anna Held at the Palace, and immediately switched from strong men to beautiful women, starring her in his first musical comedy, "The Parlor Match." It was in this that the first Mrs. Ziegfeld sang her famous "Come Play With Me" song, at which point "Ole Hoss" Hoey, whom Ziegfeld said he considered the greatest comedian who ever lived, pulled down a shade saying, "In a minute."

Certainly no one should know better than Ziegfeld who are the most beautiful show girls in America, and in naming them he backed up his own judgement.

"Yvonne Taylor of the 'Kid Boots' company is the prettiest show girl, and Dorothy Knapp in the Follies has the most beautiful figure I have ever seen," he declared.

The first named is a blonde, while Miss Knapp is dark, measuring about five feet, four inches in height and weighing around 125 pounds.

Then the glorifier of the American girl made this surprising statement:

"There are more good looking blondes. It's harder to find beautiful brunettes."

Clinging tenaciously to his opinion that women are no thinner, or no different in any respect than they always were, he continued:

"A lot of them try to affect the Irene Castle type, but they overlook the fact that she is beautifully proportioned, and not just thin. She is one in a thousand, and they fail dismally when trying to copy her. The girls in our show get enough dancing to keep them in condition, and with that much exercise dieting would be one of the worst things they could do. In weather like this they get more than they want. During the hot spell last week, for instance, we had an average of ten girls fainting at each performance."

The life of a Ziegfeld show girl generally begins at the age of seventeen, the more adept."

Not In The Testimony

by Richard Washburn Child.

The Man With a Cell-Bread Monomania for Revenge Comes Back to Demand a Reckoning.

Fellowes began a painstaking labor of turning the brass knob on the thick oak door.

ONE chief inspector of police. One district attorney and assistants. A dozen expert reporters of blotter news. Twelve good men and true, serving on a jury. A hardened judge. This is a partial list of those who had a hand in a successful prosecution and yet would never be able to say what happened.

Not one of them will know, until they read it, the explanation of the most mysterious behavior on the part of one person pronounced guilty, which ever came to their notice. Evidence is a curious thing. Testimony is not always complete. Justice runs in strange courses.

On August fifth of last year, the lights in the house of Mr. Christopher Mace, the banker, apparently were all extinguished except one, which burns low all night in the front hall. Behind the dark curtains of the cellar window the lights in the negro maids' rooms were still going full flare but were not to be observed from the street.

Mr. Christopher Mace, after sixty-five, had retired from active interest in the bank. He dropped out of the presidency and into the chairmanship of the board of directors; he maintained a visiting relationship with the offices, including visits to his safety deposit box. Nothing in his life promised that he would be murdered unless it were the fact that he, with years, had grown eccentric, and one of his eccentricities was to sleep in the same room he had shared with his wife ever since he had come east from Ohio, eighteen or twenty years ago, and bought this old fashioned brown stone front edifice in the park. It is necessary to add when speaking of his expectancy of being murdered, that after his wife's death he insisted on leaving every article she had ever owned in the place she had left it. This, without his knowledge, included a rope of pearls, valued in several tens of thousands, which for some reason she never put with her other jewelry in her lock box at the bank.

On August fifth, the prospect that Mr. Christopher Mace would be murdered was not within the scope of any reasonable person's thought. His house had a sleepy appearance, like that of smug, well guarded, old fashioned homes, where yawns begin at nine and eccentric old trusty persons are snoring at ten-thirty. It was exactly at ten-thirty that a well dressed man of cadaverous figure but graceful carriage walked up one of those long brown flights of steps which made the houses built in the seventies and eighties so inviting. He rang the bell as if he had legitimate business more in keeping, perhaps, with the hour of ten-thirty in the morning.

The visitor did not ask for Mr. Mace; the visitor told the negro maid, who finally appeared, tying on a white apron, that he wished to see a Mr. Thornton Fellowes.

Mr. Thornton Fellowes, as the maid knew, was that silent, patient man who for many years had acted for the old gentleman banker as housekeeper, accountant, assistant, secretary, and whose attentions were sometimes even in that class of services called, when given with less devotion and affection, valet attendance. Thornton Fellowes, who was not young himself and had a curious restrained almost saddened dignity, on certain occasions had been seen helping old Christopher Mace to maintain his lifelong reputation for foppishness. He had helped him to tie his white evening dress cravats.

THE maid, glancing up at the old hall clock which ticked austerely like an inexorable personality, said that Mr. Thornton Fellowes was out.

The other now showed the first sign of feeling that he was the master of the situation. He said, "He is not out. He is in. I have full information. I must see him."

"What name?" said the two white rows of frightened teeth.

"Say it's Mr. Reckoning."

If the maid considered this a strange name, she made no comment. She allowed the late visitor to put his hat on the table, and pulled back the portiere into the library so that the gentleman could enter its warm smelling interior, still redolent with the odors of living rooms just vacated by those who have gone to bed. When the light had been switched on, she left him blinking about curiously at his surroundings. She said afterward that he appeared to her a good deal like a corpse which had learned to walk and talk again. She said he had strong muscles in his jaws—always chewing imaginary articles.

When the maid descended from above she said, "Mr. Fellowes will be right down." She then opened a stair door which led to the kitchen and servants' basement, and descended heavily. The stranger who had slid silently to the top of these steps listened as if weighing the question of sound penetration in this house. He was satisfied. He nodded. He locked the door which closed off the cellar stairs, and returned to the library.

When Mr. Fellowes came through the portieres, the stranger stepped back so that the light from the ceiling fixture would fall upon his own face. He was fixing the gaze of his deep set, intense eyes upon the countenance of his host.

"Mr. Reckoning?" began Fellowes.

"You don't know me?" The other man had a voice strangely incongruous. Looking at the man one would say that he should have had a bass voice. It was almost feminine. It had a kind of piping quality but there was an ugly vigor in the piping; it bored like an auger; it was like a thin surgical probing instrument.

"I'm very sorry," said Fellowes in a stilted tone, "I cannot say that I do. I was about to retire, but if you will state your business—"

The visitor made no answer. He was leisurely. He was contemplating the man before him. He scrutinized the other man's face with its sad and patient mien as if to discover whether that patience was the result of some kind of triumph or some kind of failure. Fellowes had a smaller frame than the visitor, but it still retained a stocky, sturdy quality and the laugh lines at the corner of his eyes, well remembered, were still there.

The visitor evidently reached a conclusion because he said outright, "Happy—eh, Thorny?"

At this nickname Mr. Fellowes eyes suddenly started forward.

"Who are you?" he burst out.

"I'm just dear old Phil." He paused. "That's right, Thorny—turn white, damn you! It's been nearly twenty years. Turn yellow, blast you! I've lost my hair and I am thinner and look at my age compared with yours—an old, old man, eh? Old? I'm forty-eight, but you'd say I was sixty and the truth is that I'm eight hundred and four score. Shake and tremble! You're right! It's dear, old Phil Dilling—and here I am!"

The first words the other man could summon were words of self-defense. He said, "If you've come to wreck my job for me, you've come too late."

Dilling nodded. "Oh, I know. Trusted employee. Well established and all that. It was all hushed up for you, eh? Nobody knows but that cranky old fool of a master of yours? Took a shine to you? Let you out? You were honest? Were you? Better than the other two of us? Better than me? Better than Goodwin, who shot himself in Paris before they could get his extradition?"

FELLOWES stared at the other and then looked down at his hands held palm upward as if holding an imaginary saucer. "No," he said painfully. "I never pretended that. You used to say I had two personalities in me. Do you remember? One good and stupid—a wheel horse? And the other bad and clever—devilishly clever? Remember what you said? It was true then, it's true now." He spoke of it sadly, as one speaks of some chronic disease which has caused endless suffering and grown too old a subject to be interesting.

Then he looked up quickly. "What do you want, Phil? What are you doing here?"

"I came for you," said Dilling in his surgical voice. "That's the first thing I did when I got outside. A crazy thing to do! Certainly. I'm no fool. I'm not fool enough not to know how the hours make a man crazy. I'm crazy, Thorny, old man. You don't know about the hours—the hours—the hours! You've never been there. You were clever—smart. You squirmed out. You don't know what it is to work on account books all day long until the figures dance like little devils. And in the night when there is insomnia—ha! ha! Sitting on the side of the little cot! Thinking and thinking. Little ideas grow and grow on the flat side of the dark and then you fall in love with one of them as you would with a woman. The idea becomes your dear, dear wife. You live with her—day and night!"

Fellowes smiled painfully. "Well?" he asked. "What was it, Phil?"

"To get square with you, Thorny."

Not In the Testimony

A Blue Ribbon Short Story

He put a revolver down on the table in front of him.

"To kill me?" the other said almost cheerfully.

Dilling shook his head. "Oh, no! That would be silly—unless I had to. It would send me back—there." He shuddered as if suddenly exposed. naked to a cold, damp blast of imagery. "No, what I had in my mind was that if either of us went up there, why it would be you." He smiled an ugly smile. "Or else we might go together."

The first exposed troubled look came into Fellowes' eyes. He smoothed his rather thin hair down the gray patches over the temples.

"Oh, I know," said the ex-convict, seeing this fleeting ghost of fear. "I know all about you, Thorny. I had word brought to me while I was still inside. I had a report made on you. I know how you restored the stolen money and got your job. That was a good many years ago. Then you married. I hear you've got a daughter, seventeen already. Nice wife, eh? And all the time I was up there? Well?"

"Well, what?" asked the other patient man. "There's nothing you've got against me."

"Haven't I? When we got away that night with the money from the bank, you were the one who had it. What d'd you do? You gave it back, eh?"

Thornton Fellowes' thin lips curled a little as he said, "Are you charging me with dishonesty?"

"I'm charging you with double crossing!" the convict exploded.

"Are you?" replied Fellowes "What about your promise not to shoot whatever happened. You double-crossed Goodwin and me. We never bargained with you for manslaughter."

"Pah!" Phil said. "Neither of you two had any experience. I did what I had to do."

"And there's where I parted company with you, Phil. I was too clever for that. I was the one who had the idea. It was mine. It should have been carried out as you agreed. In any case what's the use of arguing. We would be at it all night. I see it my way and you see it yours. I'm not afraid of you."

Dilling laughed. "No man who isn't afraid ever has to say so." He sneered. "You asked me if I was going to kill you. And I said no. Not if you do what I tell you. I've taken all the pain; I want my reward. I want my share of what was coming to me. I'm going to get it. You're going to get it for me!"

WETTING his lips, Fellowes stared at Dilling almost stupidly. He might have been a man tempted to voice his curiosity as to the definite intentions of this ex-convict, with a cell-bred monomania for revenge, but he restrained himself from asking any questions. At last he reached across the library table, pushing a box of cigarettes toward the other.

"Smoke?" he said.

"Are you going to talk?" asked Dilling.

"For a minute," the other said with a nod. "Not to gain time. There are the matches." He laughed. "I see you inhale as deeply as you used to, Phil."

"I'll tell you what I was going to say," he went on rather in the manner of a bank officer talking to an applicant for a loan. "I'm going to talk straight to you. If I hadn't lived the life I've lived all these years, I would want to meet your challenge. Now I don't. I am afraid of you, Phil. You've sat too long on the edge of the cot in the night time thinking about me. I'm no fool. You'd kill me. I know it. And I don't want to die. I've built a whole structure of life. I have those I love. I have made a home for them, and whenever I'm not needed here because of some special work, I go to that home and there's no joy—no fierce joy of love and passion, no love of gain or fame, which can hold a candle to the joy of being needed by those I love. Nobody'll ever hear of me, but I've attained that—I live in that joy."

The snarl from the other man may have been loosed for dramatic effect; it may have been sincere hate.

"Begging off, eh?" he pleaded.

"No!" Thornton Fellowes replied, suddenly sitting upright in the big leather chair. "You've got me wrong. I'm not begging off; I'm threatening you."

"Threatening me?" inquired Dilling, touching the revolver. "What chance. I've got another one, too—here in my side pocket."

Fellowes was impressed by this news; he appeared to be weighing the reasons which might have led a man like Dilling to bring two revolvers. His heavy brows drew down and then suddenly a bland, stupid look came into his face.

"I shouldn't have said I was threatening you," he went on. "I wanted to picture my life. I wanted to tell you about my daughter—a beautiful young thing—and my little son. Of course, I want you to let up on me. I don't want to die and I don't want to go through any devilish business you might want to force on me."

"Devilish business?" mocked Dilling. "You've become quite a snob about the devil since last we met!"

"Maybe," admitted the other. "I thought so. I'm just baring my inner self to you, Phil. I thought after a good many years of going straight that going straight was a dull business but it had more than adequate rewards. You know my temperament. I've craved excitement since I was seven. More and more of it! Well, it's laughable that a man like that should be a regular old wheel horse like me."

"With a pirate and a brigand and a confidence artist locked up inside him?" Phil said. "Oh, I know you."

"But I don't know myself," protested Fellowes. "Let me tell you. About four years ago Mrs. Mace died. When she died she had a rope of pearls—a good one—thirty or forty thousand dollars. It was missing from her safety deposit box. She died one night in her carriage coming back from the opera. They thought—no one could remember—but they thought she had worn the pearls. But she hadn't. I found 'em. I haven't touched 'em yet. But, by heavens, Phil, after all these years—"

"You've been tempted!" Dilling was wriggling with delight.

THERE was no delight in the other man; he was gray, as if the ghost of fear he had of himself had come again to rub its cheek with his.

"Don't be so bloody serious," Dilling said. "We can use that rope of pearls. It will come in handy. It may save your life. I know how she kept her valuables around and I know how her husband leaves everything just as she left it. Oh, I know all that. Right in the room where he sleeps. It was all reported to me, old man."

Fellowes did not appear to be listening. He was pulling his own long fingers. He uttered exclamations under his breath.

Finally he said: "Do you know that any day for these last four years I would almost have given my right hand to have had Mr. Mace find those pearls. Good God, Phil, they haunted me like a fiend! I could tell you about them, of course, but the voice said, 'No, perhaps—' and I thought of the money involved. I could send Grace to college. And nobody had ever been very liberal with me! But if the pearls had disappeared, without any act on my part and gone out of my life forever, I would have felt like a man cured of leprosy! Don't you doubt it! Like a man cured of leprosy!"

His face was all twisting and writhing in agony.

Dilling saw the perspiration on the other man's brow, and said brutally, "I guess I'll decide this question for you, Thorny. My conscience is in better tune than yours—if you know what I mean."

"You want me to get those pearls?" Fellowes asked in sudden horror.

"Get 'em and other things," Dilling asserted evilly.

"Do you know where they are?"

"You have said."

"They are in Mr. Mace's bedroom," Fellowes said, his voice dropping to a whisper. "They can't be reached—tonight!"

"Oh, yes, they can!" growled Dilling. "You love your life too much not to go."

He picked up the revolver. "I'd kill you like a dog if you turned me down. Why wouldn't I? I've lived my life, haven't I? I'm a wreck. I came to make you reform, dear old Thorny, and I came to get you into trouble, and if you don't do as I say I'll wipe—you—out!"

Fellowes stared again stupidly at the contorted face of the other man. He did not glance about him like the proverbial rat caught in a trap. Instead he allowed the corners of his mouth and eyes, where the wrinkles of age were beginning to accumulate, to curve into a kind of silly grin.

While he spoke this same silly grin remained on his face and in his voice there was a peculiar note suggestive of one who apologizes in a good natured way for his existence.

"Now listen, Phil," he said. "I want you to be reasonable about this. You remember how you used to say I was like one man with two personalities. You said one of them was stupid and rather good, eh? And the other was bad and devilishly clever. Now, don't awake my bad side, Phil! I prefer to say goodby again to you after all these years. I could let you have a little money, too. I'd like to help you. But I beg you to go away and leave me just as I am—an old wheel horse. I'd even agree to fight out my temptation about the rope of pearls, all by myself. You better go, Phil. Just don't awaken my bad and clever side."

Dilling snorted. "You talk like a sore foot."

"No, no, no!" the soft voice went on. "Don't say that. Suppose you awakened my clever side, Phil?" He was grinning in this silly way. "No, don't do it, Phil. It would be the worse for you. Don't make me clever again. It might go all wrong for you. I think it would. I tell you, Phil, leave me to my wife and daughter and my boy. Just let it go at that. Don't make me clever again. If you do, Phil, you'll be sorry!"

"I'll be sorry?"

"YES, you'll be sorry. I don't know just how, but somehow I'll get the better of you, Phil. I'm too clever for you. I warn you."

Some flick of memory and perhaps the softness of the voice and this benevolent grinning face brought, for a passing second, a look of fright into Dilling's sunken, evil eyes.

"Bunk!" he said finally, exhaling a long breath. "Cheap bluff and bunk, Thorny. You're clever. But I've got the two guns!"

The other man's body suddenly lost its stiffening, as if indeed his last appeal to Dilling having failed, all courage and nerve had leaked out on to the floor.

"Good God! Dilling! What do you want me to do? Do you want me to go into my chief's room? Well, it will just mean that if—"

"Yes," finished the other, "that if he wakes up you'll make some excuse and come out. That would be a poor one act play, sure! He'd recognize you and, of course, you'd make some excuse and come out and the performance would be over. No, I don't see it that way."

Dilling took a piece of paper out of his inside coat pocket. "Let's see," he muttered. "Yes, this is the whole plan. You see, Thorny, I had the whole business before I came east. I didn't have to make any incriminating inquiries around here. I just landed this afternoon, and came right up. Plans of the house—and everything! The man who brought the report to me last year d'd a good job. Yes. Right over this room is Mace's study. That's where we go next. And just back of it is the bedroom where the old crank sleeps."

He was glancing down at the paper when he saw Fellowes' trembling fingers come creeping across the table toward the revolver. He snatched it up and swung its muzzle pointing between the other man's staring frightened eyes.

"Don't! For God's sake!"

Fellowes was almost saffron color. He shook and had to hold on to the desk. "D-d-don't!" he gibbered. "I know you. You're mad. You'd kill. You're — not — like—me. You—haven't—anything—to—lose!" Fellowes was panting as a man with some terrible disease of the heart.

"Behave yourself—you cringer!" growled Dilling. "I'm going to give you a sporting chance. I never thought when I used to think of you during those hours that I ever would, but I'm going to. I'm going to make it a game—a sporting chance."

"What you going to do?" If the other had been dissembling courage and threats, the picture was all gone now. His voice shook; his posture was that of a begging mouse.

"Tell you presently," Dilling said. "We're going upstairs. Walk! Walk ahead of me. Feel that in your back? It's cold muzzle—metal, Thorny, curse you for a yellow quitter! Clever, are you? Well, walk! Tread easy. One sound and I'll blow you open in the middle."

"I thought it was c-coming to this," whined Fellowes. "Heaven help me! I know why you brought the two guns."

"Walk!" repeated Dilling grimly. "Up you go. Into the study—into the front room. Quiet, now!"

Fellowes had left the light burning in Mr. Mace's study. Papers were spread out over the desk as if Fellows had been at work there after the eccentric banker had retired for the night in the bedroom beyond that closed door.

"I hear the old boy always sleeps with a gun under his pillow," whispered Dilling with a grin.

"A dead shot!" said the victim in a trembling voice. "O, Phil, listen now! I'm smarter than you are. This may mean the finish of us—both of us."

THE ex-convict made no other reply than a self-satisfied smile; he was taking account now of his surroundings. With an inborn instinct for the dramatic he had put his cadaverous, sloping shoulder, angular body into a half croaching posture, like some sneaking animal of prey.

Finally he said with a note of triumph, "I paid through those years, Thorny. I guess you'll pay now."

"What are you going to do?"

"I'm going to send you in there. Go ahead into the bedroom and bring me out something that will keep the wolf from the door."

Fellowes' lower jaw fell; it was as if he had been shot already. He clapped his hands to his eyes, and in a low tone, unpleasant to hear, begged for mercy.

"No! No! No!"

"Listen," said Dilling. "I'm not here to argue. "I've thought the whole thing out. Nice, respectable, honest Thornton Fellowes? Better than I am? Going straight? Well,

Prince of Wales Is Courageous Horseman

Dolly Sisters Consider Him Better Dancer Than the Spanish King and the "Most Fascinating Kid" They Ever Met

By Flora Merrill

IF THE Prince of Wales ever kissed the Dolly sisters, they're not telling on him. Neither are they telling tales about the Spanish king, and the worst they'll say about Georges Carpentier is he drinks milk. Doubtless it is this ability to keep a secret which has made them the favorites of royalty and notables all over Europe. That and their effervescent spirits, youth and good sportsmanship.

During a rehearsal of the new "Greenwich Village Follies," in which they will shortly appear, Rosie sat beside us and Jennie in the orchestra row ahead, both bubbling over with enthusiasm about life in general and the prince in particular. The Dollys aren't very grown-up nor a bit spoiled. They sincerely think the Prince of Wales the most wonderful person ever, and would rather sing his praises than talk of their own triumphs. To describe one is to describe both, as they are identically alike even to the tones in their voices. Dark, slight and not very tall, they remind one of kittens, so lively are they. With a touch of a foreign accent, the words tumble out of their mouths as they good naturedly interrupt each other.

In their earnestness to make you understand, their small hands fly up and down in French fashion. They giggle like school kids, their heads thrown back and their mouths wide open, not unlike small birds in a nest revealing two sets of perfect teeth. Their eyes are black brown, and in Rosie's there lurked a tantalizing come-hither expression, which her twin, older by fifteen minutes, seemed able to hide. The only marked difference between them is the feeling that Rosie is the more feminine and helpless. Jennie speaks of her as "little sister," and manages the family affairs. In Jennie's walk and figure, too, there is a care-free stride and boyish slimness.

It was Rosie whom we first met and from whose lips we learned what one misses in not knowing Edward Albert Christian. Wearing a black and white plaid sport coat, black satin skirt and tight-fitting straw cloche, she went into the following raptures, sincerely and with no conceit in the thought that she was a friend of the Prince of Wales:

Spanish king great speeder, says Jennie.

"He's a very wonderful dancer, and wonderfully popular. He is the most idolized man in the world. Where is there such a good fellow and good sportsman in all the world. He throws Paris into a riot. He dances like an American, and does all the dances well, but loves the jazz best. He plays the drum exquisitely. Oh, he's terribly smart. He's the cutest trick!"

As a reason for his great popularity, she gave: "Because he never allows you to address him as 'Your highness' or to bow. He has that unspoiled look, that boyish charm."

Rosie says the prince is about half a head taller than she, and champions even his riding.

"I think he is a very good rider," she said. "He falls because he takes such chances. He takes a risk that eight other men would refuse, and that he of all people should be the last to do. He will mount any horse whether he's ridden it before or not. He doesn't take his horses with him, you know. He's the greatest sportsman that ever lived. He does every sport, and all well. It's ridiculous the stories that are published about him."

Here Jennie, in a simple one-piece figured dress, arrived, eagerly joining in the conversation when she learned the subject was England's heir to the throne.

"Yes," she agreed, "his attraction is that he's a great sport and doesn't make you bow down. He won't come around unless you drop the ceremonies. He reminds me of a jolly college boy. For instance, if the Prince of Wales was presented to you as Mr. Black or Mr. White, you would think he was just as charming. He is a better dancer than the Spanish king, because he knows more steps. We taught him a lot, and at one party there were eight or ten people in back of us in a line, and looked just like a dancing school."

When asked what a royal dancing partner talks about, she said:

"He talks about any thing and

"He's the cutest trick," is what Rosie says of the Prince of Wales.

makes you forget you are with the Prince of Wales. It is almost impossible to believe you are with him, after you have met him for the first fifteen minutes. It is difficult to realize he's the idol of the world, he is so unassuming. You want to say, 'Listen, Edward.'"

BOTH the twins giggled when requested to tell America what the Prince of Wales calls them. Whatever pet names he has for them, they're keeping them dark. All Jennie would say was, "Over there, they all call us just Dolly, as no one can tell us apart."

"You know," she continued, "people say, 'I can't understand the popularity of the Dolly sisters. They are not beautiful; they are not good-looking.' It is because we try to be good sports and nice to everybody. One night we can dinner with the King of Spain, and the next with home folks and have a good time at both. Very few people know the real meaning of democracy in this world. They just pretend to be good fellows and that's different."

Concerning the much speculated-upon bride whom the Prince of Wales must eventually choose, Rosie merely observed:

"He has been reported engaged so often, I don't know, but I suppose it will be an English girl. I don't think he wants to marry at all."

On Jennie's left hand there sparkled the biggest diamond solitaire imaginable, but the only confession which could be wrung from her was, "No, we are not engaged because when people do ask us if we will marry them, we never say, 'Yes;' we never say, 'No,' but always 'Maybe.'"

Should a Rich Wife Pay Her

Interesting and Puzzling Question Raised By Peggy Joyce's Brief Matrimonial Adventure With the None Too Prosperous Swedish Count

By Prof. Ernest R. Groves,
Of Boston University.

SHOULD a rich wife pay her poor husband's bills? This question has come to the front on account of the recent matrimonial difficulties of Countess Gosta Morner, better known as Peggy Joyce. Peggy tells us that her fifth attempt at marriage happiness has failed because she has found herself obliged to pay her husband's bills.

If a woman of wealth marries a man who has no money, and doubtless this will soon be as common as it has been for wealthy men to marry women of no money, one wonders how the bills of the poor husband ever will be paid unless by the rich wife. If the creditors did not suppose that a rich wife was willing to stand back of her husband's bills there would be no bills and this would simply mean that poor hubby could not keep up appearances, for it takes money to live the life of a husband to a wealthy wife.

In such matters, however, there is always a deeper element than mere expediency. Why is it not just that the member of the family who has the money should share liberally with him who has not? It is the spirit of love to be lavish, and one always gives what one has. When the man is wealthy it is expected that he deal generously with his wife.

The trouble is, we are likely to forget that these are the days of equality between men and women. We cannot have things different and still the same. If women are to have the privileges of men, sooner or later we all shall discover that they also have fallen heir to the obligations.

Moreover, the wife paying the husband's bills is not such a new thing as it seems. Once the husband had all the wealth of his wife, whether she was rich or earned money by taking boarders, for the law gave it to him, and if she was not willing to lose all control of her money she was not expected to marry. These days were not so long ago as we are inclined to think.

But Peggy tells us that it kills love to have to support the husband. "You can't feel that it's very wonderful to have a man kiss you and take you in his arms when you've just paid his laundry bill," she complains.

We don't doubt her word, but it is possible that she did not adjust herself to the new set of circumstances. In her previous matrimonial ventures she seems to have been supported rather splendidly, and perhaps she was an unfit subject to assume the new and more trying role of being the supporter. Habits are pretty hard to get away from, and it is probable that a woman who has had two or three husbands who were able to express their affection in terms of jewels and other things that money can buy will find herself missing the accustomed tribute when she takes unto herself a poor husband.

We have heard a good deal of late about the advantage of giving wives allowances or checkbooks of their own with a definite sum of money in the bank every month credited to them. This discussion has resulted from the fact that husbands who earn money for the families find, as Peggy says she did, that continual requests for comparatively small amounts of money to pay the butcher, the baker or the laundryman take the spontaneity out of romance.

To be asked for money to buy new clothes is an experience that few enjoy. It may beget an uncomfortable suspicion that demonstrations of affection are prompted by gratitude for money received, or are a shrewd preliminary to a plea for more money.

The woman who pays her husband's bills may find, as so many men who support their wives have found, that a family budget giving each member of the marriage partnership a fixed proportion of the monthly income will allow the question of money to drop into the background. Signing a check once a month for a stated sum easily becomes a matter of routine, once the monied partner has decided to be the family provider. The emotions are not stirred up as they are when petitions for money occur unexpectedly, sandwiched in between protestations of love.

DELIVERING over to one's mate a large amount of money in a lump sum is a grand gesture that tickles the vanity of the giver in contrast to the annoyance occasioned by being asked for many smaller amounts of money to pay separate bills of a more or less prosaic nature.

Perhaps if this had been frankly considered and some family budget determined upon the married life of Peggy and the Count might have gone on more smoothly. Peggy has the checks and she knows now what was paid for.

"I have all my checks to show that I have been paying the bills," she says. "He has never spent a nickel since the day I married him, and even before we left the Ritz-Carlton at Atlantic City right after our marriage I had to cash a check to pay the bills. Since that time bills have been coming in from all directions, bills that were contracted by him even last year."

Her experience ought to suggest to others who may make a similar venture in matrimony the advantage of having the husband's allowance fixed before the day of the wedding.

Of course, the conventional way of looking at marriage excludes any frank financial support of the husband by the wife. This point of view was forcefully given by Peggy's own father when he said, "The Count must have been a no'count fellow to have a woman pay his bills. Down here we would put him behind a plow and let him work for bread and meat."

In the most conservative neighborhoods, where this sentiment is strongly expressed, it usually does not take much searching to find a man who is living on his wife's income or even his wife's labor. But in these places the arrangement is a very delicate matter and it is carried out in such a way that the husband's right hand, spending the cash, never seems to know where the left hand gets it. Thus self-respect flourishes. The modern way of an open understanding will appeal more to the oncoming generation.

The unconventional youngsters of today are more likely to get a "kick" out of the novelty of reversing the old custom of allowing the man to be the financial head of the house than they are to make any attempt to keep up the fiction of the man's economic independence when his wife is really supporting him.

Peggy tells us that she did not object to her husband being poor. "I married him because I thought he was a fine, sweet, manly boy, not the pig-headed Swede he has turned out to be. I knew he didn't have much money, but that didn't make any difference to me. If a man will work and command my respect I don't care if he is poor. I wouldn't have cared if my husband drove a wagon, but to have him refuse to work as he did a week after we were married was more than I could bear."

Reading between the lines we get the impression that since her last husband had been so wealthy the contrast added zest to her new experiment in marriage. But things did not turn out as she seems to have expected. She says that she was willing to support him for a little time if only then he would go to work. Husbands that marry women of wealth find going to work dificult, perhaps because one of their anticipations has been that work would be unnecessary.

Count Gosta Morner and his bride, Peggy Joyce, in the days when she thought him a "fine, sweet, manly boy," and never dreamed of calling him a "pig-headed Swede."

FROM the Count's point of view Peggy entered the new situation with her eyes open. He says he told her his economic resources. "I told her before we were married what my income was," he says, "and she knew perfectly well that while I could keep her in comfort I could not keep up expensive motor cars, a chauffer and an apartment such as she wanted. I could not give her the luxuries she demanded and she knew it. I even showed her my financial statement."

She should have at least appreciated that this is rare even among modern husbands. Men are growing franker all the time, but not many have reached the point where they are willing to present financial statements before the wedding day. If such matters must be talked about they prefer a liberal use of imagination than cold, tight facts.

A husband who cannot afford to live in the luxurious manner his rich wife enjoys has a way out of his predicament without accepting money from his wife, if they are both willing to be numbered among the daring few in America and England who carry on a happy married life under separate roofs. Then the wife could have the expensive apartment with its costly accessories of servants and automobiles, appropriate clothes and numerous incidentals that are beyond the reach of the husband's pocketbook, while he could live in a more modest way in a different part of the city or in an outlying town.

THE advocates of this kind of married life assert that by not seeing each other every day in all sorts of moods they keep the spirit of courtship and the honeymoon indefinitely. However that may be, this arrangement of a double household for a single family would make it possible for husband and wife each to pay their own bills, however great the difference in their incomes. The husband could live within his meager income, while the wife need have no scruples about living up to the possibilities of hers.

But this proposition of a house divided within itself does not seem likely ever to appeal to many married couples. Its aloofness is foreign to the emotional nature of marriage. Some other solution of their difficulty must be found by the ordinary poor-husband, rich-wife couple.

"You can't feel that its very wonderful to have a man kiss you and take you in his arms when you've just paid his laundry bills," says Peggy Joyce.

The High Cost Of Being Funny

Broken Noses and Other Ho The Playful Comedians Hav They Try to Take Their Quip From the Footlights Into Real Life

Rosetta Duncan in a Chicago hospital, recovering from the painful results of the jokes which probably would have gone over big in any theater, but which did not strike the police force of Cicero, Ill., as at all funny

AVERY HOPWOOD is a very talented and well-known playwright, who has written some comedies which have set audiences all over the country into gales of laughter.

In the theater Mr. Hopwood's humor is so very much appreciated that he has grown rich on his royalties.

Therefore, probably Mr. Hopwood has come to believe that he really is almost as funny as his loyal admirers say he is. And this probably has rather encouraged him to carry his footlight manner into real life.

At any rate, such was his tendency until a few weeks ago. Since then he has wondered. He has debated whether it really pays to be as funny as you can be off the stage, where the setting is rather prosaic and the audience one that has not paid high for admission. Mr. Hopwood began to consider this recently as the result of a little trouble he dropped into at Asbury Park, New Jersey.

The time was the night of the brilliant first performance of the latest Hopwood play. The theater had been crowded with the belles and beaux of the smart seaside community, who cheered the very bright young man who had devised the comedy's unusual situations. It was quite natural that after the theater Mr. Hopwood, with Charles Adams, one of the leading actors, and other friends should drop into the only all-night restaurant in Asbury Park.

Mr. Hopwood and his friends settled down to partake of whatever cheer the house provided in the best of good spirits. They were intoxicated with the success of the evening.

All was very merry, with the Hopwood wit effervescing, when a cop entered and heavily let himself down upon a stool at the lunch counter at the restaurant's front.

Now, on the stage, the policeman is eternally funny. Grotesque things are always happening to him. He displays his badge, which is always big as a pie plate. He talks very loud—on the stage—but when the bad man of the play breaks loose, the stage policeman runs to cover under the bureau or into a closet. Yes, the policeman is funny on the stage.

It was therefore only natural for Mr. Hopwood and his friends to break into smiles as Patrolman Fred Aguero ordered beans and apple pie at the counter and leaned over his plate, eating them earnestly. For Hopwood the comedy had begun. He said a few things—rather audibly. And as the concentration of the constable waxed over the last of the pie Hopwood sat back in his chair and laughed out loud.

Officer Aguero laid down his knife with its pie on the end of it, and looked at those dudes over at a table in the corner, and he hotly felt that they were laughing at him. He got out his night-stick, straightened his badge and, walking over to them, asked what the fun was about.

Mr. Hopwood refused to tell. He said a joke always fell flat if it had to be explained. But again he laughed out loud. "Ha—ha—ha!" he emitted cheerily, while Charles Adams joined him; "ha, ha, ha!"

That was enough for Aguero. He went to the street and summoned his buddy, Officer Ker. The two re-entered and made their demands:

"Again we ask you, what is this here joke? Come on—out with it! If it's perfectly proper, we want to laugh, too. If it isn't—you've no business to be laughing at all."

"Will you look at the cops?" was all Mr. Hopwood said.

At that the officers laid hold of the merry playwright and his companion and dragged them off to the police station.

IN COURT next morning the local police told how the distinguished theatrical gentlemen had laughed at them and the judge upheld the seriousness of the law. Messrs. Hopwood and Adams were fined $10 on three separate counts—both for disorderly conduct and being under the influence of liquor; Hopwood for resisting arrest and Adams for interfering with an officer. There had been staged at last a drama in which a policeman wasn't funny in the least.

Now, had Mr. Hopwood recalled a recent tragedy in Chicago, he might have learned that policemen off the stage are far more serious than on by the experience of the little Duncan sisters out in Cicero, a suburb of the western city.

As you may already have heard, the two pretty principals of "Topsy and Eva," with their brother, Harold, and other friends, were motoring back from the races, when Harold, who was driving, ran past a rather obscure traffic signal at which he should have stopped. Sergeant Charles Steinke followed and conducted them to the police station. There he laid rather rough hands on Harold as he led him and Sister Vivian into the station to be booked for a traffic violation.

Little Rosetta Duncan, in the meantime, sat in the car, rather disgusted with the whole process. She recalled how Sister Vivian and she had given an enormous benefit for the police of Chicago. Then she just had to think again of the pompous picture Sergeant Steinke had made when he puffed up the steps of the police station, his nightstick dangling jauntily in time with his panting, his badge rising and falling on his rather capacious chest. She thought of him; her glance next rested on Officers Delaney and Whitlock, who were resting informally in front of the station.

Their chairs were tilted back, as orators of the village store tilt their chairs against the air-tight stove in summer time. Their dignity was from them—the honest calico of their skirts was unrelieved by badge or brass buttons or gold braid. The heroes were sunning themselves in a moment of let-down.

Rosetta laughed. And Officers Delaney and Whitlock looked up. They beheld this snip of a girl laughing—actually daring to be mirthful over them—the dignity and the right arm of the law. They spoke, with bass dignity.

"What're yez laughin' at?" they asked solemnly.

"Nothing much," snapped back Rosetta Duncan.

The two guardians of justice regarded the saucy young woman soberly.

"A little more," they announced somberly, "and we'll run yez in, too!"

"You can't," defied Miss Duncan, "what have we done? Besides, don't you know who we are? We're the Duncan Sisters and we gave a benefit for you policemen. You seemed glad of our money then. But what do you do to show your gratitude? You arrest my brother for a trifling offense. I'm off cops for life."

At that the majesty of the law — Patrolman Whitlock—came forward in all his six-foot 200-pound ominousness. He coughed. He looked dark—forbidding.

On previous occasions when he had looked thus hardened criminals had paled; bootleggers had wearied of their bootlegging, ladies of joy had become sick of their joyousness. But he made no impression at all on the small, saucy-eyed young woman in the automobile. She merely dabbed her nose with a trifle of powder.

INTO the automobile went one great hand, and out came the little Duncan girl, scrambling, protesting, putting up as much fight as she possibly could against these odds. Officer Delaney, 6 feet 4 and 207 pounds, ran to help out his colleague in distress. Brother Harold and Sister Vivian also ran from the station house. Blows rained promiscuously, and when at last peace descended little Rosetta found herself in a cell with a broken nose and a fractured lip.

The sequel was not a joke, not when the plastic surgeon was called in to mend Rosetta's nose and the theater was closed—all because a policeman just wouldn't allow himself to be considered funny in real life. And, although Rosetta Duncan is a real comedienne on the stage, she has come to see most clearly that there are times when it doesn't pay to see the joke too plainly—off the stage. She has filed suit for $100,000 damages against the town of Cicero. The policemen of Cicero have filed suits amounting to $60,000 against the diminutive dancer.

Frank Tinney loved Imogene Wilson, and, also, he really loved his wife. On the stage it is quite smart and dashing to love two women at once. Besides, there are always so many good jokes possible for such a situation. "Cave-man stuff" is great stuff with the audiences.

But somehow Frank Tinney has never been quite so successful with these jokes off stage as on. He beat up poor Imogene, and before she finally decided that she loved him, no matter what he did she had him arrested and so worried him that he finally ran away to London.

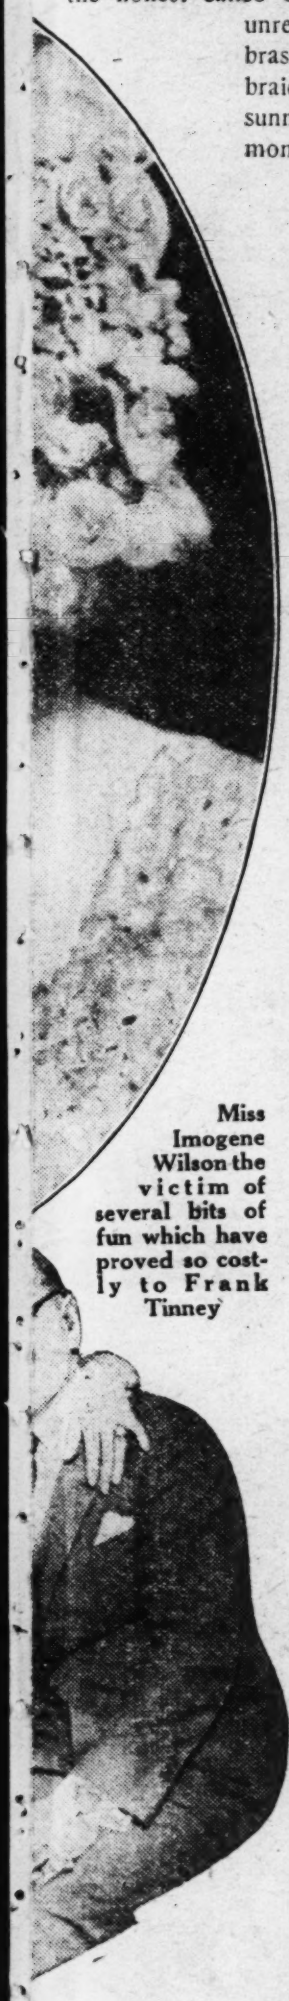

Imogene once asked Tinney for a limousine and he took her to pick one out. He bought the one she selected and—gave it to his wife. Neither lady appreciated the joke. Another time when Imogene asked him to send a cab to take her home he sent a police ambulance.

Now that long suffering Mrs. Frank Tinney is suing for separation and the agent is suing for commission for his services and the photographer is suing for the broken camera which took a picture of the reconciled Imogene and Frank—life is full of trouble for the genial gentleman who carried his jokes into real life.

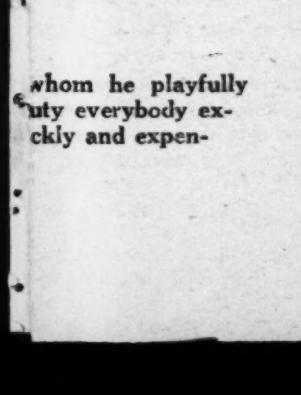

Probably he feels like sympathizing with Edward Gallagher, another born comedian who has also suffered. On the stage Mr. Gallagher made delicious quips at marriage and the whims of woman. And the ladies seemed to enjoy them.

But off stage the first Mrs. Gallagher finally decided she could do without the Gallagher jokes for life. She gave them up in exchange for alimony. The second Mrs. Gallagher, two months after her marriage, signed an agreement by which she consented to part with her husband's jokes in re-

"YOU will help me, won't you, juffrouw?"

Dashing away the rising tears, she cried in a hoarse, muffled voice:

"Go to Bulungan at once. Do not waste a moment."

She whirled to face the Dyak chief. "Naioh," she said, "take your guests in your swiftest tambangan to the mouth of the little creek that empties a half-hour's journey north of Bulungan's plaats. At the third hour past sunset I will meet you at the foot of the great banyan tree that shades the kiosk of the Datoo Maholo's ganeca-idol."

A flash of color in the cane and she was gone.

CHAPTER 6.

Pasar day at Bulungan. Riot of riches and color, of pomp and nakedness, of squalor and barbaric profusion, of ribaldry and lamentatation, of smells and sweetness, of bargaining everywhere. A din unending, insidious, omnipresent. Pennants flying and sweating hordes in the narrow streets; the weak trampled underfoot and the strong fighting their way through the throng with fist and tooth and claw. He the best merchant who can create the loudest alarm.

Men in their gay panoply, fighting, dicing, gaming, and participating in the sports; women bent double under great loads of copra and rattan, bags of rice and coffee, pots of djeloetong, and all the myriad products of an intensely fertile alluvial plain blessed by tropic sun and rain. And this day, everywhere in the crowd, agents of discord preaching violence against the white man.

It was the custom for the administration to police the city during pasar day, but Capt. Carver, following Koyala's warning, decided to keep his little force intact and await eventualities at the fort. Thus, though the Raja Wobanguli sent two deputations with politely worded invitations to the captain to come to pasar, he was each time met with an equally polite declination.

The market customarily continued until sunset with a short intermission during the heat of the day when everyone sought refuge under shelter and slept as he was best able. When toward noon however, it became noticeable that the trading was slackening, the merchants began making hurried preparations for departure. The Chinese, ever alert to note signs of unrest, were the first to pack their wares and hie to their junks.

Closeted in his long hut with the leading chieftains of his realm, Dyak and Malay, the Raja Wobanguli did not hear of the general exodus until it was well advanced. Tribesmen who had come to the market to convert their year's labor into colored cotton, salt and gewgaws, broke the news to him by descending en masse upon the long house.

Frightened by the clamor at his gates, the raja sent messengers in post haste to the skippers of such ships as remained in the harbor begging them to return ashore with their goods. But the traders were wary. A cloud as small as a hand was sufficient warning to them. They knew the fickleness of the Dyak. So with but few exceptions they set their sails and fled the harbor.

While the palace guards were subduing the rioters, the rajah closeted himself in his palace, the prey of the gloomiest reflections. His carefully laid plans had gone wholly awry. To seize all the ships in the harbor and their treasures, to capture Fort Wilhelmina while the soldiery was in the city, and to enroll the vast hordes of Dyaks and Malays that came to the city for the market into an army to defy the Dutch, was the coup he had planned with Ah Sing. He had expected to strike immediately after the rice table hour, when the city was at rest and merchants and traders would be enjoying a siesta.

But fate had been against him. The traders had taken alarm. Capt. Carver had remained in the fort, whose grim guns were turned on the town. The raja had a wholesome respect for artillery—once before, in the old days, he had made an undignified scamper into the jungle to the accompaniment of whistling shells and shrapnel.

"What would Ah Sing say?" was the question he asked himself. He feared the Chinaman as he feared torture. He knew Ah Sing's ruthlessness, his savage wrath at those who miscarried his plans, and his cruel punishment.

SHOULD he act now, the raja asked himself. There was still time to seize what ships were left in the harbor and throw a cordon around the fort. That would be sufficient to convince Ah Sing of his absolute loyalty. The departure of the merchants could be explained satisfactorily, but not failure to strike.

On the other hand, the Zuyder Zee might have resisted attack. Peter Gross might have escaped the snare set for him. Great as was Wobanguli's fear of the Chinaman, he had greater fear for the Orang Blanda Kapala who dwelt on the hill above Bulungan. For Peter Gross, he knew, read the native heart as the Dyak reads a jungle trail, and his justice was impervious to cajolery or bribe.

Torn between these conflicting opinions, dreaming consequences whatever he might do, the cowardly raja paced the floor of his long house until the proa arrived with word from Ah Sing that the ship had been taken, but that Peter Gross was not found aboard.

CHAPTER 7.

Peter Gross and Naioh paddled the chieftain's little boat through some rough water to land, with Grace Coston, at the point where Koyala had said she would meet them. She was ready for them with an ox cart, into which they climbed, and Koyala and Peter talked while Naioh drove.

The priestess brought word that the other passenger's taken by Ah Sing's pirates were alive, being held for ransom, a report which greatly relieved Grace's mind.

She told also of the council of chieftains in session at Bulungan while the town and pasar crowd were in uproar.

"They want you there, mynheer," she added.

The resident deliberated a moment. Then he asked:

"Should I go, juffrouw?"

Koyala hesitated. "Jackals flee when the lion roars," she observed cryptically.

"Spoken as I thought you would, my brave girl," the resident responded warmly. "I shall go."

To reach the council building Koyala and Peter took a short but dangerous course through a treacherous swamp, while Grace, in the cart, continued along the rough road to the fort, where she was to make herself known to Capt. Carver.

By dark and almost secret ways Koyala led Peter into the very building where the chiefs sat in council, and there outside a door they listened to the talk.

What Peter heard angered him. Satoo Njam, who had gone to the fort to see Capt. Carver to request Peter's presence at the council, made an incendiary speech, in which he ascribed to Capt. Carver remarks insulting to all the races and religions represented among the natives of the island. It was with difficulty that Koyala restrained him from breaking into the hall to answer this speech. The priestess was merely awaiting a dramatic moment. When Njam made a final and impressive statement that Peter Gross was not in Bulungan her hand let go Peter's wrist. "Go!" she whispered fiercely. "Say what Djath and thy God inspire thee, and then spring back to this door with the swiftness of a tiger. I will wait for thee here."

Like a hungry lion springing into the arena, Peter swung the door aside and leaped into the hall. He was not seen at first, for the great room was thronged with a mass of swaying, gesticulating men. Dyaks and Malays were lifting spears, krises, and padangs heavenward, calling on their respective dieties to avenge the reported insult. But above the shrieking and the shouting came a roar that was like the challenge of a bull:

"I am here, Njam!"

Through the hall, tossing Dyak and Malay aside, strode the giant Peter Gross. In his wake he left men staring round-eyed and palsied at the thunderbolt that had passed among them. They thought him a spirit from Gunong Lumut, the Mount of Moss, where the dead spent the first few years of their after-existence. Small wonder, for had they not been assured that he had gone down into the depths of the sea and become the food of a shark?

"I AM here, Njam!" he bellowed again as he was midway down the hall and then din began to still. His voice rang about the tumult like a lion's roar. The hall was instantly stilled. Men turned their eyes toward this apparition from the underworld and from him to the stage.

"I am here, Njam," he said a third time, and vaulted upon the platform where the Raja Wobanguli, white as a man of his color could be, and dry-lipped, sat on his royal seat. The datoo seemed to be shrinking into himself; his hands grasped the heavy arm-rests convulsively.

"I am here, Njam," Peter said a fourth time, and now his voice was silkily soft. "You thought the sea would hold me, but you forgot that I am a child of the sea, who have sailed on every ocean as far as oceans extend. My mother did not desire me, Njam, so she returned me safely here"—his voice became sharp as steel—"to hear thy falsehoods, Njam, and thy traitorous perfidy.

"Njam," he cried hoarsely, "thou hast thy kris. I have naught but my naked hands. Now, if truth be in thee, strike me dead where I stand! And if truth be not in thee, let me make thee carrion for the vultures!"

For a moment Njam faltered. The very boldness of the challenge took his breath away—he suspected a trick. But seeing Peter Gross, apparently unarmed, he whipped his long, wavy blade from its sheath and sprang forward.

Just how it happened none of those in the audence knew. They saw the Malay's blade descend toward the resident's neck, but it did not fall where it should have. Instead it halted uncertainly a moment in mid air, spun, and described a graceful parabola, falling point down some distance in front of the stage.

Then those who were watching saw Peter Gross spring lightly forward and grasp the Malay. They saw Njam swung off his feet and bent over Peter Gross' knee. The resident's right arm was about the Malay's legs and his left hand clutched him by the throat. Njam was struggling desperately with every ounce of his strength, but was helpless as a babe. Peter bent him back slowly, while the Malay's face turned a dark blue and then black. In the tense silence Njam's gasps sounded like a rushing wind.

Peter suddenly rose and tossed the gasping Njam on the floor. "Faugh, he's not worth it!" he exclaimed in the lingua franca of the islands. He turned indifferently while Njam, contorted with pain, gasped for breath.

While the assembly remained spellbound, Peter Gross walked slowly toward Wobanguli.

"Raja," he said in a voice silken-soft, "we know each other of old. Thou art a wise man, raja"—there was a peculiar emphasis on the adjective—"thou art too wise to lead thy people into error. Thou art also a strong man, raja—strongest of thy people of Bulungan, I am told. I should like a contest of strength with thee, some time, raja, but not tonight—not tonight. Tonight I would merely ask thee to bid these chiefs and princes to go to their homes in peace, to till their crops, and to trust in the eternal justice of this resident—that justice which thou knoweth, raja, never changeth. And if there be petitions, let me hear them tomorrow. I listen, raja."

THERE were great drops of sweat on Wobanguli's face, although the hall was none too warm, as he made the announcement. Then he glanced at Peter to see whether anything else was necessary. The resident beckoned to him, and the raja approached servilely and with unsteady step to receive a whispered instruction. He turned toward the chiefs again.

"Kjals and datoos of Bulungan," he announced, "we know it a custom decreed by our orang blanda in Batavia that the council remains in its place until the resident has passed out. Let every man stand!"

Stern and majestic as a Phidian Zeus, Peter walked slowly between the lane of warriors to the door by which he had entered. As the door closed, Koyala barred it with strips of bamboo. She had hardly done so when there was a gentle pressure from within. A moment later they were speeding through the shadows.

"We must go back the way we came," Koyala whispered. "Hurry!"

Peter did not waste time in expostulation, although personally he favored taking the main highway to the fort. It was not until they were safely in the marshes, however, that he ventured to mention this.

"You have strong arms," Koyala replied admiringly, her fingers closing with a warm friendly pressure on his biceps. "But you are not immortal. Before you stopped speaking a chief of the Punans and one of the Long Wais slipped out of the hall. They had their sumpitans. What is to prevent them from shooting you with a poisoned arrow from the bush?"

When they finally reached the fort, Peter Gross urged Koyala to enter the gates with him.

"You must help me plan for tomorrow," he urged.

"It is impossible," she replied. "None but Naioh must know that I am here. Bid the white woman to keep it secret." The last sentence was pronounced with a certain viciousness.

"You know what is best," he replied. "But I am sorry you cannot come with me. I will tell Miss Coston to say nothing." He paused, and then offered his hand. She accepted it timidly.

"Once more, Koyala, I owe my life, and Bulungan owes her peace and welfare to you," he acknowledged. "I do not know how either Bulungan or I will ever be able to repay it."

Koyala jerked her head away.

"Let us not speak of debts, mynheer!" she cried hoarsely. "Goedendag!"

As the voice uttered the low farewell she darted across the plain inclosing the fort. The next moment the darknes swallowed her.

CHAPTER 8.

EVEN the dramatic return of the resident, who was thought to be safely below the waves, did not quiet the unrest of Bulungan. At the council meeting the next morning the wily Wobanguli told the assembly of a dream he had the night before, one in which he was in great peril.

Mysterious Novel . . . . . By John Charles Beecham

"Then," he said, "I awoke, and as I lay there shivering, and wondering at the meaning of the dream, I found on my pillow the emblem of the great Djath, the tail feather of a pargam."

Turning to a witch doctor who had accompanied him to the hall, he cried dramatically:

"Now, holy billian, tell us the meaning of the dream."

"Listen to me, O raja!" the witch doctor cried, rising like one awakening from a trance, and going on in a dramatic way to interpret the dream as a message from their gods to strike off the shackles imposed by the white man.

"Strike thy enemy then, in Djath's name," he cried. "He sent thee his token, the pargam's tail feather, in a dream; do as the god bids thee."

Wobanguli appeared to be torn between doubts. He sat with his head in his hand, as though pondering deeply. A young Punan, unable to stand the strain, leaped impetuously forward and shook his spear.

"Give us war, raja, give us war!" he cried. "Speak and see how quickly we will pull down the leopard from yonder height."

"War, war, give us war!" a dozen voices shouted.

"War! War!" rose again the cry, taken up and repeated by Malay and Dyak. They sprang forward, animated by a common impulse, no longer preserving the decorum of assembly, but determined to force the raja to accede to thir demand. They stormed the dais with raised krises and spears and shouted themselves hoarse.

When the tumult was at its height Wobanguli stepped forward and raised his hand for silence. But as he did so another figure suddenly materialized at the entrance back of the stage and swiftly crossed the platform. A magic name sprang simultaneously from the throats of all present:

"Koyala!"

She was clad wholly in white. The costume was purely Bornean and simplicity itself. Unlike other Dyak women, she wore no ornaments—her marvelous beauty was sufficient adornment. A plain band of gold caught her hair.

A hush fell upon the assembly. The witch doctor, who had been the wildest dancer in the mad frenzy, shrank back on one of the benches and tried to efface himself in the crowd.

"What is it, my people?" she asked sorrowfully in rich, chaste Dyak. "What do I hear you say? Do you speak of war? War for unhappy Bulungan? Your homes to be ravaged and your fields devastated? The rice to be burned ere it ripens? Your bodies to feel wounds? Your daughters to be sold as slaves? The proud Malay to lord it over you and make the wealth of your forests and fields his?'"

A low, guttural murmur of dissent and disapprobation arose as she paused. It was evident that her message was not falling upon sympathetic ears.

"We have heard the voice of Djath, bilian," the suave voice of Wobanguli interrupted. "Djath bids us strike and save our people and our fields. It is Djath we obey. The die is cast, bilian. Djath hath spoken to me in a dream, and there is naught more to say."

SHE turned on him with blazing eyes and demanded scornfully:

"Who has interpreted the words of Djath unto thee, raja? This false priest, this muddler here?" She pointed a finger of scorn at the shrinking witch doctor. "Dost thou prefer his word to mine, raja? Dost thou place him before me, who am keeper of the mysteries, who knoweth the innermost secrets from the most ancient times, who am a granddaughter of Chawatangi?"

The raja flushed under his swarthy skin, but tried to maintain his dignity.

"Djath spoke to me in a dream, bilian," he began, but Koyala did not permit him to proceed.

"Was it the dream the hantu token related to me in the still hours last night?" she demanded. "A dream of two men who sat in a hut with a lamp between them and talked of coral and a leopard and a pargam's tail feather?"

Wobanguli's face turned a sickly yellow. His knees quaked, and he looked like a man about to collapse. It did not occur to him that Koyala might have eavesdropped. Believing in her supernatural powers he was ready to accept that the hantu token, her own familiar spirit, had revealed to he the scheme which he and the witch doctor had planned during the night.

The Malays, however, saved him. Quick to grasp the threat to his cause, Njam and his brother datoos began a frantic demonstration of war. "War, war, give us war," the Malays shouted. "Death to the orang blanda." The Dyaks took up the refrain.

Koyala realized her defeat. As suddenly as she had appeared she whisked out of sight. When the hubbub finally died down the assembled chieftains looked expectantly toward Wobanguli.

"As you will," he announced gravely. "Gather your followers, that we may pull the leopard down from his height."

CHAPTER 9.

All this time, though he had not retired until nearly dawn, Peter Gross was up and about, satisfying himself that the fort was prepared to withstand the attack he fully expected.

One of his duties was to explain to Grace Coston that she must stay with Mrs. Van Voort in Lieut. Van Voort's quarters, as it would be dangerous for her to leave the fort. She demurred, but obeyed orders after significantly asking Peter whether he would permit Koyala any freedom should she appear at the fort.

By noon a desultory attack on the stockade was begun by riflemen who fired from the cover of the jungle, but in the afternoon firing ceased, and the defenders prepared for an attack in force, which they expected after midnight, when the moon would have set.

Their estimate was correct. It was nearly 3 o'clock in the morning when a sentry saw the figure of a man silhouetted for a moment against the horizon in a break in the jungle wall. A moment later he saw another crouching figure that cautiously rose and squatted back to earth again.

"Here they come!" was the word silently passed along the line. The alarm was given quietly to those within, and the troops, discarding their blankets, took their assigned places without making an unnecessary sound.

THERE was a slight rustle like the faint stirring of a breeze in a pine forest in the field ahead. Although hardly perceptible, it was significant to the trained ears that heard it along the walls.

The commandant strained his eyes to see. But the night was too dark. The earth was swathed in sable, and if men crawled like ants over its black, bosom it gave no sign.

The soldiers hardly breathed. Hands clenched to their rifle barrels they stared into the blackness ahead, waiting for the shaft of light that was to expose and, at the same time, blind and disconcert their foes.

The scout next to Carver, reputed to be the best in the service and possessing the keenest eyes, suddenly stiffened.

"They are here, kapitein," he whispered.

Carver gave the signal. The searchlight blazed suddenly. Sweeping in a huge arc, it disclosed the front rank of Dyaks on hands and knees within twenty yards of the fort. The field back of them was covered with foes, thick as swarms of locusts.

With a savage yell the Dyaks leaped to their feet and charged. The yell was drowned in a deafening crash as the rifles of those on the wall spat flame. Lights flashed from one end of the fort to the other, flooding the entire plain. The quick firers got in their work and mowed down the savage horde.

The attack was practically over a moment after it began. The semi-nude savages, accustomed only to jungle fighting and to attacks of helpless and undermanned merchant ships, could not stand before the pitiless fire poured on them. Within three minutes after the first shot there was not a foe to be seen.

There was not a casualty in the fort. In fact the Dyaks, who had hoped to surprise and overwhelm the defenders before the latter could get into action, had been too utterly surprised themselves to attempt any reply to the crushing fire directed upon them.

When dawn came the defenders were astonished to see that the field was clear. Dyak cunning and stealth had carried away the injured under the eyes of the watchful sentries.

"We might as well turn in," Peter Gross remarked to Capt. Carver. "I don't expect another attack for some time."

"We can rest until Ah Sing arrives," Carver smiled. "We probably won't get much sleep after that."

CHAPTER 10.

IT was shortly after noon when an orderly came to Peter Gross' room with the message:

"There's a ship low down on the horizon coming this way, sir, at top speed. Lili Laki says he hears the sound of guns."

Peter Gross tumbled out and dressed hastily. Speeding to the ramparts he found Capt. Carver and Paddy Rouse there ahead of him. Paddy was intently studying a distant speck on the horizon through binoculars.

"What do you make of it?" Peter Gross asked.

"Paddy says it's a yacht," Carver replied. "My eyes are not as good as they once were. There's another ship chasing her."

"What flag does she fly?"

"None that I can make out," Paddy announced.

"That's odd. What flag does the other ship fly?"

"She's too far distant to tell anything about her."

"Is it true that firing's been heard?"

"The first ship's being shelled by the second," Paddy stated. "There," he exclaimed, "a shell landed near her just then!"

"That devil, Ah Sing, is chasing her!" Peter Gross exclaimed. "Has she the speed to hold her own?"

"She seems to be gaining, if anything," Paddy reported.

"Signal her to keep out of this harbor, captain," Peter Gross directed, "otherwise she'll be trapped. Watch her close, Paddy, and let me know if she runs any closer inshore."

Carver issued the necessary instructions. A few moments later a string of pennants ran up the post staff. The resident and commandment watched the race between the two vessels intently.

"It seems to me that the ship ahead is gaining just a trifle," Peter Gross observed. "The shells seem to be falling short. Can you make anything more of the rear ship?" he asked Paddy.

"I'm trying to, sir, but she's got me puzzled," the youth replied, focusing his binoculars steadily on the vessel. "She's a deadringer for the Prins Lodewyk."

"Let me have those glasses," Peter demanded eagerly. He scrutinized the approaching vessels sharply for several moments. Then he lowered the glasses with the exclamation:

"It is the Prins. The yacht must be the pirate. That's why she flies no flag."

"The yacht's edging off shore!" Paddy exclaimed.

"Ah, she sees her danger," Peter Gross replied bitterly. "She has the speed, too—she's outrunning the Prins."

THIS was obvious. The shells of the pursuers were falling short and each minute increased the gap. The yacht was abreast of the fort when the gunboat ceased firing and began to reduce speed.

The next moment cleared away all doubt of the identity of pursuer and pursued—for the pirate insolently hoisted the black flag and romped away triumphantly under full head of steam from the doughty little gunboat sailing under the tricolor of the Netherlands.

The little gunboat slowly picked its way through the reefs off the entrance to the bay and steamed into the harbor.

It did not claim the full attention of those on the ramparts, however, for Bulungan town below was suddenly galvanized into activity. Seemingly the entire population poured out of its huts and fled across the flats to the jungle. Men, women, and children joined in the mad rush, horsemen plunged through without regard to those on foot, palanquin bearers left their shrieking passengers and bolted at top speed.

That the exodus did not pass unobserved on board the Prins soon became apparent. Kepitein Enckel, commander of the gunboat, was a man of shrewd wit and quick decision. When he saw the Dyaks fleeing he quickly concluded that they had reason to fear his coming. Without wasting time in investigating, he seized his opportunity of impressing a lesson on the crown's fickle subjects by dropping shells into the town.

As the bursting shells fell among the bamboo dwellings and toppled them right and left the Dyak flight became a panic-stricken rout. Those who were trying to save part of their possessions threw everything to a side in a frantic effort to distance their neighbors in the rush for the protecting screen of jungle.

"'Conscience doth make cowards of us all,'" Peter Gross quoted to Capt. Carver. "If those poor devils had stayed at home no harm would have come to them. Now they have officially become rebels, whom we must punish before we can permit them to return to their dwellings. Look there!"

The exclamation was induced by a burst of flame in the northwest corner of the town. The fire came from a dwelling knocked over by a shell. A long row of thatched houses stretched westward from it between wto canals, and the easterly monsoon, fanning the flames, swept them through the bone-dry bamboo and thatch. This portion of the city was almost instantly a roaring furnace. Within a comparatively few minutes the entire section was doomed.

Peter and Capt Carver focused their glasses on the bridge of the Prins as she negotiated the reefs and made for her customary anchorage below the fort. It was Peter who first recognized the figures grouped around Kepitein Enckel.

"By the holy bull of Bashan," he exclaimed, "there's Sachsen, my old friend Sachsen, standing next to the kapitein. There's someone with them who looks familiar—no, it can't be—by the gods it is, I'd know that strut anywhere!"

"Who?" Paddy cried.

The Yellow Spider

A Thrilling and Mysterious Novel

"His excellency, the gouverneur generaal!"

"Van Schouten?"

"The Jonkheer Adriaan Adriaanszoon Van Schouten himself! He's come, as he swore he would, though they all advised against it!"

THE Prins had hardly swung into anchorage before a boat left her side. By the time it reached shore there was a detachment from the fort on the beach to meet it. The first man to step out after the boat was beached was the governor. Although past fifty, he leaped out as lightly as a youth half his years, stiffened his back militarily, and smiled into the warmly welcoming face of Peter Gross.

The difference in station between these two, governor general and resident, nobleman and commoner, was forgotten. Their hands clasped warmly.

Two sailors stepped forward to assist the aged Sachsen, the governor's adviser and Peter Gross' dearest friend, to step out of the boat. Leaping forward, Peter thrust them aside and gathered the old man in his arms, lifting him over the side and placing him gently on the sands.

"Sachsen!" was all he said in a voice that broke huskily.

"Pieter, mijne kindeken (Peter, my child)," the old man responded hoarsely.

Carver was introduced. The governor general ran an appreciative eye over the trim figure of the commandant and the file of soldiers lined up on both sides of the lane to receive him.

"I see they have not smoked you out," the governor observed.

"Your excellency notes that our flag is still flying," Carver replied courteously.

"Have you had much fighting?"

"An assault last night, your excellency. Nothing serious."

Van Schouten glanced swiftly and shrewdly at the commandant.

"I wonder what your definition of a serious attack is, kapitein," he remarked. "Let us see what manner of beehive you have built here."

They marched up the steep file, the governor spry as a chick. He walked with a peculiar gait that was not unlike the stiff but springy stride of a cockerel. Carcer recalled the name whereby he was known the length and breadth of the Dutch possessions—"De Kemphaan (the Gamecock)."

"He's well named in more respects than one," was his silent reflection.

Peter Gross assisted Sachsen, for the man's eighty-odd years were beginning to tell on him, and his breath came rapidly as they struggled up the steep ascent.

"Let me help you into a palanquin, father," Peter Gross pleaded when they were midway up the slope. Sachsen's face lighted with pleasure at the salutation.

"I am stronger than you think, Vrind Pieter," he rejoined fondly. "With your good right arm to lean upon I shall reach the top without mishap. You would not shame me before the fair ladies I see above by bringing me in like a babe in arms, would you?" he asked with a twinkle.

"They are Mrs. Van Voort, the lieutenant's wife, and the Jonge Juffrouw Coston, an American girl," Peter hastened to explain.

Sachsen's mild blue eyes rested questioningly upon Peter Gross' gray ones.

"The jonge juffrouw is a new addition to your colony?" he inquired artlessly. "I do not recollect her name from your letters."

"She escaped with me from the Zuyder Zee," Peter Gross explained. "But possibly the fate of the ship is news to you."

"WE heard about it at Coli," Sachsen replied gravely. "A coasting proa brought in the report and the city was in a turmoil. There was talk of rebellion, but our coming stopped that. How did you escape, Vrind Pieter?"

"The jonge juffrouw and I jumped overboard when I saw there was no chance for escape otherwise," Peter Gross repled. "We swam ashore and made our way overland the following morning to the Kjai Naioh's house. From there we went to tambangan to Bulungan, arriving there night before last."

"Jawel!" Sachsen replied noncommittally. "You truly had a most marvelous escape—and the jonge juffrouw also. You knew her before?"

Peter smiled. "She was a total stranger to me," he said. "We introduced ourselves on Bornean soil, by the pale light of a tallow lamp, each of us drenched to the skin, and the water from our dripping garments making little puddles around us."

Their conversation was necessarily interrupted by their arrival at the top of the hill and the gates of the fort. There was a wild fanfare of trumpets and a booming of guns as the governor and his escort marched in.

The governor general's quick eye caught the presence of femininity in the group. Mrs. Van Voort he knew and dismissed with a glance and polite genuflection, for she had been one of the army circle while her husband was stationed at Batavia. Grace Coston's fresh young face, her ruddy cheeks, flushed with the excitement of the moment, and her wavy brown hair caught and held his attention, however. He beckoned Peter Gross.

"You have ladies here, I see," he remarked. "Is Capt. Carver the fortunate benedict, or have you committed the unpardonable crime of matrimony without consulting me?"

"Neither surmise is true, your excellency," Peter Gross replied with a smile. "The lady is Miss Coston, one of my countrywomen who was rescued with me from the Zuyder Zee."

"One who was your countrywoman," the irascible Van Schouten snapped. "Pot ver dikkie, mynheer, we will make you a Hollander yet for all that Yankee blood in you."

"I have striven to be a good servant to the state," Peter Gross replied formally.

"Donder en bliksen, who wants to talk about that when there is so fair a maid waiting to have speech with me?" the governor general barked. "She has been looking in this direction ever since I entered the gate. Come, introduce me!"

The little governor bowed his courtliest as Peter performed the ceremony of introduction.

"Jonge Juffrouw, it is a pleasure to come to Bulungan to visit my brave and loyal resident, Mynheer Gross," the governor assured her. "But it is thrice a pleasure to find here, in this arid waste, such beauty as it has been my good fortune to set eyes upon today."

"You did not know Mrs. Van Voort was here?" Grace asked demurely.

Grace quickly took stock of the governor's peculiarities, his irascibility that hid a gentle and kindly spirit, his pomposity that could not offend but could only amuse, his truculence that was but a mask for a soul too impulsively generous. His pompous manner was a challenge to her democratic instincts. She had all the iconoclasm of youth and could not resist the temptation to prick the bubble of conceit. Their verbal exchange was vivid and rapid for a few moments, while poor Mrs. Van Voort paled and listened with quaking heart. Peter finally intervened by introducing Sachsen.

"Mynheer Gross has told me how you came here, my daughter," the old man remarked gently. "I hope we will know each other better ere long."

Something in his tone caused Grace to catch her breath for an instant, and flash a glance at Peter, who stood serenely by, smiling pleasure, and unconscious of any significance in his patron's words. Some of the color flower from her cheeks.

"I surely hope our acquaintance may improve during the few days we shall spend here together," she replied, meeting his glance candidly.

As Sachsen dropped her hand he stole a glance at his protege. But Peter, he saw, had eyes only for the girl. Sachsen stroked his gray beard thoughtfully.

"Youth!" he murmured under his breath. "Youth!"

CHAPTER 11.

THE soft radiance of a mild moonlight flooded Fort Wilhelmina on the evening of the day the governor general arrived. While making a round of inspection Peter Gross stumbled upon a dim form hidden in a niche between two projecting buttresses. Stepping forward suspiciously, he uttered a sharp challenge.

"It is only I," came the plaintive response in a woman's voice that he instantly recognized.

"Miss Coston!" he exclaimed delightedly.

"I came here to watch the play of the moonlight on the still water of the bay," Grace stated. "It put me in mind of winter evenings I once spent in a little town in Florida. But I suppose this is 'verbotea.' Are you going to send me home?"

She asked the question with a provocative lilt in her tones that roused a dormant chord in Peter.

"It's contrary to regulations for you to be here after sundown," he replied gravely. "But—"

"Yes?"

"I'm afraid that if I drove you away I'd punish myself worse than you."

"Isn't a night like this wonderfully soothing?" Grace remarked, as if to change the subject. I feel as though I could sit and dream in this deliciously mystic oriental atmosphere forever. I never could understand the legend of the lotus eaters when I was a girl, but I do now."

"The tropics have that effect," Peter conceded. "Sometimes it's untunate. Many a good man has lost his ambition here and become a shiftless vagrant satisfied to eat and sleep."

The remark started a new train of thought for Grace. She gazed pensively at the water. "Will something be done to rescue those who were on the Zuyder Zee with us?" she asked presently.

"There are troops on the way now," Peter said. "The larger part of a regiment. The pirates will be hunted on both sea and land. His excellency is in earnest and means to end these sporadic outbreaks of piracy for all time."

"Is he going to lead the army in person?" Grace asked.

Peter hesitated. "I might as well acknowledge that he has left that to me," he said. "It will be common knowledge tomorrow."

"Oh, I'm so happy! I congratulate you, Mr. Gross." The spontaneous exclamation thrilled Peter, and he pressed the hand she offered him.

"I know you'll rescue those I love!" she said.

His ardor cooled. She was promised to another, and, strangely enough, the fact hurt.

"I shall do all that is humanly possible," he assured gravely.

"I know you will," she replied.

THE conversation passed into less personal channels. She told him things that had happened in the country he had left behind, items of news that never strayed into the papers which came into his hands. It was not until a change of sentries took place that they awoke to a joint realization of the lateness of the hour.

"Mercy!" Grace exclaimed. "I had no idea we had talked so long. You shouldn't have permitted me," she added, turning on Peter severly.

"We must hold these chats oftener," he declared with conviction. "You'll be tempting me to go back home."

"Where, after all, you belong," Grace flashed.

"No, my work is here," Peter replied gravely.

They parted, Grace entering the Van Voort home while Peter walked on to his quarters. A few moments later a figure detached itself from the shadows. It was Koyala, who had been admitted by a sentry and was going to headquarters when she chanced to see Peter and Grace strolling in her direction. She thereby happened to hear their parting words.

"The vampire!" she hissed. "She would steal him from Bulungan, would she? Him, who is all to us? And she is the promised bride of another?"

As stealthily as she had hidden herself she leaped into the path again and glided after Peter Gross. He was drawing out a chain in his room as she quietly opened the door and entered. He looked up at her sudden appearance, and then broke into a welcoming smile.

"Koyala!" he exclaimed. "I was just thinking about you and wondering where I could find you."

"Your servant is here," Koyala replied quietly.

A flash of annoyance crossed the resident's face. "Don't speak that way," he rebuked forcibly. "You are Koyala Bintung Burung, priestess of Bulungan, my peer in everything. Everything!" he repeated with emphasis. "If we meet on any basis it is that of friends who mutually appreciate each other."

"It shall be as you say," Koyala replied lifelessly.

Peter Gross thrust his chair back determinedly and stepped toward Koyala. She shrank back against the wall.

"Koyala," he asked, "what's wrong? Where have I offended? Something has come up between you and me. Since my return we have not been the friends we were before I set out for Batavia. What is the reason; be frank?"

"There is nothing," Koyala replied dully.

"Is it Miss Coston?" Peter Gross asked.

THE priestess' eyes blazed with a sudden fire that she hid from him by lowering her lashes.

"I have told you, and I say it again," Peter Gross asserted with emphasis, "Miss Coston is nothing to me except a friend, a very good friend. She is the promised bride of another, and him she shall marry if there is any way I can save him. That is why I was thinking of you. I need your help."

"It is to discuss that very matter that I came to see you mynheer," she announced quietly. "I have been to the city that Ah Sing has built."

"The deuce you have!" Peter Gross exclaimed. "Where is it?"

"Not too fast, mynheer. What do you propose to do?"

Peter turned to a filing cabinet and dug out a map of Bulungan which he spread before them.

"Where is the place?" he asked.

Koyala's hands lay idly in her lap, "I said I could tell you where it lies," she replied. "I did not say I would."

Peter Gross rose slowly. His stern glance held her eyes, but she did not waver.

"I do not understand, juffrouw," he said.

"It would seem, mynheer," he replied in tones as formal as his own, "that I possess something which you covet. In a barter there is customarily an exchange."

"You desire something, then?"

"I have two conditions—"

"Name them," Peter Gross interrupted forcibly without waiting for Koyala to complete her sentence.

"The first is—immunity for my people."

"Have I ever failed in justice either to you, Koyala, or to your people?" Peter Gross asked.

"I ask more than justice," Koyala replied.

"Should I let the guilty go unpunished that they may do more evil?"

"My people are weak, they were led astray," she pleaded passionately. "They are yet in the days of their fathers; they have not come to understand the purpose of the orang blanda.

"Koyala," he replied earnestly, "so far as lies within my power I grant you what you ask. With one exception; the Raja Wobanguli must be shorn of his rajaship."

The priestess gazed with unseeing eyes at the wall. Her face was drawn and colorless.

"You remember, mynheer, that I specified two conditions to our treaty?" she asked suddenly.

"You did not specify the second," Peter Gross replied. "What is it?"

Koyala turned to face him. Her eyes were fixed steadfastly upon his. There was a curious hunger in them, Peter Gross thought, and he vaguely wondered.

"The condition is this," Koyala announced slowly, "that you remain here as resident of Bulungan until a white man can paddle a tambangan from Bulungan to the temple of Hunya Kawa which is at the foothills of the Tohen Batu, without fear of Punao or Bukit, headhunter or thief."

A vision of Grace Coston, New York home, flitted before Peter Gross. Until he had spoken this night with Grace he had not realized how ardently he desired these things. Koyala's words were as the flaming angel before the gates of paradise.

"Let me think," he replied huskily. "I cannot promise tonight."

CHAPTER XII.

THE Zuyder Zee lay motionless at anchor in a muddy lagoon. Directly ahead of it the great mangroves thrust their slimy claws into the tepid water and drew sustenance from the rich, black mud below. To one side, in an alluvial flat screened in by a tall growth of almost impenetrable jungle, lay the city Ah Sing and his pirates had built in secret before they delivered their first bold stroke in the capture of the packet Dordrechter.

John Bright, the missionary, the Yankee trader, Jim Poggs, Violet Coston and Vincent Brady were on the deck of the Zuyder Zee.

"Vincent, will we ever escape from here?" Violet Coston groaned.

"Courage, Vi," he replied.

"I ain't holding out any hopes," the trader said warily. "But I learned something this morning. I know a little Shanghai pidgin, and I heard two of these yellow devils gossiping. They let something drop that set me thinking.

"Do you remember that tall young fellow we had aboard who was the captain's guest and who wasn't seen or heard of again after the scrimmage?"

"Yes." The three spoke as one.

"Do you know who it was? That was Peter Gross, president of Bulungan, that's what. He got away. Ah Sing is madder than blazes. He's gone down to Bulungan to wipe him out. But if Peter Gross could crawl out of that hole, with a whole nest of pirates on top of him, he can hold his own at Bulungan. By and by there'll be a gunboat there, and then you'll see the fur begin to fly. When Peter Gross gets going, there's something doing. Believe me, he's a hooly terror! Ask any Dyak!"

"Praise God!" John Bright murmured, closing his eyes. "Praise God!"

"Do you think there's a chance, Mr. Bright?" Mrs. Coston begged piteously.

"As I told you that night, Mrs. Coston, when Peter Gross was on the bridge above us and we did not know it, if there is one man in all the Indies who can prevent a general native uprising and crush piracy, it is Peter Gross. I have all faith in him."

Fresh life glowed in all their faces. Hope shone in their eyes. The Manchu guard stationed near them looked at them curiously. He was wondering what had come over the despised orang blanda.

They were eagerly discussing the possibilities of rescue, when loud shouts from the natives on another boat attracted their attention. At the same time occupants of the houses on stilts along the water front of Ah Sing's city began capering about the bamboo platforms in front of their houses and gesticulating seaward. Other natives were hurrying to the beach.

Poggs leaped to the rail and peered toward the channel entrance, cunningly concealed by a heavy growth of forest.

"Ah Sing's back!" he exclaimed. "There's his boat coming out of the channel now."

The slim white yacht that had shown her heels to the Prins Lodewyk before the gates of Bulungan glided as gracefully as a swan into the placid waters of the lagoon.

Ah Sing and a couple of stalwart Tibetans were rowed ashore, where Ah Sing found a covered sedan chair awaiting him and was borne to the "long house" that had been built to accommodate him.

From a proa he had met on his trip Ah Sing had learned of Wobanguli's fiasco at Bulungan, his failure to make a bold stroke at the pasar, and his collapse at the sudden appearance of Peter Gross at the council. Had the raja acted with decision, he perceived, the gates of the fort would have been closed to the resident, and his arch enemy would have been in his power. The miscarriage of his carefully matured plans stirred him to a cold passion of fury, which boded ill for the unfortunate Wobanguli when they met.

He had not long to wait for that event. A Chinaman entered the august presence and kotowed.

"Master," he announced, "the Raja Wobanguli is without and seeks audience."

A light blazed in Ah Sing's eyes. It was the only flicker of expression that he permitted to escape him.

"Bid him come in," he directed.

Wobanguli bent at the waist as he entered, for the portal was not framed for one so tall as he. He was rubbing his hands and smiling unctuously. As he stepped inside he kotowed modestly, to indicate the Chinaman's superior rank. His crafty eyes sought to read the pirate chief's face, but Ah Sing's features were as immobile and expressionless as a Buddha idol's.

"Salaamat, master! I felicitate you on your safe return," he greeted warmly, in sonorous Malay. "I hope your voyage has been prosperous?"

"Our cause prospers," Ah Sing replied non-committally.

Then Ah Sing listened to an untruthful report of what had taken place at Bulungan, listened patiently for a time, but in the end charged Wobanguli with having permitted Peter Gross to slip through his fingers when he had him in his power in the council chamber.

"Do you know, raja, that he has set a price on thy head?" he finished.

"Let him come and take it!" the raja cried boastfully, in a voice pitched too high to be confident. "He will never get it."

"No, he will never get it," Ah Sing replied soothingly. "Because," he shouted, "I shall have it! Seize him," he cried, turning to his Tibetans, "seize him and bind him!"

The raja's world rocked. He was too terror-stricken to offer resistance. As the giant Chinamen leaped toward him he sank to his knees with a cry for mercy. In a thrice he was bound hand and foot.

Ah Sing slowly rose, lifting his huge body with an effort. There was a sardonic smile on his face; so had he looked when he first registered Adriaan Adriaanszoon Van Schouten and Peter Gross as victims of his vengeance. He spurned the prostrate raja with his foot.

"Take out his lying tongue," he directed, "lest I hear more falsehoods." As one of the Tibetans came forward with an instrument for that purpose the raja uttered a despairing shriek. The next moment he was rendered silent forever.

"Now put out those eyes that gleam only with craft and guile," the pirate chief directed. The executioner knelt and forced out the eyeballs with his thumb.

Dumb and sightless, the unfortunate raja, a victim of his own untrustworthiness, writhed for a while on the floor of the house. Ah Sing sat by the living corpse, gloating over it. The shades of night were falling when he summoned one of his guards again.

"Strike off his head," he directed, "and post it over the city gates. And put over it this wording, in the Malay, the Dyak and the Bajau tongues:

" 'This is the end of those who disobey the master.' "

CHAPTER XIII.

IT was evening, and as Ah Sing sat in his hall Koyala came to him and proposed that she hold in line her people, who were beginning to waver in loyalty to him since Peter Gross was gaining power. In return for this he was to help her abduct Grace Coston, then hold her captive and let no word of what had become of her reach the resident.

To this the pirate chief readily agreed, for he shrewdly suspected that Koyala acted because of jealousy, and that if she had reason for such a feeling his possession of the white

Not In the Testimony

A Blue Ribbon Short Story

tonight's the night you join me again."

Fellowes considered this, gazing into the upturned muzzle of Dilling's revolver. Once he glanced at the door. Perhaps he was thinking that if he could pass beyond that door he could lock Dilling outside and raise a hue and cry from the banker's window.

Dilling appeared to read these thoughts. "O, no," he said. "It's not so easy as that, Thorny. Did you ever see this stuff?"

He dangled a roll of black electrician's tape.

"What for?" gasped the other.

"Better than a mask," Dilling informed him. "A black silk handkerchief might fall off your face. Then Mr. Mace would know you. Just wind this around your upper lip. Here's the first piece."

"You aren't going to send me in so I won't be recognized!" whimpered Fellowes.

"Yes," said Dilling. "That's it! Not even by your voice. Here's a mouthful of cotton, Thorny. Stuff it in yourself before I put this sticky plaster around your mouth and chin."

The other cringed, and Dilling raised his gun. "I mean it!" said the ex-convict with the maniac look in his eyes. "I'd rather kill you outright, but I'll give you a chance. Go in and bring back something to keep the wolf from my door."

"You've been taking a drug," accused Fellowes.

"None of your business. Do what I say. Put that cotton in."

Fellowes obeyed, using his trembling hands. When he had closed his mouth over the gag, Dilling unwound a yard of the adhesive tape and bound its clinging contact twice around the lips and chin of his victim. Then he laughed softly.

"Don't you look funny?" he asked. "Your own mother would think you were a stranger."

He examined his silent prey critically.

"Now, then, Thorny, let me tell you what I've fixed up for you. Perhaps you know already. If your boss wakes up and sees you, he'll shoot. He'll keep on shooting. When the morning comes, you'll be stretched out and your family will know your true nature—a thief, a man who tries to rob his own master! And where will I be? Far, far away!"

Dilling laughed triumphantly.

"But listen, Thorny!" he went on. "Of course, if he wakes up and you are quick, you might shoot first. Maybe it's his life or yours. Then you might shoot. Self defense, eh? Now, you say you won't have a gun. O, yes you will, Thorny. I brought one for you. And if you use it, well, then, you and I are good old pals again. And tomorrow morning if luck is good, dear old Mr. Mace will be stretched out and you and I will be far, far away, eh?"

The victim raised his hands as if to shut out the horrors of what he had been made to see. It was his last protest.

"COME on, now," said Dilling. "I don't hear any noise. The old man's asleep. If you're quiet as you do your work, he may not wake up. Turn your back. That's good. Now take this gun. Keep it pointed at the floor until you get inside the bedroom. Keep your back turned toward me. When you come out—back out. If I see anything but your back, I'll fire—understand?"

He regarded his arrangement with satisfaction. Then suddenly he perceived that his victim was looking down at the sleeve of his own coat.

"Ha!" said Dilling. "So that's it, is it? You hope dear old Mr. Mace will recognize your coat, eh? Well, I'm smarter than you are. Give me that gun! Now take off your coat. Here's mine. Yours dark and plain; mine's gray and checked. O, you'll be a complete stranger! Put it on. Good. Now here's the gun. No, in your left hand. Keep your back turned."

He surveyed his work as if he had been some great sculptor who had finished a masterpiece. Thornton Fellowes was completely changed. He was the picture of a masked marauder with ill fitting coat who had climbed in out of the night, weapon ready.

"Lights out!" whispered Dilling. "There's moon enough to see you. Keep your back turned and gun pointed down. Close the door after you."

Fellowes began a painstaking labor of turning the brass knob on the thick oak door. Once it gave forth an almost imperceptible squeak. The victim caught his breath. When he began to turn again, the latch having slipped back far enough, the door suddenly yielded and swung out from the bedroom until the crack was wide enough to admit a man. No sound came from the bedroom into the silence of the night, except the hysterical ticking of a watch evidently placed on some little table which acted as a sounding board. A shaft of moonlight fell upon the back of the man who slowly and on cautious tip toe advanced through the opening.

Dilling, watching this moonlit back, was seized suddenly with a tremendous surge of the old hate. All the hours he had spent contrasting his own hideous sufferings with the freedom and the progress of the man who had reformed and made restitution and built his own life anew, came pouring into his veins. He knew himself, no doubt, that his abused nerves were those of a man half mad, but in this irresponsibility to normal action he felt a savage joy. He could shoot Fellowes in the back! But there was no need for that. The edge of the half opened door was in his fingers.

He uttered a snarl—a loud, ugly, incoherent exclamation of hate; then with an oath, he slammed the door with all his might!

He had thought with joy of this crash. Now it struck his ears like the message of a pleasure for which the appetite had waited a whole lifetime. What happened to himself, he cared not; he had slammed the portal upon Thornton Fellowes' destiny.

HE put his knee and shoulder against the panels waiting, in the pause that follows a terrible shock to the senses. Then he heard the sound of an exclamation and saw the light spring up in the thin crack under the door. The two men within the room were looking at each other—the moment of hesitation before action!

When the first shot sounded Dilling stood back. His own nerves went into a horrible discord.

"Mace!" he gasped.

Before he could take another breath there followed the second thudding smash of a revolver's explosion.

Both of these shots were muffled behind the heavy door. Dilling waited—listening. The night was deadly still. He could smell the aromatic odors of the smoke. Everything behind the noncommittal door was silent. He pressed his weight against it again, wondering what one would have to see if they were in that brightly lighted room.

He waited trying to lick his dry lips, trying to think clearly and decide, without evidence, what the answer to the riddle of that room would be.

There was now—at last—a feeble tapping on the door.

Fellowes! Fellowes had done it!

Dilling opened the door cautiously.

"Back out!" he said. "If you turn your face, I'll kill!"

Again the moonlight fell upon the shoulder blades of the trembling bent figure and, as if it were an accuser, upon a revolver hanging limply in a limp hand.

"Drop the gun!"

The weapon slid down to the rug. Dilling closed the door and switched the lights.

"Take that stuff off your face," he commanded. "Sticks hard, doesn't it? Spit out that cotton!"

He stared at Fellowes' countenance. It had grown dead, oyster shell white. The man's face had fallen into the ghastly lines of a face of a corpse. His body drooped and shivered.

"You did it!"

"I had to," said Fellowes.

"He missed you!"

The victim nodded, and then with a cry of loathing he covered his face with his hands.

"Look!" he whimpered. "Open the door and look! See what I did! What will I ever—just look, Phil! Do it for me! See what I've done! It's in the full blaze of light!"

"No," said Dilling with a revulsion of feeling. "Not for me! Did you get anything?"

"All locked up!" said Fellowes. "His wife had a little safe in the wall. Do you want to see? Well—it's our luck, Phil—it's locked tonight. You haven't got any tools?"

Dilling shook his head.

"Come on, then," begged Fellowes. "Let's go. You've got to help me now, Phil. Say you'll help me now!"

The other picked up the fallen revolver and bega nto examine it; he was taking his time. He enjoyed seeing Fellowes squirm in his agony.

"Throw it away! Hide it!" chattered the victim.

"Not me," said Dilling with a leer. "I'm not through with you, old Thorny. If I break my own neck, I'll make you pay! I sat on my cot when I couldn't sleep nights and planted a seed and it grew and grew and, by heavens, now I gather my peach crop."

The other stared at Dilling. "You aren't going to desert me now!" he gibbered. "You wouldn't, Phil? What would my wife say? What would my little daughter say? Can't you see, Phil? We must stick together."

Phil motioned with the point of his revolver. "Sit down!" he commanded. "Sit down here in the desk chair. I'm a respectable citizen now, Thorny. You're only a murderer. How do you like the sound of that word? Murderer! Why, I could kill you now and be quite a hero."

THE other man had sunk into the chair; Dilling looked about the room with his quick, nervous glance of inspection.

"All right," he said at last in a tone of satisfaction. "I see it."

"See what?" The other's body leaped and twitched in fear.

"Never mind," replied Dilling. "Take off my coat. Here's yours. That's right. Now then—"

He stepped to the window and with a turn of his wrist about the curtain cord he jerked several yards of it down.

"Hold out your hands," he commanded.

"I won't!" Fellowes wailed. "No, I won't. You're going to double cross me. You're going to squeal. You're going to make me pay for everything."

"I could do that now," said Dilling coldly. "O, you're smarter than I am, are you? Well, I could kill you now—you, the clever fellow who threatened me—and then I could make my getaway or stay by and say that you asked me here and I wouldn't stand for murder and I killed you trying to defend that—that poor old banker—in there." He pointed. "No, you better behave. I'd kill you for a pin!"

Fellowes shut his eyes as a man at the end of a rope. His lips twitched. He extended his limp wrists.

Dilling made a skillful job of tying him up. He lashed his wrists behind to a cross bar at the back of the chair seat. The chair was massive and without rollers. The worker bound Fellowes' ankles to its legs.

Again he surveyed his labors. Then he dropped the revolver into a distant corner and laughed aloud.

"Phil—for all that's good—Phil!" begged Fellowes.

"Don't move," said the other. "I'm going to show you something pretty. A clever man like you will be glad to learn the trick I'm going to play."

Fellowes' head sank on his breast; it almost rolled about there like a heavy bloom on a broken stem.

But Dilling was all activity and briskness. On the other side of the desk, he picked up the telephone instrument, and said in a voice sufficiently dramatic, "Give me police headquarters."

Apparently Followes did not even hear him.

"Hello," said Dilling. "This is the house of Christopher Mace—the banker. There's been a murder here. Yes—a murder. Bring a couple of inspectors and some men. I can't leave this room. I'm guarding the man. The servants are locked into the basement. Just break the front door lock. There's no other way. Yes, the house of Christopher Mace, the banker. Come up to the second story."

Still Fellowes did not move; his eyes were rolled slightly upward, as are a man's who is coming out of ether. In the ten minutes of waiting he apparently heard nothing clearly. A blanket of fog had come over his senses. To the constant, low, ugly abuse heaped upon him by Dilling, h emade no response. Only once did he speak; then he sai dwith painting breath, "I'm sick, Phil. Send for my wife."

The other man laughed. He mumbled on—a kind of slow, thick current of hate—just as if a mere flow of words could clean out the terrible pervasion which had encrusted all the cells of his brain. He talked automatically and, as he talked, he thought and plann deand rehearsed.

ONLY when they heard the burr of the electric patrol wagon and the warning of its gongs, did Fellowes recover his sensitiveness.

He said then in a horrible voice, "It's the wagon, Phil!"

Dilling nodded; he sat up straight and ironed out his face as one does who prepared for a good appearance.

"They're ringing the door bell and they're breaking the lock, Phil!" came Fellowes' voice. "Listen, they're on the stairs now. O, Phil, let me loose!"

"Keep your mouth shut."

The door from the hall was swung open and a short, stocky man, who had the appearance of dressing hastily after being in bed, jumped in first. His quick blue eyes swerved about like a searchlight on a battleship.

"What's going on here?" he growled. "I'm the inspector."

Two other men in plain clothes and a uniform strolled in after him.

"Listen, inspector," began Fellowes.

"Don't you listen to him," Dilling exclaimed. "He's the one who did it. He killed him."

"Killed who?" asked the police inspector, wiping his mouth with the back of a red haired fist.

"Mace—the banker!"

The other plain clothes men uttered exclamations.

"Keep still," said their superior gruffly. He was staring at Dilling with a scowl—the scowl given to all those, innocent or guilty, who are involved by crime. "Go on, you!" He pointed at Dilling, "What do you know?"

"I'm an ex-convict, inspector," said the other. "I came here tonight to get help and a new start from an old friend—this man. He said for me to come up and talk to Mr. Mace, who was charitable. Well, I did. Mr. Mace had gone to bed but he got up and stood in that door there and talked to me and he refused to help me. He told this man—who is his secretary—and used to be my friend a good many years ago, that he had no business waking him up for anything like that. He talked harsh. There were strong words used and I got frightened. I started going down the stairs. I called out once and said, 'Thornton, this will only get me in trouble.' Then this man Fellowes came out and came down the stairs with me and suddenly he said, 'Wait a minute. No man can call me that—even Mr. Mace,' and he went back and I heard shots. I've just got through a long term, inspector, and I don't want any trouble. I was tempted to run, but instead I went back."

The inspector said, "Go on."

Dilling was breathing hard; he was doing a wonderful piece of acting.

"Yes, sir. I went back and here on the table I found one revolver—the one I've got in my hand now."

"Give to to me," the officer said. Dilling put it in his hand.

"I found that revolver and I saw smoke coming out from that bedroom and then Fellowes came out and he said, 'I've killed Mace,' and I said 'Throw up your hands.' Then I bound him into that chair and telephoned you. That's all."

No protest had come from the victim. He looked back and forth from Dilling's face to the inspector's face and back again with a curious blank, stupefied expression, as if the weight of misfortune carried its own anesthetic to soften its devastating shock.

The inspector turned toward his men and raised a silencing hand. Then he pointed toward Dilling.

"Arrest him," he said. "Put the bracelets on. He may be a nut and may be worse. He talks like a crazy man."

Dilling gave forth a cry of rage. "What's this for," he whined, shaking the gleaming steel on his wrists. "What have I done? What's the charge against me?"

A LITTLE flicker of a smile was on Thornton Fellowes' face—a little cynical but sad and patient smile. He rose from the chair from which the uniformed man had cut him loose, and stretched his body painfully.

"Well, what have you got to say?" the inspector demanded of him.

"I'm Mr. Mace's private secretary," Fellowes answered. "There is a great deal in this man's actions which I cannot explain."

"There's no charge against me!" Dilling bellowed.

"Oh, yes there is," replied Fellowes. "Just put your hand into his inside coat pocket, inspector."

The officer made a quick dab. He

Thirty Priceless Minutes With Luther Burbank

By Alice Logan Wingo.

THE little great man was standing at his garden gate to greet us. You say: "W-a-i-t a minute! How did you get to the garden gate? And how did he know you were coming; or, knowing it, why did he not make good his escape?"

Oh, yes, that! I'll tell you. We were studying in the University of California, and our very courageous and persuasive chaperon-manager, Mrs. C. M. Moyers, wrote and told Mr. Burbank that we had come across the continent; that we were a group of Georgia teachers who wanted to know things; and, of all the wonders of California, he was the one we most longed to see "close up;" and, by some good favor of "all the gods there be," we were not refused. Mrs. Burbank answered the letter most courteously, saying that Mr. Burbank was just out of the sanitarium and was seeing very few people, and that his time is now priceless beyond all possible computation, but he would see us for a little while, if we would come early in the morning of a day she designated.

So, on that cool California July morning, we set out on our sacred pilgrimage, motoring from Berkeley, crossing an arm of the bay, and reaching Santa Rosa after a 50-mile drive. And he was standing at the gate of his garden, under the plain signboard marked "Private," adjoining his modest little office with the name Luther Burbank above the door, and across the road from his home—a comfortable looking, but perfectly unostentatious, buff-colored, cement, two-story, square house. All this we noticed afterwards. At first we saw nothing but the little gray man—with gray clothes and gray hair—smiling a pleasant welcome. We had known how great he was, but we had not known how kind.

With gentle manner, but with a grace quite courtly, he admitted us into his garden, which he told us was his playground. His farms are several miles away. He invited us to walk freely among the rows of flowers; but, of course, we wanted to keep close to him, not to miss a word of his pleasant, easy, natural talk of this and of that. The first flower he called our attention to was the gladiolus, which he pronounced glad-i-o-lus. He had many varieties, exquisite in color, tints and markings. It is a flower he likes very much. The larkspurs were beautiful beyond expectation; they looked like clusters of dainty little roses. His handsome white agapanthus was very striking. We had seen only the blue, which grows freely in northern California. His Mexican poppy is different from the ordinary yellow California poppy, though resembling it in color and formation. His, however, has been brought to the unpoppy-like state of lasting a week in water after it is plucked. The poets can no longer say:

"For pleasures are like poppies spread;
You grasp the flower; the bloom is shed—"

MR. BURBANK gathered a handful and presented one to each of us. Then we came to a large-spreading cactus plant. We were interested in what he has done with cacti, and he explained something of the process of eliminating the spines by years of planting and selection and rejection, and all that. Then he took out his plain pocket knife and peeled a cactus fruit and gave each of us a delicious bite. I observed that he uses his pocket knife quite like an ordinary man. One would naturally expect to see him girded about the loins with a belt of all varieties of pruning scissors, each for a different plant! But, not so. A knife serves every purpose. He is so simple and natural. Can afford to be! He laid his cheek quite caressing on the cactus almost spineless stem, apparently pleased that he has rendered it harmless.

Not wanting to tire him, we made several offers to take our leave, but each time he detained us in a friendly, neighborly fashion to have a look at this or that. We must see the sensitive plants in the greenhouse. Here it was we noticed how he loves to play with his flowers. He seemed to take a quite boyish pleasure in seeing the leaves close up at his touch and open again in six minutes.

He warned us in passing the monkey puzzle tree, not to get torn in its prickly leaves. Then we must look under the cedar of Lebanon to see how pleasant a shade it affords. More than a hundred people could take their lunch under its branches—a perfect little tent it seemed inside. He cut for each of us a spray and a little cone from this beautiful cedar. Then there was the big walnut tree in the midst of the garden. It might have been a century old, judging from its size, but he told us that he had grown it in eleven years. "And if any of you can put your arms around it," he said, "I will give it to you." He crushed a leaf in his hand to get the smell of it, and each of us was given a leaf. Then we said we positively must go. Mrs. Burbank had joined us at the door of the shop where we saw his simple garden tools in orderly array; and they now crossed the road with us to the house where he obligingly submitted to having his picture taken, as he had done in the garden; and, as we drove away, we saw him being quite thoroughly hugged and kissed by a young girl, his niece we were told, who had come to welcome him back from the hospital.

turn for a substantial sum, said to be $25,000.

Little Hilda Moreno, upon whom Mr. Gallagher lavished attention, was perhaps content to part with his jokes also. Everybody expected she was to be the second Mrs. Gallagher. But when the second marriage came the bride was Miss Anne Luther.

Mr. Gallagher, also, has been taught the high cost of being funny off the stage.

The Yellow Spider

woman would prove a lure to draw Peter into the jungle, where he could do away with him.

Accordingly, Koyala met Grace on her morning walk the next day, led her to a point where Ah Sing's ruffians lay in wait, then saw that she was delivered into the hands of the Chinaman.

When Grace was missed from the fort the best scouts in Peter's organization were put on the trail, which they followed to the sea. It was agreed at once that she had been taken to Ah Sing's secret lair, and that Koyala had something to do with her disappearance was generally suspected, as the priestess had not been seen about Bulungan for more than a day. Even Peter was forced to admit that Koalya might have had a hand in the affair, but he insisted that if she had she would return to the cause for which he was working as soon as she had time to think things over.

When the efforts of the scouts had been exhausted men were sent out to bring in such natives as might be intimidated into telling where Ah Sing's hiding place was and how it might be reached. But though they brought in many men they got no information, and Peter was becoming desperate. He was in council with the governor general when Captain Carver entered the room.

"There's a procession of Dyaks coming in from the jungle," he announced. "The first man looks to me like Lkath."

"Lkath of the hill Dyaks?" Peter Gross cried incredulously.

"Yes."

"My blood brother!" the resident exclaimed. Without so much as a by-your-leave he fled the room and hastened to the gate.

There were ten Dyaks in the advancing group. Peter Gross met them at the gate. As he and Lkath met there was a simultaneous greeting of "Salaamat!" They stepped forward and rubbed noses, Peter Gross bending to put himself on a level with the redoubtable little chieftain of the hills.

"It has come to our ears that the Yellow Spider is spreading a net for thee. We have come to offer our aid," Lkath announced simply.

"I knew that when the word was brought thee, thou wouldst come, blood brother," Peter Gross responded. "Was it Woyala who brought thee word?"

Lkath hesitated. "The Argus Pheasant has not been in the country of my tribe for many moons," he replied.

Peter Gross sensed an evasion. He knew Lkath's loyalty to him, but he also knew the chief's reverence for the priestess. Lkath would not betray Koyala. That he knew her whereabouts was probable, and that he did not disclose it was ominous. It could only mean one thing—Koyala had gone over to the camp of the enemy.

"Come within," Peter Gross invited. "His excellency, the great white father of Batavia, is here. I want you to meet him."

Until late that night Peter Gross, Captain Carver and the hill Dyak chieftain, Lkath, studied their strategy. Lkath stated that he knew the location of Ah Sing's lair, and, although he could not point it out, since a map was unintelligible to him, he gave his auditors an approximate idea of its whereabouts. He described in particular the difficulties of access, since the city stood in the midst of a vast jungle-walled swamp, traversed by only a few roads, all of which were easily defended.

CHAPTER XIV.

TWO huge Tibetans, Ah Sing's slaves, brought Grace Coston into the dimly lighted room of the long house, where the Yellow Spider brooded and spun his webs. The Chinaman's eyes gleamed when he saw the beauty of his capture.

"This is the maid?" he asked gutturally.

"This is the maid," Koyala repeated. Having spoken she glided through the door.

Grace had no real fear of what might befall her. Her hypothesis was that Ah Sing had learned in some way, through his agents, that she was possessed of wealth and had sent out an expedition to capture her in the hope of gaining a large ransom. Confident that Peter Gross would ere long effect her rescue she had decided to temporize and bargain with the Chinaman, and create delays until the resident should have time to act. Thus she had entered the room with an air of assurance and confidence that was almost jauntiness.

The silence was suddenly shattered by the same accents she had heard before.

"You him Peter Gross' wlifee?" a voice sounded from the gloom.

"I am no man's wife," she retorted sharply.

Grace was not sure, but she thought she perceived the Chinaman's jowls expand with a grin.

"Him Peter Gross' swleetheart?" the deep voice rumbled again.

"Mr. Gross is merely an acquaintance," Grace returned, biting her lips to restrain her indignation.

The Chinaman considered this a moment. Grace felt his curious, appraising eyes upon her again, studying every line and feature, as though she were a horse on the block.

"What ransom will you require?" she asked. Her own voice sounded strange to her. The words had come from her mouth unbidden, for she was eager to flee this place and rid herself of the Chinaman's loathsome presence.

"What ransom?" The words came slowly and gutturally. There was a significant pause. Grace felt those terrible eyes upon her, reading her very soul.

"You muchee pletty girl," the deep voice rumbled. "You worth big ransom. You worth ransom him Peter Gross' nails. Savvy?"

"Peter Gross' nails?" Grace echoed vaguely, wondering what the Chinaman meant.

"Him finger nails, him toe nails," Ah Sing explained placidly. "You wlitee him come to Padang Batu of Sabaya. Come alone. Savvy?"

"I'll never write such a letter," Grace gasped, her heart chilling with horror as she grasped what the Chinaman purposed.

The Prince of Wales Is a Courageous Horseman.

is the French fighter, and of Carpentier Jennie declared:

"Georges has a lovely personality. He is more like a social entertainer than a fighter. He is so quiet, and never drinks. For instance, we were out with him one night and all he had was milk. That was when he was not in training, too. His wife is lovely, and his little girl speaks English as well as she does French."

The Spanish ruler's greatest prowess appears to be as a motorist. In her enthusiasm for him as a speeder, Jennie squealed:

"When he gets into his Hispano, you can't stop him. I tell you, you simply can't stop him, and he uses no judgment whatever!"

Their French manager, Georges Baud, told us how the twins used to leave Paris at midnight, arriving in Deauville at three in the morning to remain until five in the afternoon, when they returned to be at the theater by eight.

"I would have killed them, but I didn't know it," he lamented.

M. Baud paid tribute to the girls' courage when telling of how they received the news of their mother's death. The cable reached them at noon, and at half-past two they went on for repetition generale, which is even more trying than an ordinary performance, as it corresponds to our special dress rehearsals when the press is invited.

"Mrs. Dolly was a very nice woman," the kindly Frenchman told us, "and quite a young mother. The twins' grief was pathetic."

Not in the Testimony

drew forth from the bottom of the pocket a beautiful long rope of pearls.

"They were the property of Mrs. Mace!" said Fellowes sadly. "When this man came and asked to see me tonight, he first covered me with two revolvers and brought me upstairs and fired twice over my head and tied me into this chair and then his search revealed these pearls. They are worth enough — well — enough to tempt any poor devil. You ought to hand them over to the executor of the estate, inspector. I'm glad to get them out of my care." He added with a little mocking laugh, "I heard a man say once that relief from temptation is like a cure of the leprosy."

The inspector said, "That's right, Mr. Fellowes. I didn't know you were the one in charge here."

Dilling, wild eyed, thrashed about.

"Don't you listen to him, inspector!" he screamed. "He's slick! Just look in that bedroom."

The officer opened the door and stared about.

"The body! On the bed!" shouted Dilling.

"Whose body? There's nothing on the bed."

"The banker—Mr. Mace!"

"What ails you?" replied the inspector. "You don't read the local papers? Mr. Christopher Mace, the banker, sailed yesterday for London."

And Mr. Fellowes' eyes, meeting those of Dilling as he passed between two officers of the law, were patient and sad—the eyes of a wheel horse—the eyes of a man who has a little home somewhere with a wife and a daughter of seventeen and a boy and, at last, is delivered from temptation.

There is no binding or pressure of any kind, but surely and rapidly its action gives such amazing results that you'll hardly believe it.

Our Plan Brings You this Amazing Girdle at the Remarkable Low Price of $4.98

That is all you pay! We have made the price within the reach of every woman just to introduce this remarkable new reducing girdle. We want you to try it so that you'll recommend it to all your friends. The reducing girdle is made from pure para rubber covered on outside with fine mercerized cotton. It has a feature no other girdle of this kind has. As soon as the reducing girdle reduces the flesh, there is an adjustment which allows you to tighten up the girdle so that it will continue to work efficiently. It also has stocking supporters.

MADAME BESS

REDUCING GIRDLE

Absolutely Guaranteed

So certain are we that this reducing girdle will please you that we make this unqualified guarantee. If you find that this girdle is not satisfactory in every way, you may return it after examination and every penny of your money will be refunded. Surely with this guarantee there is no reason why you should not take advantage of our offer NOW!

Reduce Your Bust

This wonderful bust reducer acts on the tissues of the bust just as our reducing girdle acts on the waist and hips. It sares the same guarantee on I is priced very low at $3.98. Send no money, only give us your name and address, and measurements at A, B and C (see sketch at right). This bust reducer is made of the very finest materials, lined with the pure para rubber and the price we make on it will not last long. The quantity is limited so send your order in right NOW.

$3.98

HOW TO MEASURE

Do not send a penny. Just send us your name and address and your measurements as indicated on the sketch at the left. That is, send measurements at A B C D and E. If you want the bust reducer just send measurements at A B and C. We will send you the garment you choose and you pay the postman on arrival, price of garment plus few cents postage. This offer will not long be continued at this price so take advantage of it now—and send your order in immediately.

Why Don't You Reduce?

Aren't you tired of being called fat? Aren't you tired of being made fun of, tired of being unable to do the things that slender people do?

Then here is what you are looking for—a simple, pleasant, method of reducing—Marmola Prescription Tablets. Just take one of these tablets after each meal and at bedtime and almost immediately your fat will begin to disappear. In a short time you will be as slender as you want to be.

Don't endanger your health by staying fat. Go to your druggist and ask for a box of Marmola Prescription Tablets, or, if you prefer, send one dollar to the Marmola Co., 1795 General Motors Bldg., Detroit, Mich., and a box will be sent postpaid. Then try them. See how quickly they make you slender—without tiresome exercises or starvation diets. Eat anything you want. Marmola Tablets will make you slender! Get your box and start today.

No. 1—Marry in Haste and Repent at Leisure

By JANE CORBY

Young Miss Coon lived in a tree,
As plump a coon as you'd want to see.

And far on the other side of the wood,
In a briery patch, as rabbits should,

A gay young bunny lived happily
Till young Miss Coon he chanced to see.

"Oh, sweet Miss Coon, I would give my life,"
Said he, "if you'd only be my wife!"

"Why, Mr. Bunny!" Miss Coon replied,
"This is SO sudden!" And then she sighed.

But she privately thought that Mr. Bunny
Was handsome, though his ears WERE funny.

So they married in haste, and paid their fee,
And together they strolled off happily.

"I've a cozy home," Mr. Bunny said,
"Come share it, now that we are wed."

At the brier path he paused with pride,
And ushered in his lovely bride.

But the briers were sharp, and pricked, she said,
And she was afraid to lift her head.

And lettuce leaves, though green and rare,
She thought were rather scanty fare.

So daily she grew thinner and thinner,
And longed for fat green frogs for dinner.

At last poor Bunny said, "My dear,
You'll soon entirely disappear!

"Suppose we live your way a while,
Now that we've given mine a trial."

So they moved away to the hollow tree,
Where Miss Coon's old home used to be.

But the home high up in the hollow tree
Made the bunny as dizzy as he could be.

And he couldn't eat frogs, although he tried,
So he quarreled bitterly with his bride.

You see, they had married in too much haste!
And neither could bear the other's taste!

LEARN HOW TO MAKE AND FLY A MODEL AIRPLANE

Mr. Terence Vincent, director of the miniature aircraft fliers, has taught hundreds of boys and girls how to build and fly model planes, from the very simple type he tells about here to the most complicated kinds. "Anybody who can whittle," says Mr. Vincent, "can make a good model airplane."

Mr. Vincent is a charter member of the National Aeronautic Association of the United States and for several years has represented the Chicago Postmaster in aeronautics. So while he tells you how to make a model plane, he also tells you something about the principles of flying real airplanes. Some of his model aigplane builders, on growing up, have learned to fly regular planes.

Clip the six lessons, of which this is the first, and you'll have complete, exact directions for making one of the best types of planes. If you have any questions to ask, write Mr. Vincent, 746 Monadnock block, Chicago, Illinois.

This miniature plane will be ten inches long and twelve inches wide, powered with two ordinary rubber bands No 32. (or any rubber bands available that are not more than 1-8 inch wide). It will fly from 5 to 60 seconds.

A sharp knife (or mounted safety razor blade) and a 5-inch piece of broomstick with two phonograph steel needles in the center of the end for use in bending wire, are the only tools needed.

Follow Directions

Each operation should be done exactly to begin with; then experiments may be in order to make the parts thinner or thicker, longer or shorter, lighter or heavier. Some planes have a half dozen propellers and as many different wings and motors—each combination on the same motor base will give different results, opening unlimited fields for the aero investigator. Make this first airplane according to dimensions here given. Make it fly. Then let your inventive genius run freely, always under your thoughtful control.

Materials Needed

Materials needed in making this airplane, which we will call "Lahann Number 1," are easy for any whittler to get. Here is the list:

Bamboo (for the wing, motor base, rudder and elevator).

White pine, basswood or poplar, (for the propeller).

2 rubber bands (No. 32 for the motor).

2 thin rubber bands (to hold wing and elevator to motor base).

3 ordinary straight pins about 1¼ inches long (for hangers and bearings).

Small glass or metal bead (for propeller bearings).

Tissue paper (for wing, fin, elevator).

Airplane cement, or glue.

Thin silk thread.

An engineering student in the university of Illinois made a miniature airplane weighing 5-1000 of one ounce. It flew 68 seconds indoors and 195 seconds outdoors. It is the correct relationship of the power, areas and weight rather than the size that begets airplane performance. If a beginner flies this homemade airplane 3 to 10 seconds in the first month, it will be good performance.

Wings Vary

The airplane wings vary in proportion from a length twelve times the width down to a length that is five times the width. The "Lahann No. 1" wing is 12 inches long and 2 inches wide, made as follows:

Two bamboo strips 1-16 inch wide and 1-16 inch thick a foot long are laid parallel with the glossy side of the bamboo down and 1 7-8 inches apart on a table or other flat, firm surface. The bump in the bamboo should be the center of each 12-inch bamboo wing strip.

Four clear bamboo braces, each 1-16 inch by 1-16 inch by 1 7-8 inches long, are placed at the ends of the wing edges (12 inch strips) and at points 4 inches from each end, dividing the wing into three equal oblongs 2 inches by 4 inches. While these four braces and the two wing edges are flat in place, with the glossy side of the bamboo down, apply two drops of glue (or airplane cement) at each end of each brace where it joins the edges. Do not touch the bamboo with the stick or brush with which the cement is applied.

Apply Glue

When the cement is thoroughly dry (15 minutes if near heat) turn the glossy side of the bamboo up, apply a thin layer of glue or airplane cement to all edges and braces, then apply the tough tissue paper carefully to one long edge of the wing, pressing it down on to the glue firmly. Then stretch the tissue paper across the braces, pressing it down on the two middle braces first, then along the other edges, being careful at all times to pull the wrinkles out in order to leave a smooth wing surface. This is the underside of the wing as it flies.

The tissue paper is cut off by means of sandpaper or a sharp edge applied to the four edges of the wing, with a downward motion only when the papered side is up.

DO NOT put the tissue paper completely around any wing edge. That adds weight and does no good.

Make Angle

A dihedral angle is that V-shaped angle in an airplane's wing that aids in stabilizing or balancing it from side to side. The ends of the Lahann No. 1 monoplane wing are raised about 3-4 inches higher than the center of the V of this angle, in one of several ways.

The simplest manner is to tie a silk thread to the front center of the wing and attach it to the other front corner, then draw the corners toward each other until each is 3-4 inch higher than the center of the bow, with the paper-side being the convex surface of the wing. Tie the string at that point.

Make Angle Permanent

A permanent wave may be put in this wing by holding it to shape over or against a hot steam or hot water pipe, then taking it away to cool into the right sized bow.

Some bright inventors make the dihedral by putting opposite ends of the wing into the corrugated parts of a radiator. The bow is made by first inserting one end between two humps in the radiator top or side, then pressing the other end of the wing toward the first end, and slipping it between two other radiator humps.

When the dihedral angle is in, the wing is complete, ready to be attached to the motor base by means of a rubber band, as explained later.

The same processes are applied in making the fin and elevator, as will be explained in the next article.

THE SHIP'S CAT

Malta had deserted her ship. She slunk guiltily along alleys, as though she expected to hear a rough sailor voice calling her back to her duty as ship's mascot.

"I don't care," Malta said to herself. "I guess when sailors get tired of the sea they're always talking of some nice little place ashore. I'm sick of looking at water all the time from the deck of a dirty freighter. And that last trip was terrible. I never saw such weather! What's the fun in a trip like that?"

Malta walked down the streets of the pretty little seacoast town, admiring the neat yards and rambling houses. "Kitty, pretty kitty," called a girl's voice coaxingly. Malta was surprised, having all her life been used to sailors. However, she managed to "meow" in a most ladylike manner.

"You're a beautiful cat," admired

FLY YOUR OWN PLANE.

Today on this page you will find the first of six lessons which will show you in detail how to make a model airplane that will really fly. You can work on your plane as the lessons appear, or you can cut them out and clip them together, then make your plane when you have the whole set to go by.

Every boy has on hand the materials for making one of these planes, or he can get them for a few cents. And while you're putting the plane together and studying these lessons you'll learn a lot about how a real airplane works.

When you've finished your plane, practice flying it. You'll probably want to make some chages and improvements as you learn more about it. Then be sure to enter the November 14 National contest of Miniature Aircraft Fliers. On that day simply have three adults watch and time three flights of your plane, then write a letter, with the records signed by the timers, to the Miniature Aircraft Fliers, 746 Monadnock Block, Chicago. The results will be broadcasted by radio, Saturday night, November 22, announcing the winners of each locality, county, state, and the nation. Maybe your plane will set a new record.

A PICTURE PUZZLE.

WHEN THE JOKE WAS ON HARVEY

"But, Harvey," protested Mrs. Fisher, "you know you told Mr. Atkins you'd burn all the leaves on his lawn tonight."

"I know I did." Harvey answered sullenly, "but—but my head aches. I don't want to do it."

"He'll get some one else and you'll lose that money," sighed Mrs. Fisher. "Anyway," she gave in, as usual, "I guess you don't need to do it, if you'll promise to tell him you won't."

"That's fair enough," answered Harvey. "I'll run tell him now." He set off, whistling, with a great deal of pep for a boy with a headache. As a matter of fact, Harvey was planning to play football in Grigg's lot. The boys were choosing up a team and he wanted to get in on it.

"No, Mr. Atkins is not home," answered the new maid at the Atkins house, two blocks away. "He's at the store."

Harvey asked for permission to phone the store, but he received no answer. Evidently something was wrong with their phone, because there was always some one there. "Such rotten luck," muttered Harvey, "but I promised mother to tell him, so I guess I better, or she'll raise an awful fuss."

He went on down town, which was only a fifteen-minute walk. At Mr. Atkins' feed store he found that the phone was, indeed, out of order. Repairmen were working on it then. He found, also, that Mr .Atkins was not there. "He's out playing golf at Edgebrook," one of the men explained. "This is about the last nice weather we'll have, I guess, so he's out there most of the time. Nope, he won't be back at the office. I reckon he won't be home until late."

There was nothing to do, then, but to stick to his promise to his mother and find Mr. Atkins. Edgebrook was a small course on the edge of town. There wasn't any way of phoning out there. Since he'd come this far, he decided, he might just as well walk on out and tell Mr. Atkins he would do the work some other night.

Away Harvey trudged. There was a nice concrete road out to the course, so he didn't notice the long walk. When he got to the first tee he asked the starter if he knew where he'd find Mr. Atkins. "Oh, he played off some time ago. I guess he's about half way around. Better wait until he gets in, if you're set on seeing him."

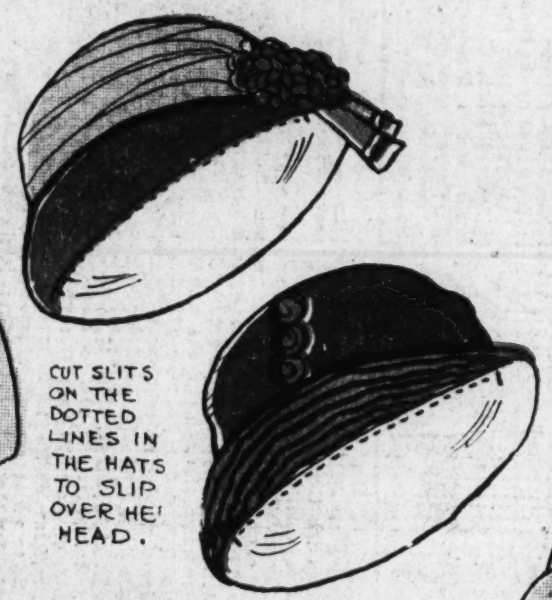

Harvey explained that he really couldn't wait. He set out, circled around the golf course as far as the ninth tee, but he saw no sign of Mr. Atkins. He ventured to stop and ask a man he recognized if he had seen Mr. Atkins. "Oh," was the reply. "Atkins and the bunch he was playing with dropped out after nine holes. They went back around the other way and were going to ride into town. You just missed them."

"Why, Harvey dear," exclaimed Mrs. Fisher, as Harvey dropped down on the back porch. "Where have you been? You look all tired out! Come on in, dear. You're just in time for supper."

IN SNOPPYQUOP LAND WHERE NOTHING SEEMS QUEER

If your beholders are working, why just behold this beautiful bird, as in all likelihood you'll never see one like it again. This is the Dicky bird of Paradise (the pair o'dice are in his coat pocket—you can't see them).

Besides being equipped with earrings, spats and spectacles, this bird has an aeroplane tail and a dress shirt front. The dress shirt front, which is why he is called a Dicky Bird, also gives him the appearance of being somebody important.

He arises at an early hour, and, quite according to the well-known saying, he obtains plenty of worms because he was first on the spot.

GEORGE PFANN TELLS BOYS ABOUT FORWARD PASSING

George Pfann, All - American quarterback, captain of the 1923 Cornell team, and the sensation of eastern football last year, will answer today another question about the game he is master of.

How Can A Man Acquire Accuracy and Deception in Forward Passing?

A man can gain accuracy in forward passing chiefly by practice.

George Pfann has just made a kick. What'll you bet it went right between the posts?

A target should be placed at varying intervals from the passer, and with practice the eye and arm coordinate to pass accurately without the process of thinking. Long passing strengthens the arm, and it also aids in producing speed. If the motion of the arm be perpendicular to the ground in passing and the ball be thrown from above the head, and if the passer steps toward the receiver of the pass, there should be no difficulty in acquiring accuracy.

Practice for Speed.

Speed in adjusting the ball in the hand gives the passer more time to execute the above movements properly, but this speed can be gained only by practice.

To deceive, a man must first learn to grip the ball. The ball must then be adjusted and carried low (as a pitcher does a baseball with a man on base) until ready to throw. The throw must be a snap throw so that as soon as the ball is raised above the head it leaves the hand. Hesitancy telegraphs the direction of the pass.

Passer Keeps Low.

The passer must keep as low as possible (before passing) to confuse and deceive defensive backs. Faking to pass in one direction and passing in another is also deceptive, but it is hard to pick out a receiver by a sudden glance.

(Following the greatest football player, one of the greatest coaches, Knute Rockne of Notre Dame, will answer a football question for the readers of this page next week.)

The Ship's Cat

the young lady. "I wonder where you came from. However, I think I'll not bother to try to find out. I'd like to take you home with me.' She stooped over and picked Malta up and cuddled her in her arms. This seemed most strange to the ship's cat, who was used to being picked up by the scruff of the neck.

Soon Malta found herself in a spotless kitchen, licking some queer tasting stuff out of a saucer. So this was real cream, which she had only heard of. Well, she preferred the canned cream she got on ship board.

Malta drank the cream and then her new owner carried her in and put her on a pillow in the sun. This, thought Malta, was the luxury she had longed for. But it was so stuffy in the room. No clean, fishy smell of the sea.

The girl had gone out of the room. Now she came back with something long and pink in her hands. It proved to be a ribbon which she tied in a big bow around the cat's neck. Malta nearly died of shame. "What if old Sailor Bill would see me now," she thought. "Wouldn't he be disgusted, though! A self-respecting ship's cat with a ribbon around her neck!"

At dusk that night a gray figure stole on the deck of the Sally Anne, which was all ready to sail from the harbor. "Malta's back," called Sailor Bill gaily. "But what's this funny looking string around her neck? Somebody must have tried to drown her!"

ADMITTED IT.

His Father—"So you know as much as your teacher, do you? Where do you get your idea?"

Bobby—"She told me so herself. She said she couldn't teach me nothin'."

Answer to today's picture puzzle: The two well-known stories are "The Silver Skates" and "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

AN ENGINEER'S ADVENTURE WITH A ROBBERY

A fireman at thirteen and an engineer at seventeen—that's the story of the beginning of the railroading career of John E. Mooney, one of the retired engineers on the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad.

Mr. Mooney is an active man of average height, with a very firm jaw and keen eyes that twinkle when he tells the story of his experiences with "the iron horse."

Started In East.

He began railroading in the east in 1863 and in 1867 became a full-fledged engineer. He is proud of the fact that he fired the engine that pulled the train carrying President Lincoln's body from Buffalo to Erie. After the big strike in 1877 he went west and started to work for the Burlington on March 7, 1888. He has been with that company ever since.

"So far as thrilling experiences are concerned," mused Mr. Mooney, "I had only one. But it was very thrilling, all right."

He settled down to tell the story of the adventure which had given him the big thrill of his engineering experience.

Saw Red Lantern.

"It was on the night of August 5, 1902," began Mr. Mooney. "We were speeding on in the dark without any thought of trouble, when we saw a red lantern being waved frantically. My first thought was that there had been a washout, and so I slowed down. When I came to a stop a man jumped on the running board and stuck a gun in my face, and the hole in the barrel looked as though it might be the size of a cannon.

"I said, 'Well, what do you want? If it's money you want, I haven't any'."

Wanted Express.

"The reply was, 'We don't want your money. What we want is the Adams Express. All we want of you is for you to do as we tell you.'

"This was somewhat reassuring, indeed," smiled Mr. Mooney. "They went back and uncoupled the express car from the train, and was directed to move ahead, which I did very promptly. When informed that they were going to blow up the Adams Express company safe, I asked permission to watch the operation, which, to my surprise, was granted, and I stood off with the others while we watched them seal up the safe, then put the charge of nitro-glycerine on the top and touch it off. They made three tries out of it before they succeeded in finally demolishing the safe, and the express car was a sorry looking sight.

Conductor Appears.

"In the meantime the conductor of the train, who had borrowed a revolver from one of the passengers and who was carrying it in his coat pocket, expecting to shoot through his pocket, came running up, and Tom Clark, which was the name of the leader of the gang, stepped up to him and let him look down the barrel of his gun, saying, 'Are you the conductor of this train?'

"Upon receiving an affirmative answer, Tom said, 'Well, you run right on back and take care of the rest of the train,' and his instructions were obeyed without any argument from the conductor. The conductor afterwards told me that he had forgotten he had the revolver.

Robber Is Shot.

"They loaded the booty on the engine, and in doing so one of the robbers was accidentally shot, and while they felt sure that he was dead or would die, they shot him twice more. They weren't taking any chances on his being captured and confessing, you see. Then the fireman and myself were ordered from the engine, and the engine was uncoupled from the express car and they drove off with the engine for about ten miles.

"'We saw a red lantern being waved frantically.'"

Along the way they threw out the man that had been shot.

"By walking back to the station several miles, we finally got word to headquarters and assistance was sent us. The two leaders, the fellow by the name of Tom Clark, and another one by the name of Estrell, were finally captured and were given life sentences in Joliet. Clark has died since then, but Estrell is still living.

Saved His Money.

It wasn't until the next morning, after all the excitement had died down somewhat, that I realized what had really happened, for, although I had told the robbers that I had no money, I had just drawn three hundred dollars which I was going to use toward the purchase of a home, and at the time of the big robbery it was in my vest in the box under the cab seat.

"It was a real experience," finished the veteran engineer, "and I am glad that I had it, but when I think back on it I don't think I would care to go through it again."

(This is one of a series of stories of adventures of engineers. Another one will appear soon.)

HOW LIGHT MAY BE BROKEN UP

(This is the first of a series of science stories which will take up all sorts of queer and interesting facts about the everyday world).

Sunlight, as it comes down to us, is composed practically every colors; it contains practically every color one sees in the rainbow. But these colors, being very much mixed up with one another, lose their individual characteristics and come to our eyes as a composite which we call "white" light.

White Is Broken Up.

It is, however, an easy matter to take a ray of "white" sunlight and separate the various colors of which it is composed. This can be done by means of a triangular glass prism, such as shown in Figure 1 in the drawing above. But before we describe the process it is necessary to know something of the nature of light and its behavior when passing through such substances as glass.

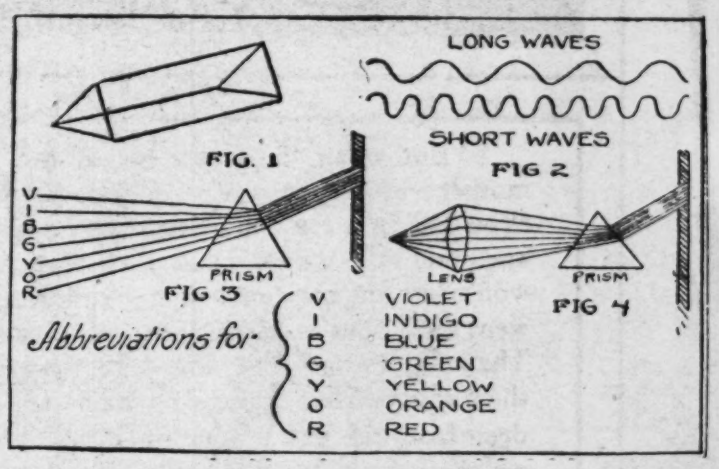

Light of all colors, whether blue or green, yellow or red, is composed of certain very small "waves," as shown in Figure 2; and these waves are of different lengths for the different colors. The waves of violet, blue and indigo light are very short ones, many millions of them being required to make up the length of an inch on an ordinary ruler. The green and yellow waves are somewhat longer and those composing the orange and red are the longest of the group.

Change Their Course.

When, now, a mixture of these rays of light pass obliquely through a glass prism, as shown in Figure 3, they chang their courses of travel; they are deflected, which means turned aside, from their original path, pass through the prism and change their courses again as shown. But the different colors are deflected to an amount depending on their wave lengths; those having the short waves are deflected most, while those possessing the longer waves are deflected less. And so we have each color deflected from its course, separated from the remainder, and traveling a path all its own and striking the white wall in a series of colors known as the spectrum. In the case under consideration, the spectrum is known as the solar spectrum.

If, now, a rounded lens is placed in the path of these colored rays, as shown in Figure 4, the rays will be again condensed and "mixed" and the mixture will again be a "white" light and focused to a point at the rear of the lens.

(Next week we'll learn some curious facts about water.)

Happy Grasshopper was hopping along the woodland path one morning when he saw something that made him stand still in surprise. "Whatever are you doing, Mr. Snake?" he demanded. For there before him Mr. Snake was stretched out on the ground, and as sure as Happy Grasshopper was looking at him, his skin had burst down the back, and he was quivering and trembling all over. "Don't be alarmed," Mr. Snake said, "I'm just changing my skin; I have a new one underneath." Happy sat down to watch, and presently there was Mr. Snake, all in a shining new skin, very bright and pretty, while his old one lay beside him on the ground.

"Well, the snake wasn't any too pleased at the prospect before him, but he decided to do his best to help his friend the owl. So he drank and drank, and then stopped to look, and the marsh was as wet as ever. Then he drank and drank again and stopped to look, and the marsh was as wet as ever. 'Dear me!' exclaimed the snake, and he took a deep breath, and drank and drank and drank and suddenly he felt his skin split down the back. 'Oh, dear, dear, look what I've done!' he cried, 'burst my skin! Help me to fasten it together again.' 'How silly of you to burst your skin,' said the owl. 'My skin never bursts. Come, drink some more and I'll drink, too, but I won't stop to fasten any skin until I get that snipe.'

"But when the owl went to Mrs. Quail the mother refused to part with one of her children 'You live in a tree, and after dark you come down and steal little animals that are asleep,' said she. 'I won't let you have one of my children.' The owl went away, but to himself he said: 'I will have one.' That night when Mrs. Quail was away from home the owl swooped down and stole one of the quail children from the nest. The little quail cried, and the owl pulled his beak to make him stop. Then he lifted the little quail by his feet and carried him away to his nest in the tree. Next day, when the old owl was asleep, the little quail looked at his legs, and saw that they had grown long.

"'That's because the owl pulled them,' he thought. Then he felt of his bill, and found that had grown longer, too. 'That's because the owl pulled it when I cried,' he thought. And then a new thought came to him. 'With my long legs, perhaps I can run away and hide,' was the thought. So he tried it, and as soon as he was out of the tree the owl missed him, but he was blind in the sunlight and he knew it was no use to look for the little quail until dark. 'But he can't get far away; he has short legs,' he comforted himself, and went to sleep. Meanwhile the little quail ran very fast on his long legs and pretty soon he came to a swamp. 'A good place to hide,' he cried, and ran out among the reeds that grew in the water.

"Mr. Snake was very angry, because he had done his best, and still got no thanks, and besides his split skin frightened him. He lay down on the ground, trembling and quivering, and pretty soon, try as he would to keep it on, he felt his old skin falling off. Then he looked down and there was a new skin underneath it, all bright and shining, while the old one lay beside him. 'Well,' said he, 'I've got some reward for my efforts, even if I got no thanks from you, Mr. Owl. You can get your snipe now by yourself, for I'm going home and you need not consider yourself my friend after this.' Then away he went, and every year since he and all other snakes have taken off their old skin and found a new one underneath," concluded Mr. Snake. "That's a good story," said Happy Grasshopper, hopping away.

"Old Mr. Owl came out that night and looked everywhere for the little quail. He looked high and he looked low, and after a while he came to the swamp. There, away out on a rock among the reeds stood the little quail. 'Ha!' cried the owl, 'How shall I get him back?' He saw that the quail's legs and bill had grown longer. 'I made him into a snipe, that's what,' he thought, 'and snipes love marshy places, and they can run through swamps on acccunt of their long legs.' Just then a snake came crawling by. 'Friend Snake,' cried the owl, 'help me to get back the quail that I made into a snipe.' 'How can I help?' asked the snake. 'Drink up all the water in the marsh,' suggested the owl.

"I'm surprised," Happy told him. "I didn't know snakes could change their skins." "They didn't use to be able to," admitted Mr. Snake, "and it's quite an interesting story how it first began." "Oh, will you tell it to me?" cried Happy. "Well, I have a few minutes to spare, I might as well," said Mr. Snake, and the two settled down cozily beside the path. "Long, long ago," began Mr. Snake, "owls and snakes were very friendly. They used to help each other out when it was necessary. At this time it happened that an old owl lived in a tree, all alone, and he was very lonely. 'I will ask Mrs. Quail to let one of her children live with me; she has many,' thought the owl.

SUNDAY SEPTEMBER 21ST, 1924

METROPOLIS OF THE SOUTHLAND AS IT STANDS TODAY

Building developments and new structures which have given Atlanta new prestige as the metropolis of the south are strikingly portrayed in this remarkable aerial photograph by the Irwin Aero-Photo service, of Chattanooga, Tenn., the first aerial picture made of the city since the completion of the Spring street viaduct, which stretches like a great serpent in the foreground. New buildings shown in the picture include the Hurt building annex, the Glenn building, the 101 Marietta street building, the Robert Fulton Hotel and the new store of M. Rich & Bros. company.

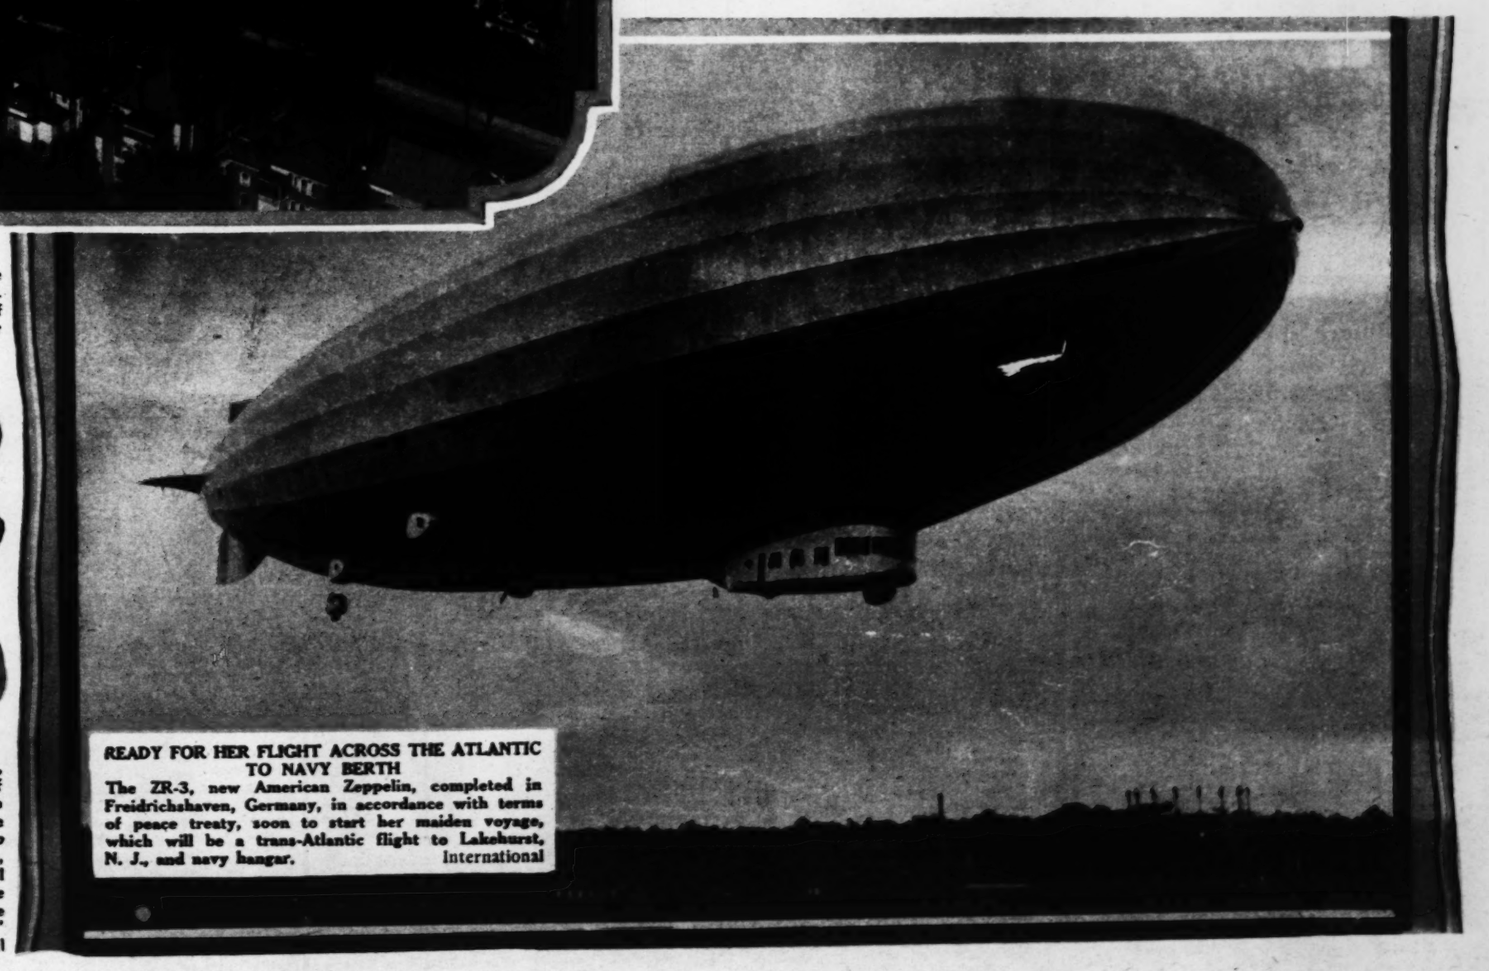

A COSTLY GEM IN A SETTING OF NATURE'S VELVET

The first air photograph made showing the Biltmore hotel as it stands today, the most luxurious hotel in the south. It stands as a monument to southern progress. The picture likens it to a huge diamond, rearing its brilliance out of soft folds of green velvet. Copyrgh Irwin Aero-Photo service

MEDITERRANEAN MOONLIGHT AND THE COLOR OF ITALY are woven into "Tryguevesson," the beautiful estate of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Calhoun, on Pace's Ferry road, just outside of Atlanta. This is the view of this lovely Italian villa from Pace's Ferry road, showing the formal gardens. The upper garden lies just at the foot of the balustrade. Hentz Reid and Adler, Architects Photos by Tracy Mathewson is this painting by Allen Cox, noted son of the famous Kenyon Cox, which greets one entering the drawing room at "Tryguevesson." Just a glimpse is given in this picture of the great chandelier. It, like all of the furniture, was imported from Italy.

A WONDER OF SUNSET SHADES

"THE HALL,"
Another painting by Allen Cox, meets one entering the villa of "Tryguevesson," the Andrew Calhoun estate. It is an allegorical work in green.

Atlanta Constitution,

Gentlemen:

Attention Mr.Holleran

We wish to take this opportunity of expressing our appreciation of the productiveness of your Rotogravure section.

Last Sunday we ran an advertisement featuring Crystal Bath Alcohol as an aid to beauty. We featured the fact that Crystal Bath Alcohol cleanses, refreshes and invigorates the skin, and in this advertisement we inserted a coupon which entitled the reader to a trial size sample of Crystal Bath and a free booklet on facial exercises. The reader was required to send twelve cents in stamps to cover cost of wrapping and mailing.

This advertisement alone produced more than three hundred inquiries, to say nothing of a tremendous increase in sales in Atlanta and throughout the neighboring states. Our client, the John B. Daniel Company, reports that the effect of this advertisement was felt as far up as North Carolina.

When you consider that such a coupon on any product usually produces not more than fifty inquiries, you will realize why we are so well gratified.

With best wishes for your continued success, we remain

Cordially yours,

The Beautiful and Unusual

Ordinary Soaps Cannot Do This For Your Skin!

Here is the test that has converted countless numbers of women to Crystal Bath Alcohol Massage.

First, wash your face, neck and hands with ordinary soap and water. When you think they are clean then go over the skin with a soft rag that has been saturated in Crystal Bath Alcohol.

NOTICE THE DIRT AND GREASE THAT COMES OFF ON THE RAG! When you know the effect of these impurities left in the skin by ordinary soap and water you will understand the reason so many women have poor complexions. You will also know why hundreds of women each day are turning to Crystal Bath.

Try a Crystal Bath Alcohol Massage and feel the refreshing effect. Have the satisfaction of knowing that your skin is clean and free from impurities that cause pimples, blackheads and blemishes. This quick, simple and inexpensive massage is one of the greatest steps to beauty. Your mirror will reflect the delightful improvement that comes with each application.

Slenderness will make you more attractive-

Are you worried because you are overweight? Afraid you are losing your charm, your youthful figure?

Stout women are at a disadvantage. Pretty clothes no longer fit them, their movements are awkward, their attractiveness deserts them. Friends are sympathetic.

But many of these friends have a secret method of keeping slender! They use Marmola Tablets (thousands of men and women each year regain slender figures this way). These tablets will make you slender again, too. Try them. No exercises or diets—just a pleasant, healthful way of becoming slender.

All drug stores have them—one dollar a box. Or they will be sent in plain wrapper, postpaid by the Marmola Co., 1700 General Motors Bldg., Detroit, Mich.
